This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world’s books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that’s often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book’s long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google’s system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google “watermark” you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can’t offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book’s appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google’s mission is to organize the world’s information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world’s books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at http://books.google.com/
A COLLECTION of POEM

A NEW EDITION CORRECTED;

WITH NOTES.

VOL. VI.
A COLLECTION OF POEMS IN SIX VOLUMES.

BY SEVERAL HANDS.

WITH NOTES.

Dodsley, Robert

LONDON:
Printed for J. DODSLEY, in PALL-MALL.
MDCCCLXXXII.
HYMN
TO THE NAIADS.

BY DR. A K E N S I D E .

MDCC XLVI.

Dr. Mark Akenside was born on the 9th of November, 1721, at Newcastle upon Tyne. His father Mark was a butcher of the Presbyterian Sect. He received the first part of his education at the grammar school of Newcastle, and was afterwards instructed by Mr. Wilson, who kept a private academy. Being intended for the office of a Dissenting minister, he was sent at the age of eighteen years to Edinburgh; but, altering his first design, he turned his application to the study of physick, which he afterwards continued at Leyden, where he took his degree of Doctor on the 16th of May, 1744. He first practised in his profession at Northampton, from whence he removed to Hampstead, and afterwards to London. He was chosen Fellow of the Royal Society; became a physician to St. Thomas's Hospital; was admitted by mandamus to the degree of Doctor of Physic in the university of Cambridge; and was elected a Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians in London. Upon the Settlement of the Queen's household he was appointed one of the physicians to her Majesty. He died of a putrid fever June 23, 1770, and was buried at the church of St. James's, Westminster.
ARGUMENT.

The Nymphs who preside over springs and rivulets are addressed at day-break in honour of their several functions, and of the relations which they bear to the natural and to the moral world. Their origin is deduced from the first allegorical deities, or powers of nature; according to the doctrine of the old mythological poets, concerning the generation of the Gods and the rise of things. They are then successively considered; as giving motion to the air and exciting summer-breath; as nourishing and beautifying the vegetable world; as contributing to the fulness of navigable rivers, and consequently to the maintenance of commerce, and by that means to the maritime part of military power. Next is represented their favourable influence upon health, when assisted by rural exercise; which introduces their connection with the art of physic, and the happy effects of mineral, medicinal springs. Lastly, they are celebrated for the friendship which the Muses bear them, and for the true inspiration which temperance only can receive; in opposition to the enthusiasm of the more licentious poets.
HYMN

TO THE

N A I A D S.

O'er yonder eastern hill the twilight throws
Her dusky mantle; and the God of day,
With bright Astarte seated by his side,
Waits yet to leave the ocean. Tarry, Nymphs,
Ye Nymphs, ye blue-eyed progeny of Thames,
Who now the mazes of this rugged heath
Trace with your fleeting steps; who all night long
Repeat, amid the cool and tranquil air,

A 2

Yours.
Your lonely murmurs, tarry: and receive,
My offer'd lay. To pay you homage due,
I leave the gates of sleep; nor shall my lyre
Too far into the splendid hours of morn
Ingage your audience: my observant hand
Shall close the strain ere any sultry beam
Approach you. To your subterranean haunts
Ye then may timely steal; to pace with care
The humid sands; to loosen from the soil
The bubbling sources; to direct the rills
To meet in wider channels, or beneath
Some grotto's dripping arch, at height of noon
To slumber, shelter'd from the burning heaven.

Where shall my song begin, ye Nymphs? or end?
Wide is your praise and copious—First of things,
First of the lonely powers, ere Time arose,
Were Love a and Chaos b. Love, the fire of Fate c;

---Love---

Elder than Chaos.] Hesiod, in his Theogony, gives a different account, and makes Chaos the eldest of beings; though he assigns to Love neither father nor superior; which circumstance is particularly mentioned by Phædrus, in Plato's Banquet, as being observable not only in Hesiod, but in all other writers both in verse and prose; and on the same occasion he cites a line from Parmenides, in which Love is expressly styled the eldest of all the gods. Yet Aristophanes, in The Birds, affirms, that "Chaos, and Night, and Erebus,

' and Tartarus, were first; and that Love was produced from an egg,

't which the fable-winged night deposited in the immense bosom of

"Erebus."
"Erebus." But it must be observed, that the Love designed by this comic poet was always distinguished from the other, from that original and self-existent being the ΘΕΟΝ or ΑΤΑΘΩΝ of Plato, and meant only the ΔΗΜΙΟΥΡΓΟΣ or second person of the old Grecian trinity; to whom is inscribed an hymn among those which pass under the name of Orpheus, where he is called Protoenos, or the first-born, is said to have been born of an egg, and is represented as the principal or origin of all these external appearances of nature. In the fragments of Orpheus, collected by Henry Stephens, he is named Phanes, the discoverer or discoler; who unfolded the ideas of the supreme intelligence, and exposed them to the perception of inferior beings in this visible frame of the world; as Macrobius, and Proclus, and Athenagoras, all agree to interpret the several passages of Orpheus, which they have preserved.

But the Love designed in our text is the one self-existent and infinite mind, whom if the generality of ancient mythologists have not introduced or truly described in accounting for the production of the world and its appearances; yet, to a modern poet, it can be no objection that he hath ventured to differ from them in this particular; though, in other respects, he professeth to imitate their manner and conform to their opinions. For, in these great points of natural theology, they differ no less remarkably among themselves; and are perpetually confounding the philosophical relations of things with the traditionary circumstances of mythic history; upon which very account, Callimachus, in his Hymn to Jupiter, declareth his different from them concerning even an article of the national creed; adding, that the ancient bards were by no means to be depended on. And yet in the exordium of the old Argonautic poem, ascribed to Orpheus, it is said, that "Love, whom mortals in later times call Phanes, was the father of "the eternally begotten Night;" who is generally represented, by these mythological poets, as being herself the parent of all things; and who, in the Indigitamenta, or Orphic Hymns, is said to be the same with Cyprus, or Love itself. Moreover, in the body of this Argonautic poem, where the personated Orpheus introduceth himself singing to his lyre in reply to Chiron, he celebrateth "the obscure memory of Chaos, and the natures which it contained within itself in a state of perpetual vicissitude; how the heaven had its boundary determined; the generation of the earth; the depth of the ocean; and also the sapient Love, the most ancient, the self-sufficient; with all the beings which he produced when he separated one thing from another." Which noble passage is more directly to Aristotle's purpose in the first book of his metaphysics than any of those which he has there quoted, to shew that the ancient poets and mythologists agreed with Empedocles, Anaxagoras, and the other more sober philosophers, in that natural anticipation and common notion of mankind concerning the necessity of mind and reason to account for the connexion, motion, and good order of the world. For, though neither this poem, nor the hymns which pass under the same name, are, it should seem, the work of the real Orpheus; yet beyond all question they are very ancient. The hymns, more particularly, are allowed to be older than the invasion of Greece by Xerxes; and were probably a fest of public and solemn forms of devotion; as appears by a passage in one of them, which Demosthenes hath almost literally cited in his first oration against Aristogitos, as the saying of Orpheus, the founder of their most holy mysteries. On this account, they are of higher authority than any other mythological work now extant, the Theogony of Hesiod himself not excepted. The poetry of them is often extremely noble; and the mysterious air which prevails in them, together with its delightful impression upon the mind, cannot be better expressed than in that remarkable description with which they inspired the German editor Eschenbach, when he accidentally met with them at Leipzig: "Theaurn me reperisse credidi," says he, "& prosecto theaurnum reperti. Incredibile dixi quo me sacro hor-

"
rere afflaverint indigitamenta ipsa deorum: nam et tempus ad illorum lectionem eligere cogebar, quod vel solum horrem horrem incutere animo potest, nocturnum; cum enim totam diem consummerim in contemplatione urbis splendore, & in adeundis, quibus scatet urbs illa, virus doctis; sola nox reflabat, quam Orpheo consecrare potui. In abyssis sum quendam mysteriorum venerandae antiquitatis descendere videam:
bar, quotiescunque silente mundo, solis vigilantibus aphis et luna, μέλατατομεις istos hymnos ad manus sumi:

Milton calls

"The womb of nature."

Love, the first of Fate.] Fate is the universal system of natural causes; the work of the Omnipotent Mind, or of Love: so Minni-lius Felix: "Quid aliud est fatum, quam quod de unoquae nos trum deus fatum est." So also Cicero, in The First Book on Divination:
Fatum autem id appello, quod Graeci ἘΠΜΑΡΜΗΝ; id est, ordinem seriemque causarum, cum causa causae nexitur ex se dignatur—ex quo intelligitur, ut fatum fit non id quod superstitiose, sed id quod physice disiur causa externe rerum." To the same purpose is the doctrine of Hierocles, in that excellent fragment concerning Providence and Destiny. As to the three Fates, or Destinies of the poets, they represented that part of the general system of natural causes which relates to man, and to other mortal beings: for so we are told in the hymn addressed to them among the Orphic Indigitamenta, where they are called the daughters of Night (or Love), and, contrary to the vulgar notion, are distinguished by the epithet of gentle, and tender-hearted. According to Hesiod, Theog. ver. 904, they were the daughters of Jupiter and Themis; but in the Orphic Hymn to Venus, or Love, that Goddess is directly styled the mother of Necessity, and is represented, immediately after, as governing the three Destinies, and conducting the whole system of natural causes.

A 4

Eld o
Elder than Chaos. Born of Fate was Time,
Who many sons and many comely births
Devour'd, relentless father: 'till the child
Of Rhea drove him from the upper sky,
And quell'd his deadly might. Then social reign'd

Born of Fate was Time.] Cronos, Saturn, or Time, was, according to Apollodorus, the son of Coelum and Tellus. But the author of the hymns gives it quite undisguised by mythological language, and calls him plainly the offspring of the earth and the starry heaven; that is, of Fate, as explained in the preceding note.

Who many sons devour'd.] The known fable of Saturn devouring his children was certainly meant to imply the dissolution of natural bodies; which are produced and destroyed by Time.

The child of Rea.] Jupiter, so called by Pindar.

Drove him from the upper sky.] That Jupiter dethroned his father Saturn, is recorded by all the mythologists. Phurnutus, or Cornutus, the author of a little Greek treatise on the nature of the gods, informs us, that by Jupiter was meant the vegetable soul of the world, which restrained and prevented those uncertain alterations which Saturn, or Time, used formerly to cause in the mundane system.

Social reign'd.] Our mythology here supposeth, that before the establishment of the vital, vegetative, plastic nature (represented by Jupiter), the four elements were in a variable and unsettled condition; but afterwards well-disposed and at peace among themselves. Tethys was the wife of the Ocean; Ops, or Rhea, the Earth;
The kindred powers, Tethys, and reverend Ops,
And spotless Vesta; while supreme of sway
Remain'd the cloud-compeller. From the couch
Of Tethys sprang the sedgy-crowned race\(^1\),
Who from a thousand urns, o'er every clime,
Send tribute to their parent; and from them
Are ye, O Naiads\(^k\): Arethusa fair,
And tuneful Aganippe; that sweet name,
Vesta; the eldest daughter of Saturn, Fire; and the cloud-compeller,
Or zeis ἀεροφιέτης, the Air; though he also represented the plastic principle of nature, as may be seen in the Orphic hymn inscribed to him.

\(^1\) The sedgy-crowned race.] The river-gods; who, according to Hesiod's
Theogony, were the sons of Oceanus and Tethys.

\(^k\) From them, are ye, O Naiads.] The descent of the Naiads is less certain than most points of the Greek mythology. Homer Odysse. xiii. τήν Ἕδη Αέας. Virgil, in the eighth book of the Æneid, speaks as if the Nymphs, or Naiads, were the parents of the rivers, but in this he contradicts the testimony of Hesiod, and evidently departs from the orthodox system, which representeth several nympha as retaining to every single river. On the other hand, Calimachus, who was very learned in all the school-divinity of those times, in his hymns to Delos, maketh Peneus, the great Thessalian river-god, the father of his nympha:
and Ovid, in the fourteenth book of his Metamorphoses, mentions the Naiads of Latium as the immediate daughters of the neighbouring river gods. Accordingly, the Naiads of particular rivers are occasionnally, both by Ovid and Statius, called by a patronymic, from the name of the river to which they belong.

With
With Syrian Daphne\(^1\); and the honour'd tribes
Belov'd of Pæon\(^m\). Listen to my strain,
Daughters of Tethys: listen to your praise.
You, Nymphs, the winged offspring\(^n\), which of old
Aurora to divine Astræus bore,
Owns, and your aid beseecheth. When the might
Of Hyperion\(^o\), from his noontide throne,
Unbends their languid pinions, aid from you
They ask: Favonius and the mild South-west
From you relief implore. Your sallying streams\(^p\)
Fresh vigour to their weary limbs impart.

\(^1\) Syrian Daphne.] The grove of Daphne in Syria, near Antioch, was famous for its delightful fountains.

\(^m\) The tribes belov'd by Pæon.] Mineral and medicinal springs. Pæon was the physician of the gods.

\(^n\) The winged offspring.] The Winds; who, according to Hesiod and Apollodorus, were the sons of Astræus and Aurora.

\(^o\) Hyperion.] A son of Cœlum and Tellus, and father of the Sun, who is thence called, by Pindar, Hyperionides. But Hyperion is put by Homer in the same manner as here, for the Sun himself.

\(^p\) Your sallying streams.] The state of the atmosphere with respect to rest and motion is, in several ways, affected by rivers and running streams; and that more especially in hot seasons; first, they destroy its equilibrium, by cooling those parts of it with which they are in contact; and, secondly, they communicate their own motion; and the air which is thus moved by them, being left heated, is of consequence more elastic than other parts of the atmosphere, and therefore fitter to preserve and to propagate that motion.

Again
Again they fly, disporting from their mead
Half-ripen'd and the tender blades of corn,
To sweep the noxious mildew; or dispel
Contagious steams, which oft the parched earth
Breathes on her fainting sons. From noon to eve,
Along the river and the paved brook,
Ascend the cheerful breezes: hail'd of bards
Who, fast by learned Cam, the Mantuan lyre
Sollicit; nor unwelcome to the youth
Who on the heights of Tybur, all inclin'd
O'er rushing Anio, with a pious hand
The reverend scene delineates, broken fanes,
Or tombs, or pillar'd aqueducts, the pomp
Of ancient Time; and haply, while he scans
The ruins, with a silent tear revolves
The fame and fortune of imperious Rome.

You too, O Nymphs, and your unceasing aid
The rural powers consents; and still prepare
For you their grateful treasures. Pan commands,
Oft as the Delian king⁰ with Sirius holds
The central heavens, the father of the grove
Commands his Dryads over your abodes
To spread their deepest umbrage. Well the God
Remembereth how indulgent ye supplied
Your genial dews to nurse them in their prime.

⁰ Delian king.] One of the epithets of Apollo, or the Sun, in the Orphic hymn inscribed to him.

Pales,
Pales, the pasture's queen, where'er ye stray,
Pursues your steps, delighted; and the path
With living verdure clothes. Around your haunts
The laughing Chloris, with profusest hand,
Throws wide her blooms, her odours. Still with you
Pomona seeks to dwell: and o'er the lawns,
And o'er the vale of Richmond, where with Thames
Ye love to wander, Amalthea * pours

* Chloris.] The ancient Greek name for Flora.

* Amalthea.] The mother of the first Bacchus, whose birth and education was written, as Diodorus Siculus informs us, in the old Pelasgic character, by Thymoetes, grandson to Laomedon, and contemporary with Orpheus. Thymoetes had traveled over Libya to the country which borders on the western ocean; there he saw the island of Nyfa, and learned from the inhabitants, that "Ammon, king of "Lybia, was married in former ages to Rhea, sister of Saturn and the "Titans; that he afterwards fell in love with a beautiful virgin, "whose name was Amalthea; had by her a son, and gave her pos-

* tion of a neighbouring tract of land, wonderfully fertile; which "in shape nearly resembling the horn of an ox, was thence called "the Hesperian horn, and afterwards the horn of Amalthea; that, "fearing the jealousy of Rhea, he concealed the young Bacchus, "with his mother, in the island of Nyfa;" the beauty of which, Diodorus describes with great dignity and pomp of style. This fable is one of the noblest in all the ancient mythology, and seems to have made a particular impression on the imagination of Milton; the only modern poet (unless perhaps it be necessary to except Spenser) who, in these mysterious traditions of the poetic story, had a heart to feel,
Well-pleas'd the wealth of that Ammonian horn,
Her dower; unmindful of the fragrant isles
Nyssæan or Atlantic. Nor canst thou,
(Albeit oft, ungrateful, thou dost mock
The beverage of the sober Naiad's urn,
O Bromius, O Lenæan) nor canst thou
Disown the powers whose bounty, ill repaid,
With nectar feeds thy tendrils. Yet from me,
Yet, blameless Nymphs, from my delighted lyre,
Accept the rites your bounty well may claim;
Nor heed the scoffings of the Edonian band.

Far better praise awaits you. Thames, your fire,
As down the verdant slope your duteous rills
Descend, the tribute stately Thames receives,
Delighted; and your piety applauds;
And bids his copious tide roll on secure,
For faithful are his daughters; and with words
Auspicious gratulates the bark which, now feel, and words to express, the simple and solitary genius of antiquity.

To raise the idea of his Paradís, he prefers it even to

—— "that Nyssæan isle

"Girt by the river Triton, where old Cham
"(Whom Gentiles Ammon call, and Libyan Jove)
"Hid Amalthea, and her florid son,
"Young Bacchus, from his stepdame Rhea's eye."

* Edonian band.] The priests esses and other ministers of Bacchus;
so called from Edonius, a mountain of Thrace, where his rites were celebrated.
His banks forfaking, her adventurous wings
Yields to the breeze, with Albion's happy gifts
Extremest isles to bless. And oft at morn,
When Hermes, from Olympus bent o'er earth
To bear the words of Jove, on yonder hill
Stoops lightly-failing; oft intent your springs
He views: and waving o'er some new-born stream
His blest pacific wand, "And yet," he cries,
"Yet," cries the son of Maia, "though recluse
And silent be your stores, from you, fair Nymphs,
Flows wealth and kind society to men.
"By you my function and my honour'd name
"Do I possess; while o'er the Boetic vale,
"Or through the towers of Memphis, or the palm
"By sacred Ganges water'd, I conduct
"The English merchant: with the buxom fleece
"Of fertile Ariconium while I clothe
"Sarmatian kings; or to the household Gods
"Of Syria, from the bleak Cornubian shore,
"Dispense the mineral treasure, which of old

[When Hermes.] Hermes, or Mercury, was the patron of commerce;
in which benevolent character he is addressed by the author of Indig-
taments, in these beautiful lines:

"Εὐρῳθιαν, χαϊδαζόντος, λυπιμέθ'ομαι,
"Ο: χειρίτων Εὐρίνις ἐρημὸν ἀβατέσ.

[Dispence the mineral treasure.] The merchants of Sidon and Tyre made frequent voyages to the coast of Cornwall, from whence they car-rried home great quantities of tin.

"Sidonian
"Sidonian pilots fought, when this fair land
Was yet unconscious of those generous arts
Which wise Phœnicia from their native clime
Transplanted to a more indulgent heaven."

Such are the words of Hermes: such the praise,
O Naiads, which from tongues celestial waits
Your bounteous deeds. From bounty issueth power:
And those who, sedulous in prudent works,
Relieve the wants of nature, Jove repays
With generous wealth and his own seat on earth,
Fit judgments to pronounce, and curb the might
Of wicked men. Your kind unfailing urns
Not vainly to the hospitable arts
Of Hermes yield their store. For, O ye Nymphs,
Hath he not won the unconquerable queen
Of arms to court your friendship? You she owns
The fair associates who extend her sway
Wide o'er the mighty deep; and grateful things
Of you she uttereth, oft as from the shore
Of Thames, or Medway's vale, or the green banks
Of Veṣṭa, she her thundering navy leads

\[ Ha'ib be not won.\] Mercury the patron of commerce, being so greatly dependent on the good offices of the Naiads, in return obtains for them the friendship of Minerva, the goddess of war:
for military power, at least the naval part of it, hath constantly followed the establishment of trade; which exemplifies the preceding observation, that "from bounty issueth power."

To
To Calpe's foaming channel, or the rough
Cantabrian coast; her auspices divine
Imparting to the senate and the prince
Of Albion, to dismay barbaric kings,
The Iberian, or the Celt. The pride of kings
Was ever scorn'd by Pallas: and of old
Rejoic'd the virgin, from the brazen prow
Of Athens o'er Ægina's gloomy surge,
To drive her clouds and storms; o'erwhelming all
The Persian's promise'd glory, when the realms
Of Indus and the soft Ionian clime,
When Libya's torrid champain and the rocks
Of cold Imaüs join'd their servile bands,
To sweep the sons of liberty from earth.
In vain: Minerva on the brazen prow
Of Athens flood, and with the thunder's voice
Denounce'd her terrours on their impious heads,
And shook her burning Ægis. Xerxes saw:
From Heracleum, on the mountain's height
Thron'd in his golden ear, he knew the sign

Ægina's gloomy surge. [Near this island, the Athenians obtained

Xerxes saw.] This circumstance is recorded in that passage, perhaps the most splendid among all the remains of ancient history, where Plutarch, in his "Life of Themistocles," describes the sea-fights of Artemisium and Salamis.

Coelestial;
Celestial; felt unrighteous hope forsoke
His faltering heart, and turn'd his face with shame.

Hail, ye who share the stern Minerva's power;
Who arm the hand of liberty for war;
And give, in secret, the Britannic name
To awe contending monarchs: yet benign,
Yet mild of nature, to the works of peace
More prone, and lenient of the many ills
Which wait on human life. Your gentle aid
Hygeia well can witness; she who saves,
From poisonous cares and cups of pleasing bane,
The wretch devoted to the entangling snares
Of Bacchus and of Cymon. Him she leads
To Cynthia's lonely haunts. To spread the toils,
To beat the coverts, with the jovial horn
At dawn of day to summon the loud hounds;
She calls the lingering sluggard from his dreams;
And where his breast may drink the mountain breeze,
And where the fervour of the funny vale
May beat upon his brow, through devious paths
Beckons his rapid courser. Nor when ease,
Cool ease and welcome slumbers have becalm'd
His eager bosom, does the queen of health
Her pleasing care withhold. His decent board
She guards, presiding; and the frugal powers
With joy fedate leads in: and while the brown
Ennea-dame with Pan presents her stores;
While changing still, and comely in the change,

Vol. VI. B Vertumnus
Vertumnus and the hours before him spread
The garden's banquet; you to crown his feast,
To crown his feast, O Naiads, you the fair
Hygeia calls: and from your shelving seats,
And grove of poplar, plenteous cups ye bring,
To flake his veins; 'till soon a purer tide
Flows down those loaded channels; washeth off
The dregs of luxury, the lurking seeds
Of crude diseaæ; and through the abodes of life
Sends vigour, sends repose. Hail, Naiads: hail,
Who give, to labour, health; to stooping age,
The joys which youth had squander'd. Oft your urns
Will I invoke; and, frequent in your praise,
Abash the frantic Thrymus with my song.

For not estrang'd from your benignant arts
Is he, the God, to whose mysterious shrine
My youth was sacred, and my votive cares
Are due; the learned Pæon. Oft when all
His cordial treasures he hath search'd in vain;
When herbs, and potent trees, and drops of balm
Rich with the genial influence of the sun,
(To rouze dark fancy from her plaintive dreams,
To brace the nerveless arm, with food to win
Sick appetite, or hush the unquiet breast
Which pines with silent passion) he in vain

Thrymus. A staff, or spear, wreathed round with ivy; of constant use in the bacchanalian mysteries.
Hath prov'd; to your deep mansions he descends.
Your gates of humid rock, your dim arcades,
He entereth; where impurpled veins of ore
Gleam on the roof; where through the rigid mine.
Your trickling rills insinuate. There the God
- From your indulgent hands the streaming bowl
Wafts to his pale-eyed suppliants; wafts the seeds
Metallic and the elemental salts.
Wash'd from the pregnant glebe. They drink; and soon
Flies pain; flies inauspicious care: and soon
The social haunt or unfrequented shade.
Hears Io, Io Pæan; as of old,
When Python fell. And, O propitious Nymphs,
Oft as for hapless mortals I implore,
Your salutary springs, through every urn
O shed selected atoms, and with all
Your healing powers inform the recent wave.
My lyre shall pay your bounty. Nor disdain
That humble tribute. Though a mortal hand
Excite the strings to utterance, yet for themes
Not unregarded of celestial powers,
I frame their language: and the Muses deign
To guide the pious tenour of my lay.
The Muses (sacred by their gifts divine)
In early days did to my wondering sense

\[ d \text{ is } Pæan.\] An exclamation of victory and triumph derived from Apollo's encounter with Python.
Their secrets oft reveal: oft my rais’d ear
In slumber felt their music: oft at noon
Or hour of sunseet, by some lonely stream,
In field or shady grove, they taught me words
Of power from death and envy to preserve
The good man’s name. Whence yet with grateful mind,
And offerings unprofan’d by ruder eye,
My vows I send, my homage, to the seats
Of rocky Cirriha, where with you they dwell:
Where you their chaste companions they admit
Through all the hallow’d scene: where oft intent,
And leaning o’er Caftalia’s mofly verge,
They mark the cadence of your confluent urns,
How tuneful, yielding gratefulrest repose
To their consofted measure: ’till again,
With emulation all the sounding choir,
And bright Apollo, leader of the song,
Their voices through the liquid air exalt,
And sweep their lofty string: those aweful strings,
That charm the minds of Gods: that fill the courts
Of wide Olympus with oblivion sweet
Of evils, with immortal rest from cares;

Cirriha.] One of the summits of Parnassus, and sacred to Apollo. Near it were several fountains, said to be frequented by the Muses. Nyfia, the other eminence of the same mountain, was dedicated to Bacchus.

† Charm the minds of gods.] This whole passage, concerning the effects of sacred music among the gods, is taken from Pindar’s first Pythian ode.
Assuage the terrors of the throne of Jove;
And quench the formidable thunderbolt
Of unrelenting fire. With slacken'd wings,
While now the solemn concert breathes around,
Incumbent o'er the sceptre of his lord;
Sleeps the stern eagle; by the number'd notes,
Possess'd; and satiate with the melting tone:
Sovereign of birds. The furious God of war,
His darts forgetting and the rapid wheels
That bear him vengeful o'er the embattled plain,
Relents, and soothes his own fierce heart to ease,
Unwonted ease. The fire of Gods and man,
In that great moment of divine delight,
Looks down on all that live; and whatsoever
He loves not, o'er the peopled earth, and o'er
The interminated ocean, he beholds
Curs'd with abhorrence by his doom severe,
And troubled at the sound. Ye, Naiads, ye
With ravish'd ears the melody attend
Worthy of sacred silence. But the slaves
Of Bacchus with tempestuous clamours strive
To drown the heavenly strains; of highest Jove,
Irreverent; and by mad presumption fir'd
Their own discordant raptures to advance
With hostile emulation. Down they rush
From Nysa's vine-impurpled cliff, the dames
Of Thrace, the Satyrs, and the unruly Fauns,
With old Silenus, through the midnight gloom
Tossing the torch impure, and high in air
The brandish'd Thyrius, to the Phrygian pipe's shrill voice, and to the clashing cymbals, mix'd
With shrieks and frantic uproar. May the Gods
From every unpolluted ear avert
Their orgies! If within the seats of men,
Within the seats of men, the walls, the gates
Which Pallas rules, if haply there be found
Who loves to mingle with the revel-band
And hearken to their accents; who aspires
From such intruders to inform his breast
With verse; let him, fit votarist, implore
Their inspiration. He perchance the gifts
Of young Lyæus, and the dread exploits,
May sing in aptest numbers: he the fate
Of sober Pentheus, he the Paphian rites,
And naked Mars with Cytherea chain'd,

8 Phrygian pipe's.] The Phrygian music was fantastic and turbulent, and fit to excite disorderly passions.

b Which Pallas rules.] It was the office of Minerva to be the guardian of walled cities; whence she was named ΠΟΛΙΑΣ and ΠΟΛΙΟΤΧΟΣ, and had her statues placed in their gates, being supposed to keep the keys; and on that account called ΚΑΝΟΟΤΧΟΣ.

1 Fate of sober Pentheus.] Pentheus was torn in pieces by the Bacchalian priests and women, for despising their mysteries.
And strong Alcides in the spinster's robe,
May celebrate, applauded. But with you,
O Naiads, far from that unhallow'd rout,
Must dwell the man whose'er to praised themes
Invokes the immortal Muse. The immortal Muse
To your calm habitations, to the cave
Corycian*, or the Delphic mount†, will guide
His footsteps: and with your unfilled streams
His lips will bathe: whether the eternal lore
Of Themis, or the majesty of Jove,
To mortals he reveal; or teach his lyre
The unenvi'd guardian of the patriot's teils,
In those unfading islands of the blest,
Where Sacred bards abide. Hail, honou'd Nymphs;

*The cave Corycian.] Of this cave Pausanius, in his Tenth Book, gives the following description: "Between Delphi and the eminences of Parnassus, is a road to the grotto of Corycium, which has its name from the nymph Corycia, and is by far the most remarkable which I have seen. One may walk a great way into it without a torch. It is of a considerable height, and hath several springs within it; and yet a much greater quantity of water distills from the shell and roof, so as to be continually dropping on the ground. The people round Parnassus hold it sacred to the Corycian nymphs and to Pan."

†Delphic mount.] Delphi, the seat and oracle of Apollo, had a mountainous and rocky situation on the skirts of Parnassus.
Thrice hail. For you the Cyrenaic shell,
Behold, I touch, revering. To my songs
Be present ye with favourable feet,
And all profane audience far remove.

Cyrene was the native country of Callimachus, whose hymns are the most remarkable example of that mythological passion which is assumed in the preceding poem, and have always afforded particular pleasure to the author of it, by reason of the mysterious solemnity with which they affect the mind. On this account he was induced to attempt somewhat in the same manner; solely by way of exercise: the manner itself being now almost entirely abandoned in poetry. And as the mere genealogy, or the personal adventures of heathen gods, could have been but little interesting to a modern reader; it was therefore thought proper to select some convenient part of the history of nature, and to employ these ancient divinities as it is probable they were first employed; to wit, in personifying natural causes, and in representing the mutual agreement or opposition of the corporeal and moral powers of the world: which hath been accounted the very highest office of poetry.
ODE

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE
FRANCIS EARL OF HUNTINGDON.

MDCCXLVII.

BY THE SAME.

I. 1.

THE wise and great of every clime,
Through all the spacious walks of Time,
Where'er the Muse her power display'd,
With joy have listen'd and obey'd.
For, taught of heaven, the sacred Nine
Persuasive numbers, forms divine,
To mortal sense impart:
They beat the soul with glory fire;
They noblest counsels, boldest deeds inspire;
And high o'er Fortune's rage inthrone the fixed heart.

I. 2.
Nor less prevailing is their charm,
The vengeful bosom to disarm;
To melt the proud with human woe,
And prompt unwilling tears to flow.
Can wealth a power like this afford?
Can Cromwell's art, or Marlborough's sword,
An equal empire claim?

No. Hastings. Thou my words wilt own:
Thy breast the gifts of every Muse hath known;
Nor shall the giver's love disgrace thy noble name.

I. 3.
The Muse's awful art,
And the fair function of the poet's tongue,
Ne'er shalt thou blush to honour; to assert
From all that scorned vice or sordid fear hath sung.
Nor shall the blandishment of Tuscian strings
Warbling at will in pleasure's myrtle bower;
Nor shall the baser notes to Celtic kings
By lying minstrels paid in evil hour;
Move Thee to spurn the heavenly Muse's reign.
A different strain,
And other Themes;
From her prophetic shades and hallowed streams
(Thou well canst witness) meet the purged ear
Such, as when Greece to her immortal shell
Rejoicing listen'd, godlike sounds to hear;
To hear the sweet instructress tell

(While
(While men and heroes throng'd around)
How life its noblest use may find,
How best for freedom be resign'd;
And how, by glory, virtue shall be crown'd.

II. 1.
Such was the\(^a\) Chian father's strain
To many a kind domestic train,
Whose pious hearth, and genial bowl,
Had cheer'd the reverend pilgrim's soul:
When, every hospitable rite
With equal bounty to requite,
He struck his magic strings;
And pour'd spontaneous numbers forth,
And seiz'd their ears with tales of ancient worth;
And fill'd their musing hearts with vast heroic things.

II. 2.
Now oft, where happy spirits dwell,
Where yet he tunes his charming shell,
Oft near him, with applauding hands,
The genius of his country stands.
To listening gods he makes him known,
That man divine, by whom were sown
The seeds of Græcian fame:
Who first the race with freedom fir'd;
From whom Lycurgus Sparta's sons inspir'd\(^b\);
From whom Platæan palms and Cyprian trophies came.

\(^a\) Homer.

\(^b\) Lycurgus the Lacedæmonian law-giver brought into Greece from Asia Minor the first complete copy of Homer's works.—At Platea was was fought the decisive battle between the Persian army and the united militia of Greece under Pausanias and Aristides.—Cimon the Athenian erected a trophy in Cyprus for two great victories gained on the same day over the Persians by sea and land. Diodorus Siculus has preserved the inscription which the Athenians affixed to the consecrated spoils after this great success; in which it is very remarkable, that the greatness of the occasion has raised the manner of expression above the usual simplicity and modesty of all other ancient inscriptions. It is this:

Ε.Ω.ΟΤ.Γ. ΕΤΡΩΠΗΝ, ΑΣΙΑΣ. ΔΙΧΑ. ΠΟΝΤΟΣ. ΕΝΕΙΜΕ.
ΚΑΙ. ΠΟΔΕΑΣ. ΘΗΝΤΩΝ. ΘΟΤΡΟΣ. ΑΡΗΣ. ΕΠΕΧΕΙ.
ΟΤΩΝ. ΠΝ. ΤΟΙΟΤΟΝ. ΕΠΙΧΩΝΙΩΝ. ΓΕΝΕΤ. ΑΝΑΡΩΝ.
ΕΡΓΩΝ. ΕΝ. ΗΠΕΙΡΩΝ. ΚΑΙ. ΚΑΤΑ. ΠΟΝΤΟΝ. ΑΜΑ.
ΟΙΔΕ. ΓΑΡ. ΕΝ. ΚΤΙΣΙΝ. ΜΗΔΟΥΣ. ΠΟΛΛΟΥΣ. ΟΛΕΒΑΝΤΕΣ.
ΦΟΙΝΙΚΩΝ. ΕΚΑΤΩΝ. ΝΑΤΩ. ΕΑΩΝ. ΕΝ. ΠΕΛΑΓΕI.
ΑΝΑΡΩΝ. ΠΑΘΟΤΕΣ. ΜΕΓΑ. Δ. ΕΣΤΕΝΕΝ. ΑΣΕΙΣ. ΤΗ. ΆΤΤΩΝ.
ΠΑΝΓΕΙΣ. ΑΜΦΟΤΕΡΑΙΣ. ΧΕΡΙ. ΚΡΑΤΕΙ. ΠΟΛΙΜΟΥ.

The following translation is almost literal:

Since first the sea from Asia's hostile coast
Divided Europe, and the god of war
Affait'd imperious cities; never yet,
At once among the waves and on the shore,
Hath such a labour been achiev'd by men
Who earth inhabit. They, whose arms the Medes
In Cyprus felt pernicious, they, the same,
Have won from skilful Tyre an hundred ships
Crowded with warriors. Asia groans, in both
Her hands fore smitten, by the might of war.
II. 3.

O noblest, happiest age!
When Aristides rul'd, and Cimon fought;
When all the generous fruits of Homer's page
Exulting Pindar saw to full perfection brought.

Pindar was contemporary with Aristides and Cimon, in whom the glory of ancient Greece was at its height. When Xerxes invaded Greece, Pindar was true to the common interest of his country; though his fellow-citizens, the Thebans, had sold themselves to the Persian king. In one of his odes he expresses the great distress and anxiety of his mind, occasioned by the vast preparations of Xerxes against Greece. (Isthm. 3.) In another he celebrates the victories of Salamis, Platea, and Himera. (Pyth. 1.) It will be necessary to add two or three other particulars of his life, real or fabulous, in order to explain what follows in the next concerning him. First, he was thought to be so great a favourite of Apollo, that the priests of that deity allotted him a constant share of their offerings. It was said of him, as of some other illustrious men, that at his birth a swarm of bees lighted on his lips, and fed him with their honey. It was also a tradition concerning him, that Pan was heard to recite his poetry, and seen dancing to one of his hymns on the mountains near Thebes. But a real historical fact in his life is, that the Thebans imposed a large fine upon him on account of the veneration which he expressed in his poems for that heroic spirit shewn by the people of Athens in defence of the common liberty, which his own fellow-citizens had shamefully betrayed. And, as the argument of this ode implies, that great poetical talents, and high sentiments of liberty, do reciprocally produce and assist each other, so Pindar is perhaps the most exemplary proof of this connection, which occurs in history. The Thebans were remarkable, in general, for a lively disposition...
O Pindar, oft shalt thou be hail'd of me:
Not that Apollo fed thee from his shrine;
Not that thy lips drank sweetness from the bee;
Nor yet that, studious of thy notes divine,
Pan dance'd their measure with the sylvan throng;
But that thy song
Was proud to unfold
What thy base rulers trembled to behold;
Amid corrupted Thebes was proud to tell
The deeds of Athens and the Persian shame:
Hence on thy head their impious vengeance fell.
But thou, O faithful to thy fame,
The Muse's law didst rightly know;
That who would animate his lays,
And other minds to virtue raise,
Must feel his own with all her spirit glow.

III. 1.
Are there, approv'd of later times,
Whose verse adorn'd a tyrant's crimes?
Who saw majestic Rome betray'd,
And lent the imperial ruffian aid?

through all the fortunes of their commonwealth; at the time of its ruin by Philip; and even in its best state, under the administration of Pelopidas and Epaminondas; and every one knows, they were no less remarkable for great dulness, and want of all genius. That Pindar should have equally distinguished himself from the rest of his fellow-citizens in both these respects seems somewhat extraordinary, and is scarcely to be accounted for but by the preceding observation.

Octavius Caesar.

Alas!
Alas! not one polluted bard,
No, not the strains that Mincius heard,
Or Tibur's hills reply'd,
Dare to the Muse's ear aspire;
Save that, instructed by the Grecian lyre,
With freedom's ancient notes their shameful task they hide.

III. 2.
Mark, how the dread Pantheon stands,
Amid the domes of modern hands:
Amid the toys of idle state,
How simply, how severely great!
Then turn, and, while each western clime
Presents her tuneful sons to Time,
So mark thou Milton's name:
And add, "Thus differs from the throng,
"The spirit which inform'd thy awful song,
"Which bade thy potent voice protect thy country's fame."

III. 3.
Yet hence barbaric zeal.
His memory with unholy rage pursues;
While from these arduous cares of public weal
She bids each bard be gone, and rest him with his Muse.
O fool! to think the man, whose ample mind
Must grasp at all that yonder stars survey;
Must join the noblest forms of every kind,
The world's most perfect image to display,
Can e'er his country's majesty behold,
Unmov'd or cold!

O fool!
O fool! to deem
That He, whose thought must visit every theme,
Whose heart must every strong emotion know
By nature planted, or by fortune taught;
That He, if haply some presumptuous foe,
With falso ignoble science fraught,
Shall spurn at freedom's faithful band:
That He, their dear defence will shun;
Or hide their glories from the sun,
Or deal their vengeance with a woman's hand?

IV. 1.
I care not that in Arno's plain,
Or on the sportive banks of Seine,
From public themes the Muse's quire
Content with polish'd ease retire.
Where priests the studious head command,
Where tyrants bow the warlike hand
To vile ambition's aim,
Say, what can public themes afford,
Save venal honours to an hateful lord,
Reserv'd for angry heaven, and scorn'd of honest fame?

IV. 2.
But here, where freedom's equal throne
To all her valiant sons is known;

* Alluding to his "Defence of the people of England" against Salmastus. See particularly the manner in which he himself speaks of that undertaking, in the introduction to his reply to Morus.
[33]

Where all are conscious of her cares,
And each the power, that rules him, shares;
Here let the bard, whose dastard tongue
Leaves public arguments unfung,
   Bid public praise farewell:
Let him to fitter climes remove,
Far from the hero’s and the patriot’s love,
And lull mysterious monks to slumber in their cell.

IV. 3.

O Hastings, not to all
Can ruling heav’n the same endowments lend:
Yet still doth nature to her offspring call,
That to one general weal their different powers they bend;

Unenvious. Thus alone, though strains divine
Inform the bosom of the Muse’s son;
Though with new honours the patrician’s line
Advance from age to age; yet thus alone
They win the suffrage of impartial fame.

The poet’s name
He best shall prove,
Whose lays the soul with noblest passions move.
But thee, O progeny of heroes old,
Thee to severer toils thy fate requires:
The fate which form’d thee in a chosen mould,

The grateful country of thy fires,
Thee to sublimier paths demand;
Sublimier than thy fires could trace,
Or thy own Edward teach his race,
Though Gaul's proud genius sank beneath his hand.

V. 1.
From rich domains and subject farms,
They led the rustic youth to arms;
And kings their stern achievements fear'd;
While private strife their banners rear'd.
But loftier scenes to thee are shown,
Where empire's wide-establish'd throne
No private master fills:
Where, long foretold, The People reigns:
Where each a vassal's humble heart disdains;
And judgeth what he sees; and, as he judgeth, wills.

V. 2.
Here be it thine to calm and guide
The swelling democratic tide;
To watch the state's uncertain frame,
And baffle faction's partial aim:
But chiefly, with determin'd zeal,
To quell that servile band, who kneel
To freedom's banish'd foes;
That monster, which is daily found
Expert and bold thy country's peace to wound;
Yet dreads to handle arms, nor manly counsel knows.

Edward the Third, from whom descended Henry Hastings, third Earl of Huntingdon, by the daughter of the Duke of Clarence, brother to Edward the Fourth.
V. 3.

'Tis highest heaven's command,
That guilty aims should fordid paths pursue,
That what ensnares the heart should curb the hand,
And virtue's worthless foes be false to glory too.
But look on freedom. See, through every age,
What labours, perils, griefs, hath she disdain'd!
What arms, what regal pride, what priestly rage,
Have her dread offspring conquer'd or sustain'd!
For Albion well have conquer'd. Let the strains
Of happy swains,
Which now refound
Where Scarfeale's cliffs the swelling pastures bound,
Bear witness. There, oft let the farmer hail
The sacred orchard which imbowers his gate,
And shew to strangers passing down the vale,
Where Candish, Booth, and Osborne fate;
When burfting from their country's chain,
Even in the midst of deadly harms,
Of papal snares and lawless arms,
They plann'd for freedom this her awful reign.

f At Whittington, a village on the edge of Scarfeale in Derbyshire, the Earls of Devonshire and Danby, with the Lord Delamere, privately concerted the plan of the Revolution. The house at which they met is at present a farm-house; and the country people distinguish the room where they sat by the name of "the plotting parlour."
VI. 1.
This reign, these laws, this publice care,
Which Nassau gave us all to share,
Had ne'er adorned the English name,
Could fear have silenced freedom’s claim.
But fear in vain attempts to bind
Those lofty efforts of the mind
Which social good inspires;
Where men, for this, assault a throne,
Each adds the common welfare to his own;
And each unconquer'd heart the strength of all acquires.

VI. 2.
Say, was it thus, when late we view'd
Our fields in civil blood imbrued?
When fortune crown'd the barbarous host,
And half the astonish'd isle was lost?
Did one of all that vaunting train,
Who dare affront a peaceful reign,
Durst one in arms appear?
Durst one in counsels pledge his life?
Stake his luxurious fortunes in the strife?
Or lend his boasted name his vagrant friends to cheer?

VI. 3.
Yet, Hastings, these are they,
Who challenge to themselves thy country's love:
The true; the constant: who alone can weigh
What glory should demand, or liberty approve!
But let their works declare them. Thy free powers,
The generous powers of thy prevailing mind,
Not for the talks of their confederate hours,
Lewd brawls and lurking slander, were design'd.
Be thou thy own approver, Honest praise
Oft nobly sways
Ingenuous youth:
But, fought from cowards and the lying mouth,
Praise is reproach. Eternal God alone
For mortals fixeth that sublime award.
He, from the faithful records of his throne,
Bids the historian and the bard
Dispose of honour and of scorn;
Discern the patriot from the slave;
And write the good, the wise, the brave,
For lessons to the multitude unborn.
O D E

To the Right Reverend

BENJAMIN,

Lord Bishop of WINCHESTER,

By the Same.

I. i.

FOR toils which patriots have endur'd,
For treason quell'd and laws secur'd,
In every nation Time displays
The palm of honourable praise.

a Dr. Benjamin Hoadly, successively Bishop of Bangor, Hereford, Salisbury, and Winchester; a divine whose life was spent in a perpetual exertion of the noblest faculties to the noblest ends, the vindication of the religious and civil liberties of mankind in general, and of his country in particular. He was born at Wealdram, in Kent, Nov. 14, 1676; and died April 17, 1761.
Envy may rail; and faction fierce
May strive: but what, alas, can those (Though bold, yet blind and sordid foes)
To gratitude and love oppose,
To faithful story and persuasive verse?

I. 2.

O nurse of freedom, Albion, say,
Thou tamer of despotic sway,
What man, among thy sons around,
What page, in all thy annals bright,
Hast thou with purer joy survey'd
Than that where truth, by Hoadly's aid,
Shines through the deep unhallow'd shade
Of kingly fraud and sacerdotal night?

I. 3.

To him the Teacher bless'd
Who sent religion, from the palmy field
By Jordan, like the morn to cheer the west,
And lifted up the veil which heaven from earth conceal'd,
To Hoadly thus He utter'd his behest:
"Go thou, and rescue my dishonour'd law
From hands rapacious and from tongues impure:
Let not my peaceful name be made a lure
The snares of savage tyranny to aid:
Let not my words be impious chains to draw
The free-born soul, in more than brutal awe,
"To faith without assent, allegiance unrepaid."
II. 1.
No cold nor unperforming hand
Was arm'd by heaven with this command,
The world soon felt it: and, on high,
To William's ear with welcome joy
Did Locke among the blest unfold
The rising hope of Hoadly's name:
Godolphin then confirm'd the fame;
And Somers, when from earth he came,
And valiant Stanhope the fair sequel told.

II. 2.
Then drew the lawgivers around,
(Sires of the Grecian name renown'd)
And listening ask'd, and wondering knew,
What private force could thus subdue
The vulgar and the great combin'd;
Could war with sacred folly wage;
Could a whole nation disengage
From the dread bonds of many an age,
And to new habits mould the public mind.

Mr. Locke died in 1704, when Mr. Hoadly was beginning to distinguish himself in the cause of civil and religious liberty: Lord Godolphin in 1712, when the doctrines of the Jacobite faction were chiefly favoured by those in power: Lord Somers in 1716, amid the practices of the non-juring clergy against the protestant establishment; and Lord Stanhope in 1721, during the controversy with the lower house of convocation.
II. 3.
For not a conqueror's sword,
Nor the strong powers to civil founders known,
Were his: but truth by faithful search explor'd,
And social sense, like seed, in genial plenty sown.
Wherever it took root, the soul (restor'd
To freedom) freedom too for others sought,
Not monkish craft the tyrant's claim divine,
Not regal zeal the bigot's cruel shrine
Could longer guard from reason's warfare sage:
Not the wild rabble to sedition wrought,
Nor synods by the papal Genius taught,
Nor St. John's spirit loose, nor Atterbury's rage.

III. 1.
But where shall recompence be found?
Or how such arduous merit crown'd?
For look on life's laborious scene:
What rugged spaces lie between Adventurous virtue's early toils
And her triumphal throne! The shade
Of death, mean time, does oft invade
Her progress; nor, to us display'd,
Wears the bright heroine her expected spoils.

III. 2.
Yet born to conquer is her power:
—O Hoadly, if that favourite hour

s Henry St. John, Lord Viscount Bolingbroke.
† Francis Atterbury, Bishop of Rochester.
On earth arrive, with thankful awe
We own just heaven's indulgent law,
And proudly thy success behold;
We 'attend thy reverend length of days
With benediction and with praise,
And hail Thee in our public ways
Like some great spirit fam'd in ages old.

III. 3.

While thus our vows prolong
Thy steps on earth, and when by us resign'd
Thou join'st thy seniors, that heroic throng
Who rescu'd or preferv'd the rights of human kind,
O! not unworthy may thy Albion's tongue
Thee, stil her friend and benefactor, name:
O! never, Hoadly, in thy country's eyes,
May impious gold, or pleasure's gaudy prize,
Make public virtue, public freedom vile;
Nor our own manners tempt us to disclaim
That heritage, our noblest wealth and fame,
Which Thou hast kept intire from force and factious guile.
TO me, whom in their lays the shepherds call
Ocliæa, daughter of the neighbouring stream,
This cave belongs. The fig-tree and the vine,
Which o'er the rocky entrance downward shoot,
Were plac'd by Glycon. He with cowslips pale,
Primrose, and purple Lychnis, deck'd the green
Before my threshold, and my shelving walls
With honeysuckle cover'd. Here at noon,
Lull'd by the murmur of my rising fount,
I slumber: here my clustering fruits I tend;
Or from the humid flowers, at break of day,
Fresh garlands weave, and chase from all my bounds
Each thing impure or noxious. Enter-in,
O stranger, undismay'd. Nor bat nor toad
Here lurks: and if thy breast of blameless thoughts
Approve thee, not unwelcome shalt thou tread
My quiet mansion: chiefly, if thy name
Wife Pallas and the immortal Muses own.

II. For
II.

For a Statue of CHAUCER at Woodstock.

Such was old Chaucer. such the placid mien
Of him who first with harmony inform'd
The language of our fathers. Here he dwelt
For many a cheerful day. These ancient walls
Have often heard him, while his legends blithe
He sang; of love, or knighthood, or the wiles
Of homely life: through each estate and age,
The fashions and the follies of the world
With cunning hand portraying. Though perchance
From Blenheim's towers, O stranger, thou art come
Glowing with Churchill's trophies; yet in vain
Dost thou applaud them, if thy breast be cold
To him, this other hero; who, in times
Dark and untaught, began with charming verses
To tame the rudeness of his native land.

III.

Who'er thou art whose path in summer lies
Through yonder village, turn thee where the grove
Of branching oaks a rural palace old
Imbosoms: there dwells Albert, generous lord
[ 45 ]

Of all the harvest round; and onward thence
A low plain chapel fronts the morning light
Fast by a silent riv'let. Humbly walk,
O stranger, o'er the consecrated ground;
And on that verdant hilloc, which thou see'st
Beset with oifers, let thy pious hand
Sprinkle fresh water from the brook, and strew
Sweet-smelling flowers: for there doth Edmund rest,
The learned shepherd; for each rural art
Fam'd, and for songs harmonious, and the woes
Of ill-requited love. The faithless pride
Of fair Matilda sank him to the grave
In manhood's prime. But soon did righteous heaven
With tears, with sharp remorse, and pining care,
Avenge her falsehood: nor could all the gold
And nuptial pomp, which lur'd her plighted faith
From Edmund to a loftier husband's home,
Relieve her breaking heart, or turn aside
The strokes of death. Go, traveller; relate
The mournful story: haply some fair maid
May hold it in remembrance, and be taught
That riches cannot pay for truth and love.
IV.

O YOUTHS and virgins: O declining eld:
O pale misfortune's slaves: O ye who dwell
Unknown with humble quiet; ye who wait
In courts, or fill the golden seat of kings:
O sons of sport and pleasure: O thou wretch
That weep'lt for jealous love, or the sore wounds
Of conscious guilt, or death's rapacious hand
Which left thee void of hope: O ye who roam
In exile; ye who through the embattled field
Seek bright renown; or who for nobler palms
Contend, the leaders of a public cause:
Approach: behold this marble. Know ye not
The features? Hath not oft his faithful tongue
Told you the fashion of your own estate,
The secrets of your bosom? Here then, round
His monument with reverence while ye stand,
Say to each other: "This was Shakspeare's form;
"Who walk'd in every path of human life,
"Felt every passion; and to all mankind
"Doth now, will ever that experience yield
"Which his own genius only could acquire."

V. G U-
GULIELMUS III. FORTIS, PIUS, LIBERATOR, CUM INEUNTE AETATE PATRIAE LABENTI ADFUisset SALUS IPSE UNICA; CUM MOX ITIDEM REIPUBLICAE BRITANNICAE VNDEX RENUNCIATUS ESSET ATQUE STATOR; TUM DENIQUE AD ID SE NATUM RECOGNOVIT ET REGEM FACTUM, UT CURARET NE DOMINO IMPOTENTI CEDERENT PAX, FIDES, FORTUNA, GENERIS HUMANI.

AUCTORI PUBLICAE FELICITATIS P. G. A. M. A.

VI.

For a Column at R U N N Y M E D E.

THOU, who the verdant plain dost traverse here,
While Thames among his willows from thy view
Retires; O stranger, stay thee, and the scene
Around contemplate well. This is the place
Where England's ancient barons, clad in arms

And
And stern with conquest, from their tyrant king
(Then render’d tame) did challenge and secure
The charter of thy freedom. Pass not on
’Till thou have blest their memory, and paid
Those thanks which God appointed the reward
Of public virtue: and if chance thy home
Salute thee with a father’s honour’d name,
Go, call thy sons; instruct them what a debt
They owe their ancestors; and make them swear
To pay it, by transmitting down entire
Those sacred rights to which themselves were born.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * *

O D E

BY THE SAME.

I.

If rightly tuneful bards decide,
If it be fix’d in love’s decrees,
That beauty ought not to be tried
But by its native power to please,
Then tell me, youths and lovers, tell,
What fair can Amoret excell?

II.

Behold that bright unfullied smile,
And wisdom speaking in her mien:
Yet (she so artless all the while
So little studious to be seen)

We
We sought but instant gladness know,
Nor think to whom the gift we owe.

III.
But neither music, nor the powers
Of youth and mirth and frolic cheer,
Add half that sumtime to the hours,
Or make life's prospect half so clear,
As memory brings it to the eye
From scenes where Amoret was by.

IV.
Yet not a satirist could there
Or fault or indiscrimation find;
Nor any prouder sage declare
One virtue, pictur'd in his mind,
Whose form with lovelier colours glows
Than Amoret's demeanor shows.

V.
This sure is beauty's happiest part:
This gives the most unbounded sway
This shall enchant the subject heart
When rose and lily fade away!
And She be still, in spite of time,
Sweet Amoret in all her prime.
HAIL, sacred Stream, whose waters roll
   Immortal through the classic page!
To Thee the Muse-devoted soul,
   Though destin'd to a later age
And less indulgent clime, to Thee,
   Nor thou disdain, in runic lays
Weak mimic of true harmony,
   His grateful homage pays.
Far other strains thine elder ear
With pleas'd attention wont to hear,
When he, who strung the Latian lyre,
And he, who led th' Aonian quire
From Mantua's rich lake, with others crown'd,
Taught Echo from thy banks with transport to resound,
Thy banks?—alas! is this the boasted scene,
This dreary, wide, uncultivated plain,
Where sick'ning Nature wears a fainter green,
And Desolation spreads her torpid reign?
Is this the scene where Freedom breath'd,
Her copious horn where Plenty wreath'd,
And Health at opening day
Bade all her roseate breezes fly,
To wake the sons of Industry,
And make their fields more gay?

II.

Where is the villa's rural pride,
The swelling dome's imperial gleam,
Which lov'd to grace the verdant side,
And tremble in thy golden stream?
Where are the bold, the busy throngs,
That rush'd impatient to the war,
Or tun'd to peace triumphal songs,
And hail'd the passing car?
Along the solitary road,
The eternal flint by Conuls trod,
We muse, and mark the sad decays
Of mighty works, and mighty days.
For these vile wafters, we cry, had Fate decreed
That Vei's sons should strive, for these Camillus bleed?

* The Flaminian Way. *
Did here, in after-times of Roman pride,
The muting shepherd from Soraste's height
See towns extend where'er thy waters glide;
And temples rise, and peopled farms unite?
They did. For this deserted plain
The Hero strove, nor strove in vain;
And here the shepherd saw
Unnumber'd towns and temples spread,
While Rome majestic rear'd her head,
And gave the nations law.

III.

Yes, Thou art Latium once, were great,
And still, ye first of human things,
Beyond the grasp of time or fate
Her fame and thine triumphal springs.
What though the mould'ring columns fall,
And strow the desert earth beneath,
Though ivy round each hodding wall
Entwine its fatal wreath,
Yet say, can Rhine or Danube boast
The numerous glories thou hast lost?
Can ev'n Euphrates' palmier shore,
Or Nile with all his mystic lore,
Produce from old records of genuine fame
Such heroes, poets, kings, or emulate thy name?
Ev'n now the Muse, the conscious Muse is here;
From every ruin's formidable shade
Eternal Music breathes on Fancy's ear.

And
And wakes to more than form th' illustrious dead.
Thy Caesars, Scipios, Cato rise;
The great, the virtuous, and the wise;
In solemn state advance!
They fix the philosophic eye,
Or trail the robe, or lift on high
The lightning of the lance.

IV.
But chief that humbler happier train
Who knew those virtues to reward
Beyond the reach of chance or pain
Secure, the glorious and the hard.
By them the hero's generous rage
Still warm in youth immortal lies;
And in their adamantine page
Thy glory still survives.
Through deep Savannah wild and vast,
Unheard, unknown through ages past,
Beneath the sun's direction beams
What copious sorrows pour their streams!
No fame have they, no fond pretence to mourn,
No annals swell their pride, or grace their storied urn.
 Whilst Thou, with Rome's exalted genius join'd,
Her spear yet lifted, and her corselet brac'd,
Canst tell the waves, canst tell the passing wind,
Thy wondrous tale, and cheer the lifting waves.
Though from his caves th' unfeeling North
Pour'd all his legion'd tempests forth,
Yet say, ye monks (beneath whose moss-grown feet,
Within whose cloister'd cells th' indebted Muse
Awhile sojourns, for meditation meet;
And these loose thoughts in pensive strain pursues,)

Avails it aught, that War's rude tumulus spare
Yon cloister'd vineyard, or yon golden field,
If, niggards to yourselves, and fond of care,
You slight the joys their copious treasures yield?

Avails it aught, that Nature's liberal hand
With every blessing grateful man can know
Cloaths the rich bosom of yon smiling land,
The mountain's rippling side, or pendant brow,

If meagre Famine paint your pallid cheek,
* If breaks the midnight bell your hours of rest,
If, 'midst heart-chilling damps, and winter bleak,
You shun the cheerful bowl, and moderate feast?

Look forth, and be convinc'd! 'tis Nature pleads,
Her ample volume opens on your view,
The simple-minded swain, who running reads,
Finds the glad truth, and is it hid from you?

Look forth, and be convinc'd! You prospects wide
To Reason's ear how forcibly they speak,
Compar'd with those how dul. is letter'd Pride,
And Austin's babbling Elocuence how weak!

Temp'rance,
Temp'rance, not Abstinence, in every bliss
Is Man's true joy, and therefore Heaven's command;
The wretch who riots thanks his God amiss:
Who starves, rejects the bounties of his hand.

Mark, while the Marne in you full channel glides,
How smooth his course, how Nature smiles around!
But should impetuous torrents swell his tides,
The fairy landskip sinks in oceans drown'd.

Nor less disastrous, should his thirsty urn
Neglected leave the once well-water'd land.
To dreary waistes your paradise would turn,
Polluted ooze, or heaps of barren sand.

E L E G Y II.

On the MAUSOLEUM* of AUGUSTUS.

To the Right Honourable

GEORGE BUSSY VILLIERS, Viscount VILLIERS,
Son to the Earl of Jersey.

Written at R O M E, 1756.

A MID these mould'ring walls, this marble round,
Where slept the Heroes of the Julian name,
Say, shall we linger still in thought profound,
And meditate the mournful paths to fame?

*It is now a garden belonging to Marchese di Corfe.

What
What though no cypress shades, in funeral rows,
   No sculptur'd urns, the last records of Fate,
O'er the shrunk terrace wave their baleful boughs,
   Or breathe in storied emblems of the great;
Yes not with heedless eye will we survey
   The scene though chang'd, nor negligently tread;
These variegated walks, however gay,
   Were once the silent mansions of the dead.
In every shrub, in every flow'ret's bloom
   That paints with different hues yon smiling plain,
Some Hero's ashes issue from the tomb,
   And live a vegetative life again.
For matter dies not as the Sages say,
   But shifts to other forms the pliant mass,
When the free spirit quits its cumb'rous clay,
   And sees, beneath, the rolling Planets pass.
Perhaps, my Villiers, for I sing to Thee,
   Perhaps, unknowing of the bloom it gives,
In yon fair scion of Apollo's tree
   The sacred dust of young Marcellus lives.
Pluck not the leaf—'twere sacrilege to wound
   Th' ideal memory of so sweet a shade;
In these sad seats an early grave he found,
   And the first rites to gloomy Dis convey'd.

b He is said to be the first person buried in this monument.
Witness, thou Field of Mars, that oft hadst known
His youthful triumphs in the mimic war,
Thou heard'st the heart-felt universal groan
When o'er thy bosom roll'd the funeral car.
Witness d thou Tuscan stream, where oft he glow'd
In sportive stragglings with th' opposing wave,
Fast by the recent tomb thy waters flow'd
While wept the wise, the virtuous, and the brave.
O lost too soon!—yet why lament a fate
By thousands envied, and by Heaven approv'd?
Rare is the boon to those of longer date
To live, to die, admir'd, esteem'd, below'd.

Weak are our judgements, and our passions warm,
And slowly dawns the radiant morn of truth,
Our expectations hastily we form,
And much we pardon to ingenious youth.
Too oft we satiate on th' applause we pay
To rising Merit, and resume the Crown;
Full many a blooming genius, snatch'd away,
Has fall'n lamented who had liv'd unknown.

For hard the task, O Villiers, to sustain
Th' important burthen of an early fame;
Each added day some added worth to gain,
Prevent each wish, and answer every claim.

c Quanta ille virum magnum Mavortis ad urbem
    Campus aget geminus!
d——— Vel quæ, Tyberine, videbis
    Funera, cum tumulum præteriabere recentem!
Be thou Marcellus, with a length of days!
But O remember, whatsoe'er thou art,
The most exalted breath of human praise
To please indeed must echo from the heart.

Though thou be brave, be virtuous, and be wise,
By all, like him, admir'd, esteem'd, belov'd,
'Tis from within alone true Fame can rise,
The only happy is the Self-approv'd.

ELEGY III.

To the Right Honourable
GEORGE SIMON HARCOURT, Viscount NEWHAM,
Son to Earl HARCOURT.

Written at Rome, 1756.

YES, noble Youth, 'tis true; the loftier arts,
The sweetly-found string, and pencil's power,
Have warm'd to rapture even heroic hearts,
And taught the rude to wonder, and adore.

For Beauty charms us, whether she appears
In blended colours; or to soothing sound
Attunes her voice; or fair proportion wears
In yonder swelling dome's harmonious round.

All,
All, all she charms; but not alike to all
'Tis given to revel in her blissful bower;
Coercive ties, and Reason's powerful call,
Bid some but taste the sweets, which some devote.

When Nature govern'd, and when Man was young,
Perhaps as will th' untutor'd Savage rov'd,
Where waters murmur'd, and where clusters hung
He fed, and slept beneath the shade he lov'd.

But since the Sage's more sagacious mind,
By Heaven's permission, or by Heaven's command,
To polish states his socal laws assign'd,
And general good on partial duties plant'd;

Not for ourselves our vagrant steps we bend
As heedless Chance, or wanton Choice ordain'd;
On various stations various tasks attend,
And men are born to toil or to reign.

As chants the woodman whilst the Dryad weep,
And falling forests fear th' uplifted blow,
As chants the shepherd, while he tends his sheep,
Or weaves to plant forms the o'er boughs;

To me 'tis given, whom Fortune loves to lead
Through humbler toils to life's sequester'd bowers,
To me 'tis given to wake th' amusive reed,
And soothe with song the solitary hours.

But
But Thee superior soberer toils demand,
Severer paths are thine of patriot fame;
Thy birth, thy friends, thy king, thy native land,
Have given thee honours, and have each their claim.

Then nerve with fortitude thy feeling breast
Each with to combat, and each pain to bear;
Spurn with disdain th' inglorious love of rest,
Nor let the siren Ease approach thine ear.

Beneath yon cypris shade's eternal green
See prostrate Rome her wond'rous story tell,
Mark how she rose the world's imperial queen,
And tremble at the prospect how she fell!

Not that my rigid precepts would require
A painful struggling with each adverse gale,
Forbid thee listen to th' enchanting Lyre,
Or turn thy steps from Fancy's flowery vale.

Whate'er of Greece in sculptur'd brass survives,
Whate'er of Rome in mould'ring arcs remains,
Whate'er of Genius on the canvas lives,
Or flows in polish'd verse, or airy strains,

Be these thy leisure; to the chosen few,
Who dare excel, thy soft'ring aid afford;
Their arts, their magic powers with honours due
Exalt; but be thyself what they record.

ELEGY
ELEGY IV.

To an OFFICER.

Written at Rome, 1756.

FROM Latian fields, the mansions of Renown,
Where fix'd the Warrior God his fated seat;
Where infant Heroes learnt the martial frown,
And little hearts for genuine glory beat;

What for my friend, my soldier, shall I frame?
What nobly-glowing verse that breathes of arms,
To point his radiant path to deathless fame,
By great examples, and terrific charms?

Quirinus first, with bold, collected bands,
The sinewy sons of strength, for empire srove:
Beneath his thunder bow'd th' astonish'd lands,
And temples rose to Mars, and to Feretrian Jove.

War
War taught contempt of death, contempt of pain,
    And hence the Fabii, hence the Decii come:
War urg'd the slaughter, though the wept the slain,
    Stern War, the rugged nurse of virtuous Rome.

But not from antique fables will I draw,
    To fire thy feeling soul, a dubious aid,
Though now, ev'n now, they strike with rev'rent awe,
    By Poets or Historians sacred made.

Nor yet to thee the babbling Muse shall tell
    What mighty kings with all their legions wrought,
What cities sunk, and storied nations fell.
    When Cæsar, Titus, or when Trajan fought.

From private worth, and Fortune's private ways
    Whilst o'er yon hill th' exalted *Trophy shows
To what vast heights of incorrupted praise
    The great, the self-ennobled Marius rose.

From sleep Arpinum's rock-invested shade,
    From hardy Virtue's emulative school,
His daring flight th' expanding Genius made,
    And by obeying nobly learnt to rule.

Abash'd, confounded, stern Iberia groan'd,
    And Afric trembled to her utmost coasts;
When the proud land its destin'd Conqueror own'd
    In the new Consul, and his veteran hosts.

* The trophies of Marius, now erected before the Capitol.

Yet
Yet chiefs are madmen, and Ambition weak,
   And mean the joys the laurel’d harvests yield,
If Virtue fail. Let Fame, let Envy speak
   Of Capua’s walls, and Sextia’s wat’ry field.

But sink for ever, in oblivion cast,
   Dishonest triumphs, and ignoble spoils.
Minturnæ’s Mars, severely paid at last
   The guilty glories gain’d in civil broils.

Nor yet his vain contempt the Muse shall praise
   For scenes of polish’d life, and letter’d worth;
The steel-ribb’d Warrior wants not Envy’s ways
   To darken theirs, or call his merits forth.

Witness yon Cimbrian Trophies!—Marius, there
   Thy ample pinion found a space to fly;
As the plum’d eagle soaring soars in air,
   In upper air, and scorns a middle sky.

Thence too thy country claim’d thee for her own,
   And bade the Sculptor’s toil thy acts adorn,
To teach in characters of living stone
   Eternal lessons to the youth unborn.

For wisely Rome her warlike Sons rewards
   With the sweet labours of her Artists’ hands;
He wakes her Graces, who her empire guards,
   And both Minervas join in willing bands.

Vol. VI.  E  O why,
O why, Britannia, why untrophied pafs
The patriot deeds thy godlike Sons display,
Why breathes on high no monumental brafs,
Why swells no Arc to grace Culloden's Day?

Wait we 'till faithless France submissive bow
Beneath that Hero's delegated spear,
Whose lightning smote Rebellion's haughty brow,
And scatter'd her vile rout with horror in the rear?

O Land of Freedom, Land of Arts, assume
That graceful dignity thy merits claim;
Exalt thy Heroes like imperial Rome,
And build their virtues on their love of fame.

So shall the modest worth, which checks my friend,
Forget its blushing when rous'd by Glory's charms;
From breast to breast the generous warmth descend,
And still new trophies rise, at once, to Arts and Arms.

ELEGY
E L E G Y V.

To a FRIEND Sick.

Written at Rome, 1756.

'T WAS in this a isle, O Wright, indulge my lay,
Whose naval form divides the Tuscan flood,
In the bright dawn of her illustrious day
Rome fix'd her Temple to the healing God.

Here stood his altars, here his arm he bar'd,
And round his mystic staff the serpent twin'd,
Through crowded portals hymns of praise were heard,
And victims bled, and sacred seers divin'd.

On every breathing wall, on every round
Of column, swelling with proportion'd grace,
Its flated seat some votive tablet found,
And storied wonders dignified the place.

* The insula Tiberina, where there are still some small remains of the famous temple of Æsculapius.
Oft from the balmy blessings of repose,
And the cool stillness of the night's deep shade,
To light and health th' exulting Votarist rose,
Whilst fancy work'd with medicine's powerful aid.

Oft in his dreams (no longer clogg'd with fears
Of some broad torrent, or some headlong steep,
With each dire form Imagination wears,
When harrafs'd Nature sinks in turbid sleep)

Oft in his dreams he saw diffusive day
Through bursting glooms its cheerful beams extend;
On billowy clouds saw sportive Genii play,
And bright Hygeia from her heaven descend.

What marvel then, that man's o'erflowing mind
Should wreath-bound columns raise, and altars fair,
And grateful offerings pay, to Powers so kind,
Though fancy-form'd, and creatures of the Air.

Who that has writh'd beneath the scourge of pain,
Or felt the burthen'd languor of diseafe,
But would with joy the slightest respite gain;
And idolize the hand which lent him ease?

To thee, my friend, unwillingly to thee,
For truths like these the anxious Muse appeal's.
Can Memory answer from affliction free,
Or speaks the sufferer what, I fear, he feels?

No,
[ 69 ]

No, let me hope ere this in Romely grove
Hygeia revels with the blooming Spring,
Ere this the vocal seats the Muses love
With hymns of praise, like Pæon's temple, ring.

It was not written in the book of Fate
That, wand'ring far from Albion's sea-girt plain,
Thy distant friend should mourn thy shorter date,
And tell to alien woods and streams his pain.

It was not written. Many a year shall roll,
If aught th' inspiring Muse aright prefage,
Of blameless intercourse from Soul to Soul,
And friendship well matur'd from Youth to Age.

E L E G Y VI.

To another F R I E N D.

Written at Rome, 1756.

B E H O L D, my friend, to this small orb confin'd
The genuine features of Aurelius' face;
The father, friend, and lover of his kind,
Shrunk to a narrow coin's contracted space.

* The medal of Marcus Aurelius.

E 3

Not
Not so his fame; for erst did heaven ordain
   Whilst seas should waft us, and whilst suns should warm,
On tongues of men, the friend of man should reign,
   And in the arts he lov’d the patron charm.

Oft as amidst the mould’ring spoils of Age,
   His moss-grown monuments my steps pursue;
Oft as my eye revolves the historic page,
   Where pass his generous acts in fair review.

Imagination grasps at many things,
   Which men, which angels might with rapture see;
Then turns to humbler scenes its safer wings,
   And, blush not whilst I speak it, thinks on thee.

With all that firm benevolence of mind,
   Which pities, whilst it blames, th’ unfeeling vain,
With all that active zeal to serve mankind,
   That tender suffering for another’s pain,

Why wert not thou to thrones imperial rais’d?
   Did heathen Fortune flumber at thy birth,
Or on thy virtues with indulgence gaz’d,
   And gave her grandeurs to her sons of earth?

Happy for thee, whose less distinguish’d sphere
Now cheers in private the delighted eye,
For calm Content, and smiling Ease are there,
   And, Heav’n’s divinest gift, sweet Liberty.
Happy for me, on life's serener flood
Who fail, by talents as by choice restrain'd,
Else had I only shar'd the general good,
And lost the friend the Universe had gain'd.

THE LYRIC MUSE TO MR. MASON.

On the Recovery of the RIGHT HONORABLE the EARL of HOLDERNESSE from a dangerous Illness.

BY THE SAME.

MASON, snatch the votive Lyre,
D'Arcy lives, and I inspire.
'Tis the Muse that deigns to ask;
Can thy hand forget its task?
Or can the Lyre its strains refuse
To the Patron of the Muse?

Hark, what notes of artless love
The feather'd poets of the grove,
Grateful for the bowers they fill,
Warble wild on Sion hill;
In tuneful tribute duly paid
To the Master of the shade!

And
And shall the Bard fit fancy-proof
Beneath the hospitable roof;
Where every menial face affords
Raptur'd thoughts that want but words?
And the Patron's dearer part,
The gentle sharer of his heart;
Wears her wonted charms again?
Time, that felt Affliction's chain,
Learns on lighter wings to move;
And the tender pledge of love,
Sweet Amelia, now is preft
With double transport to her breast.
Sweet Amelia, thoughtles why,
Imitates the general joy;
Innocent of care or guile
See the lovely Mimic smile,
And, as the heart-felt raptures rise,
Catch them from her Mother's eyes.

Does the noify town deny
Soothing airs, and extasy?
Sion's shades afford retreat,
Thither bend thy pilgrim feet,
There bid th' imaginary train,
Coinage of the Poet's brain,
Not only in effects appear,
But forms, and limbs, and features wear;
Let festive Mirth, with flow'rets crown'd,
Lightly tread the measur'd round;
And Peace, that seldom knows to share
The Statesman's friendly bowl, be there;
While rosy Health, superior guest,
Loose to the Zephyrs bares her breast;
And, to add a sweeter grace,
Give her soft Amelia's face.

Mason, why this dull delay?
Haste, to Sion haste away.
There the Muse again shall ask,
Nor thy hand forget its task;
Nor the Lyre its strains refuse
To the Patron of the Muse.
ON THE IMMORTALITY OF THE SOUL.

TRANSLATED

FROM THE LATIN OF ISAAC HAWKINS BROWNE, ESQ;

BY SOAME JENNYNS, ESQ;

BOOK I.

To all inferior animals 'tis given
T' enjoy the state allotted them by Heaven;
No vain researches e'er disturb their rest,
No fears of dark futurity molest.
Man, only Man, solicitous to know
The springs whence Nature's operations flow,
Plods through a dreary waste with toil and pain,
And reasons, hopes, and thinks, and lives in vain;
For fable Death still hov'ring o'er his head,
Cuts short his progress, with his vital thread.
Wherefore, since Nature errs not, do we find
These seeds of Science in the human mind,
If no congenial fruits are predestin'd?
For what avails to man this power to roam
Through ages past, and ages yet to come,
To explore new worlds o'er all the aetherial way,
Chained to a spot, and living but a day.
Since all must perish in one common grave,
Nor can these long laborious searches save.
Were it not wiser far, supinely laid,
To sport with Phyllis in the noontide shade?
Or at thy jovial festivals appear,
Great Bacchus, who alone the soul can clear
From all that it has felt, and all that it can fear?

Come on then, let us feast: let Chloe sing,
And soft Nymphs touch the trembling string;
Enjoy the present hour, nor seek to know
What good or ill to-morrow may bestow.
But these delights soon pall upon the taste;
Let's try then if more serious cannot last:
Wealth let us heap on wealth, or fame pursue,
Let power and glory be our points in view;
In courts, in camps, in senates let us live,
Our levees crowded like the buzzing hive;
Each weak attempt the same sad lesson brings:
Alas, what vanity in human things!

What means then shall we try? where hope to find
A friendly harbour for the restless mind?
Who still, you see, impatient to obtain
Knowledge immense, (so Nature's laws ordain):

Ev'n
Ev'n now, though fetter'd in corporeal clay,
Climbs step by step the prospect to survey,
And seeks, unwearied, Truth's eternal ray.
No fleeting joys she asks, which must depend
On the frail senses, and with them must end;
But such as suit her own immortal fame,
Free from all change, eternally the same.

Take courage then, these joys we shall attain:
Almighty Wisdom never acts in vain;
Nor shall the soul, on which it has bestow'd
Such powers, e'er perish, like an earthly clod;
But purg'd at length from foul corruption's stain
Freed from her prison, and unbound her chain,
She shall her native strength, and native skies regain:
To heav'n an old inhabitant return,
And draw nectarous streams from truth's perpetual urn.

Whilst life remains (if life it can be call'd,
T' exist in fleshly bondage thus enthrall'd)
Tir'd with the dull pursuit of worldly things,
The soul scarce wakes, or opes her gladsome wings,
Yet still the godlike exile in disgrace
Retains some marks of her celestial race;
Else when from Mem'ry's store can she produce
Such various thoughts, or range them so for use?
Can matter these contain, dispose, apply?
Can in her cells such mighty treasures lie?
Or can her native force produce them to the eye?

Whence
Whence is this power, this foundress of all arts,
Serving, adorning life, through all its parts,
Which names impos'd, by letters mark'd those names,
Adjusted properly by legal claims,
From woods, and wilds collected rude mankind,
And cities, laws, and governments design'd?
What can this be, but some bright ray from heaven,
Some emanation from Omniscience given?
When now the rapid stream of Eloquence
Bears all before it, passion, reason, sense,
Can its dread thunder, or its lightning's force,
Derive their essence from a mortal source?
What think you of the bard's enchanting art,
Which, whether he attempts to warm the heart
With fabled scenes, or charm the ear with rhyme,
Breathes all pathetic, lovely, and sublime?
Whilst things on earth roll round from age to age,
The same dull farce repeated; on the stage
The poet gives us a creation new,
More pleasing, and more perfect than the true;
The mind, who always to perfection hastens,
Perfection, such as here she never tastes,
With gratitude accepts the kind deceit,
And thence foresees a system more compleat.
Of those what think you, who the circling race
Of suns, and their revolving planets trace,
And comets journeying through unbounded space?

Say,
Say, can you doubt, but that th' all-searching soul,
That now can traverse heaven from pole to pole,
From thence descending visits but this earth,
And shall once more regain the regions of her birth?
Could she thus act, unless some Power unknown,
From matter quite distinct, and all her own,
Supported, and impell'd her? She approves
Self-conscious, and condemns; she hates, and loves,
Mourns, and rejoices, hopes, and is afraid,
Without the body's unrequested aid:
Her own internal strength her reason guides,
By this she now compares things, now divides;
Truth's scatter'd fragments piece by piece collects,
Rejoins, and thence her edifice erects;
Piles arts on arts, effects to causes ties,
And rears th' aspiring fabric to the skies:
From whence, as on a distant plain below,
She sees from causes consequences flow,
And the whole chain distinctly comprehends,
Which from th' Almighty's throne to earth descends:
And lastly, turning inwardly her eyes,
Perceives how all her own ideas rise,
Contemplates what she is, and whence she came,
And almost comprehends her own amazing frame.
Can mere machines be with such powers endued,
Or conscious of those powers, suppose they could?
For body is but a machine alone
Mov'd by external force, and impulse not its own.
Rate not the extension of the human mind
By the plebeian standard of mankind,
But by the size of those gigantic few,
Whom Greece and Rome still offer to our view;
Or Britain well-deserving equal praise,
Parent of heroes too in better days.
Why should I try her num'rous sons to name
By verse, law, eloquence, confign'd to fame?
Or who have forc'd fair Science into fight
Long lost in darkness, and afraid of light?
O'er all superior, like the solar ray,
First Bacon usher'd in the dawning day,
And drove the mists of sophistry away;
Pervaded nature with amazing force,
Following experience still throughout his course,
And finishing at length his destin'd way,
To Newton he bequeath'd the radiant lamp of day.

Illustrious souls! if any tender cares
Affect angelic breasts for man's affairs,
If in your present happy heav'nly state,
You're not regardless quite of Britain's fate,
Let this degenerate land again be blest
With that true vigour, which she once possest;
Compel us to unfold our slumbering eyes,
And to our ancient dignity to rise.
Such wondrous powers as these must sure be given
For most important purposes by heaven;

Who
Who bids these stars as bright examples shine,
Besprinkled thinly by the hand divine,
To form to virtue each degenerate time,
And point out to the soul its origin sublime.
That there's a self which after death shall live,
All are concern'd about, and all believe;
That something's ours, when we from life depart,
This all conceive, all feel it at the heart;
The wise of learned antiquity proclaim
This truth, the public voice declares the same;
No land so rude but looks beyond the tomb
For future prospects in a world to come.
Hence, without hopes to be in life repaid,
We plant slow oaks posterity to shade;
And hence vast pyramids aspiring high
Lift their proud heads aloft, and time defy.
Hence is our love of fame, a love so strong,
We think no dangers great, or labours long,
By which we hope our beings to extend,
And to remotest times in glory to descend.

For fame the wretch beneath the gallows lies,
Disowning every crime for which he dies;
Of life profuse, tenacious of a name,
Fearless of death, and yet afraid of shame.
Nature has wove into the human mind
This anxious care for names we leave behind,
T' extend our narrow views beyond the tomb,
And give an earnest of a life to come:

For,
For, if when dead we are but dust or clay,
Why think of what posterity shall say?
Her praise or censure cannot us concern,
Nor ever penetrate the silent urn.

What mean the nodding plumes, the fun’ral train,
And marble monument that speaks in vain,
With all those cares, which every nation pays
To their unfeeling dead in different ways!

Some in the flower-strewn grave the corpse have lay’d,
And annual obsequies around it pay’d,
As if to please the poor departed shade;
Others on blazing piles the body burn,
And stow their ashes in the faithful urn:
But all in one great principle agree
To give a fancy’d immortality.

Why should I mention those, whose ouzy soil
Is render’d fertile by th’ overflowing Nile?
Their dead they bury not, nor burn with fires,
No graves they dig, ereft no fun’ral pires;
But, washing first th’ embow’d body clean,
Gums, spice, and melted pitch, they pour within
Then with strong fillets bind it round and round,
To make each flaccid part compact, and sound;
And lastly paint the varnish’d surface o’er
With the same features which in life it wore:
So strong their preface of a future state,
And that our nobler part survives the body’s fate.
Nations behold remote from reason's beams,
Where Indian Ganges rolls his sandy streams,
Of life impatient, rush into the fire,
And willing victims to their Gods expire!
Persuaded the loose soul to regions flies
Blest with eternal spring, and cloudless skies.

Nor is less fam'd the oriental wife
For steadfast virtue, and contempt of life:
These heroines mourn not with loud female cries
Their husbands lock, or with o'erflowing eyes;
But, strange to tell! their funeral piles ascend,
And in the same sad flames their sorrows end;
In hopes with them beneath the shades to rove,
And there renew their interrupted love.

In climes where Boreas breathes eternal cold,
See numerous nations, warlike, fierce, and bold,
To battle all unanimously run,
Nor fire, nor sword, nor instant death they shun.
Whence this disdain of life in every breast,
But from a notion on their minds impress,
That all, who for their country die, are blest?
Add too to these the once prevailing dreams
Of sweet Elysian groves, and Stygian streams:
All shew with what consent mankind agree
In the firm hope of Immortality.
Grant these th' inventions of the crafty priest;
Yet such inventions never could subsist.
[§3]

Unless some glimmerings of a future state
Were with the mind coeval, and innate:
For every fiction, which can long persuade,
In truth must have its first foundations laid.

Because we are unable to conceive,
How unembodied souls can act, and live,
The vulgar give them forms, and limbs, and faces,
And habitations in peculiar places;
Hence reasoners more refin’d, but not more wise,
Struck with the glare of such absurdities,
Their whole existence fabulous suspect,
And truth and falsehood in a lump reject;
To indolent to learn what may be known,
Or else too proud that ignorance to own.
For hard’s the task the daubing to pervade
Folly and fraud on Truth’s fair form have laid;
Yet let that task be ours; for great the prize;
ByREF[5.2.144-145] Nor let us Truth’s celestial charms despise,
Because that priests, or poets, may disguise.

That there’s a God, from Nature’s voice is clear:
And yet what errors to this truth adhere!
How have the fears and follies of mankind
Now multiply’d their Gods, and now subjoin’d
To each the frailties of the human mind!
Nay, superstition spread at length so wide,
Beasts, birds, and onions too were deify’d.

Th’ Athenian sage, revolving in his mind
This weakness, blindness, madness of mankind,
Foretold,
Foretold, that in maturer days, though late,
When time should ripen the decrees of Fate,
Some God would light us, like the rising day,
Through error's maze, and chase these clouds away.
Long since has time fulfill'd this great decree,
And brought us aid from this Divinity.

Well worth our search discoveries may be made
By Nature, void of the celestial aid:
Let's try what her conjectures then can reach;
Nor scorn plain Reason, when she deigns to teach.

That mind and body often sympathize
Is plain; such is this union Nature ties:
But then as often too they disagree;
Which proves the soul's superior progeny.
Sometimes the body in full strength we find,
Whilst various ails debilitate the mind;
At others, whilst the mind its force retains,
The body sinks with sickness and with pains:
Now did one common fate their beings end,
Alike they'd ficken, and alike they'd mend.
But sure experience, on the slightest view,
Shews us, that the reverse of this is true;
For when the body oft expiring lies,
Its limbs quite senseless, and half clos'd its eyes,
The mind new force and eloquence acquires,
And with prophetic voice the dying lips inspires,

Of like materials were they both compos'd,
How comes it, that the mind, when sleep has clos'd
Each avenue of sense, expatiates wide,
Her liberty restor'd, her bonds unty'd?
And like some bird who from its prison flies,
Claps her exulting wings, and mounts the skies.

Grant that corporeal is the human mind,
It must have parts in infinitum join'd;
And each of these must will, perceive, design,
And draw confus'dly in a different line;
Which then can claim dominion o'er the rest,
Or stamp the ruling passion in the breast?

Perhaps the mind is form'd by various arts
Of modelling, and figuring these parts;
Just as if circles wiser were than squares;
But surely common sense aloud declares
That size and figure are as foreign quite
From mental powers, as colours black or white.

Allow that motion is the cause of thought,
With what strange powers must motion then be fraught?
Reason, sense, science, must derive their source
From the wheel's rapid whirl, or pulley's force;
Tops whipp'd by school-boys sages must commence,
Their hoops, like them, be cudgel'd into sense,
And boiling pots o'erflow with eloquence.
Whence can this very motion take its birth?
Not sure from matter, from dull clods of earth;
But from a living spirit lodg'd within,
Which governs all the bodily machine:

F 3

Just
In distances of things, their shapes and size,
Our reason judges better than our eyes.
Declares not this the soul's pre-eminence
Superior to, and quite distinct from sense?
For sure 'tis likely, that, since now so high
Clogg'd and unfledg'd she dares her wings to try,
Loos'd, and mature, she shall her strength display,
And soar at length to Truth's refulgent ray.

Inquire you how these powers we shall attain?
'Tis not for us to know; our search is vain.
Can any now remember or relate
How he exiled in the embryo state?
Or one from birth insensible of day
Conceive ideas of the solar ray?
That light's deny'd to him, which others see;
He knows, perhaps you'll say—and so do we.

The mind contemplative finds nothing here
On earth, that's worthy of a wish or fear:
He, whose sublime pursuit is God and truth,
Burns, like some absent and impatient youth,
To join the object of his warm desires,
Thence to seat'eter'd shades and streams retires,
And there delights his passion to rehearse
In wisdom's sacred voice, or in harmonious verse.

To me most happy therefore he appears,
Who having once, unmov'd by hopes or fears,
Survey'd this fun, earth, ocean, clouds, and flame,
Well satisfy'd returns from whence he came,
Is life a hundred years, or e'er so few,
'Tis repetition all, and nothing new;
A fair, where thousands meet, but none can stay,
An inn, where travellers bait, then post away;
A sea, where man perpetually is lost,
Now plung'd in business, now in trifles lost;
Who leave it first, the peaceful port first gain;
Hold then! no farther launch into the main:
Contrast your sails; life nothing can below
By long continuance, but continued woe,
The wretched privilege daily to deplore
The funerals of our friends, who go before;
Diseases, pains, anxieties, and cares,
And age surrounded with a thousand shares.

But whither hurry'd by a generous scorn
Of this vain world? ah! whither am I borne?
Let none unbid th' Almighty's standard quit:
Howe'er severe our post, we must submit.

Could I a firm persuasion once attain
That after death no being would remain;
To those dark shades I'd willingly descend,
Where all must sleep, this drama at an end:
Nor life accept, although renew'd by Fate
Ev'n from its earliest and its happiest state.

Might I from Fortune's bounteous hand receive
Each boon, each blessing in her power to give,
Genius, and science, morals, and good sense,
Unenvy'd honours, wit, and eloquence,

A numerous
A numerous offspring to the world well known,
Both for paternal virtues and their own;
Ev'n at this mighty price I'd not be bound
To tread the same dull circle round and round;
The soul requires enjoyments more sublime,
By space unbounded, undestroy'd by time.

BOOK II.

GOD then through all creation gives, we find,
Sufficient marks of an indulgent mind,
Excepting in ourselves; ourselves of all
His works the chief on this terrestrial ball,
His own bright image, who alone unblest
Feel ills perpetual, happy all the rest.
But hold, presumptuous! charge not heav'n's decree
With such injustice, such partiality.

Yet true it is, survey we life around,
Whole hosts of ills on every side are found;
Who wound not here and there by chance a foe,
But at the species meditate the blow.
What millions perish by each others hands
In war's fierce rage! or by the dread commands
Of tyrants languish out their lives in chains,
Or lose them in variety of pains!
What numbers pinch'd by want and hunger die,
In spite of, Nature's liberality!
(Those, still more numerous, I to name disdain,
By lewdness and intemperance justly slain.)
What numbers, guiltless of their own disease,
Are snatch'd by sudden death, or waste by slow degrees!
Where then is Virtue's well-deserv'd reward!—

Let's pay to Virtue every due regard:
That she enables man, let us confess;
To bear those evils, which she can't redress;
Gives hope, and conscious peace, and can assuage
Th' impetuous tempests both of lust and rage;
Yet she's a guard so far from being sure,
That oft her friends peculiar ills endure:
Where Vice prevails severest is their fate,
Tyrants pursue them with a three-fold hate.
How many, struggling in their country's cause,
And from their country meriting applause,
Have fall'n by wretches fond to be inflav'd,
And perish'd by the hands themselves had sav'd!

Soon as superior worth appears in view,
See knaves and fools united to pursue!
The man so form'd they all conspire to blame,
And Envy's pois'nous tooth attacks his fame;
Should he at length, so truly good and great,
Prevail, and rule with honest views the state,
Then must he toil for an ungrateful race,
Submit to clamor, libels, and disgrace;
Threaten'd, oppos'd, defeated in his ends;
By foes seditious, and aspiring friends.
Hear this, and tremble! all who would be great,
Yet know not what attends that dang'rous wretched state.
Is private life from all these evils free?
Vice of all kinds, rage, envy, there we see,
Deceit, that friendship's mask insidious wears,
Quarrels and feuds, and law's intangling snares.

But there are pleasures still in human life,
Domestic ease, a tender loving wife,
Children, whose dawning smiles your heart engage,
The grace and comfort of soft-healing age.
If happiness exists, 'tis surely here——
But are these joys exempt from care and fear?
Need I the miteries of that state declare,
When different passions draw the wedded pair?
Or say how hard those passions to discern,
Ere the dye's cast, and 'tis too late to learn?
Who can infuse, that what is right, and good,
These children shall pursue? or, if they shou'd,
Death comes when least you fear so black a day,
And all your blooming hopes are snatch'd away.

We say not, that these ills from virtue flow:
Did her wise precepts rule the world, we know
The golden ages would again begin,
But 'tis our lot in this to suffer, and to sin.

Observing this, some fates have decreed
That all things from two causes must proceed:
Two principles with equal power endued,
This wholly evil, that supremely good.
From this arise the miteries we endure,
Whilst that administers a friendly cure.

Hence
Hence life is chequered still with bliss and woe;
Hence tares with golden crops promiscuous grow;
And poisonous serpents make their dread repose
Beneath the covert of the fragrant rose.

Can such a system satisfy the mind?
Are both these Gods in equal power conjoin’d,
Or one superior? Equal if you say,
Chaos return’d, since neither will obey.
Is one superior? good or ill must reign,
Eternal joy, or everlasting pain.
Whiche’er is conquer’d must entirely yield,
And the victorious God enjoy the field.
Hence with these fictions of the Magus’ brain!
Hence ouzy Nile; with all her meaner train!

Or comes the Stoic nearer to the sight?
He holds, that whatsoever yields delight,
Wealth, fame, externals all, are worldly things;
Himself half-starving happier far than kings.
’Tis fine indeed to be so wonderous wise!
By the same reasoning too he pain denies;
Roast him, or slay him, break him on the wheel,
Retreat he will not, though he can’t but feel.
Pain’s not an ill, he utters with a groan;
What then? an inconvenience tis, he’ll own.
What vigour, health, and beauty? are these good?
No: they may be accepted, not pursued.
Absurd to squabble thus about a name,
Quibbling with different words that mean the same.
The wife, extending their inquiries wide,
See how both states are by connection tied;
Fools view but part, and not the whole survey,
So crowd existence all into a day.
Hence are they led to hope, but hope in vain,
That Justice never will resume her reign;
On this vain hope adulterers, thieves rely,
And to this altar vile aspirants fly.
"But rules not God by general laws divine?"
"Man's vice, or virtues, change not the design."
What laws are these? instruct us if you can:—
There's one design'd for brutes, and one for man:
Another guides inactive matter's course,
Attracting, and attracted by its force:
Hence mutual gravity subsists between
Far distant worlds, and ties the vast machine.
The laws of life why need I call to mind,
Obey'd by birds, and beasts of every kind;
By all the fand'y desert's savage brood,
And all the num'rous offspring of the flood;
Of these none uncontroul'd and lawless rove,
But to some destin'd end spontaneous move.
Led by that instinct, heav'n itself inspires,
Or so much reason, as their state requires;
See all with skill acquire their daily food,
All use those arms, which Nature has bestow'd;
Produce their tender progeny, and feed
With care parental, whilst that care they need!
In these lov’d offices compleatly blest,
No hopes beyond them, nor vain fears molest.
    Man o’er a wider field extends his views;
God through the wonders of his works pursues;
Exploring thence his attributes and laws,
Adores, loves, imitates th’ Eternal Cause;
For sure in nothing we approach so nigh
The great example of divinity,
As in benevolence: the patriot’s soul
Knows not self-center’d for itself to roll,
But warms, enlightens, animates the whole:
Its mighty orb embraces first his friends,
His country next, then man; nor here it ends,
But to the meanest animal descends.
Wise Nature has this social law confirm’d,
By forming man so helpless, and unarmed;
His want of others’ aid, and power of speech
T’ implore that aid, this lesson daily teach.
Mankind with other animals compare,
Single how weak and impotent they are!
But, view them in their complicated state,
Their powers how wondrous, and their strength how great,
When social virtue individuals joins,
And in one solid mass, like gravity combines!
This then’s the first great law by Nature giv’n,
Stamp’d on our souls, and ratified by Heav’n;
All from utility this law approve,
As every private bliss must spring from social love.

Vol. VI.  G  Why
Why deviate then so many from this law?
See passions, custom, vice, and folly draw!
Survey the rolling globe from East to West,
How few, alas! how very few are blest!
Beneath the frozen poles, and burning line,
What poverty and indolence combine,
To cloud with Error's mists the human mind!
No trace of man but in the form we find.

And are we free from error, and distress,
Whom Heav'n with clearer light has pleas'd to blest?
Whom true religion leads? (for she but leads
By soft persuasion, not by force proceeds);
Behold how we avoid this radiant sun!
This proffer'd guide how obstinately shun,
And after Sophistry's vain systems run!

For these as for essentials we engage
In wars, and massacres, with holy rage;
Brothers by brothers' impious hands are slain.
Mistaken zeal, how savage is thy reign!

Unpunish'd vices here so much abound,
All right and wrong, all order they confound:
These are the giants, who the gods defy,
And mountains heap on mountains to the sky.
Sees this th' Almighty Judge, or seeing spares,
And deems the crimes of man beneath his cares?
He sees; and will at last rewards bestow,
And punishments, not less affiu'd for being slow.

Nor
Nor doubt I, though this state confus'd appears,
That ev'n in this God sometimes interferes:
Sometimes, last man should quite his power disown,
He makes that power to trembling nations known:
But rarely this; not for each vulgar end,
As Superstition's idle tales pretend,
Who thinks all foes to God, who are his own,
Directs his thunder, and usurps his throne.

Nor know I, how much a conscious mind
Avails to publish, or rewardankind;
Ev'n in this life thou, impious wretch, must feel
The Fury's scourges, and th' infernal wheel;
From man's tribunal, though thou hast't to run,
Thyself thou canst not, nor thy conscience shuns
What must thou suffer, when each dire disease,
The progeny of vice, thy fabric seize?
Consumption, fever, and the racking pain
Of spasms, and gout, and stone, a frightful train!
When life new, tortures can alone supply,
Life thy sole hope, thou'd hate, yet dread to die.

Should such a wretch to numerous years arrive,
It can be little worth his while to live;
No honours, nor regards, his age attend,
Companions fly; he never could have a friend:
His flatterers leave him, and with wond affright
He looks within, and shudders at the sight:
When threat'ning Death uplifts his pointed dart,
With what impatience he applies to art.

G 2
Life
Life to prolong amidst disease and pains!
Why this, if after it no sense remains?
Why should he choose these miseries to endure,
If Death could grant an everlasting cure?
'Tis plain there's something whispers in his ear,
(Though fain he'd hide it) he has much to fear.
See the reverse! how happy those we find,
Who know by merit to engage mankind!
Prais'd by each tongue, by every heart belov'd,
For Virtues practis'd, and for Arts improv'd:
Their easy aspects shine with smiles serene,
And all is peace and happiness within:
Their sleep is ne'er disturb'd by fears, or strife,
Nor lust, nor wine, impair the springs of life.
Him Fortune cannot sink, nor much elate,
Whose views extend beyond this mortal state;
By age when summon'd to resign his breath,
Calm, and serene, he sees approaching death,
As the safe port, the peaceful silent shore,
Where he may rest, life's tedious voyage o'er:
He, and he only, is of death afraid,
Whom his own conscience has a coward made;
Whilst he, who Virtue's radiant course has run,
Descends like a serenely-setting sun:
His thoughts triumphant Heaven alone employs,
And hope anticipates his future joys.
So good, so blast, th' illustrious 4 Hugh we find;
Whose image dwells with pleasure on my mind;
The Mitre's glory, Freedom's constant friend,
In times which ask'd a champion to defend;
Who, after near a hundred virtuous years,
His senses perfect, free from pains and fears,
Replete with life, with honours, and with age,
Like an applauded actor left the stage;
Or like some victor in th' Olympic games,
Who, having run his course, the crown of Glory claims.
From this just contrast plainly it appears,
How Conscience can inspire both hopes and fears:
But whence proceed these hopes, or whence this dread,
If nothing really can affect the dead?
See all things join to promise and presage,
The sure arrival of a future age!
Whate'er their lot is here, the good and wise
Nor doat on life, nor perversely despise.
An honest man, when Fortune's storms begin,
Has Consolation always sure within;
And, if she sends a more propitious gale,
He's pleas'd, but not forgetful it may fail.
Nor fear that he, who fits so loose to life,
Should too much shun its labours, and its strive;
And, scorning wealth, contented to be mean,
Shrink from the duties of this building scene;

Or, when his country's safety claims his aid,
Avoid the sight, inglorious and afraid:
Who scorns life most must surely be most brave.
And he, who power contemns, be least a slave:
Virtue will lead him to Ambition's ends,
And prompt him to defend his country, and his friends.

But still his merit you can not regard,
Who thus pursues a posthumous reward:
His soul, you cry, is uncorrupt and great;
Who, quite uninfluenc'd by a future state,
Embraces Virtue from a nobler sense
Of her abstracted, native excellence,
From the self-conscious joy her essence brings.
The beauty, fitness, harmony of things.
It may be so: yet he deserves applause,
Who follows where instructive Nature draws:
Aims at rewards by her indulgence given,
And soars triumphant on her wings to Heaven.

Say what this venal virtuous man pursues,
No mean rewards, no mercenary views;
Not wealth usurious, or a numerous train,
Not fame by fraud acquir'd, or title vain!
He follows but where Nature points the road,
Rising in Virtue's school, till he ascends to God.

But we, th' inglorious common herd of man,
Sail without compass, toil without a plan;
In Fortune's varying forms for ever tost,
Shadows pursue, that in pursuit are lost;
Mere infants all, 'till life's extremest day,
Scrambling for toys, then tossing them away,
Who rests of Immortality assur'd
Is safe, whatever ills are here endur'd:
He hopes not vainly in a world like this
To meet with pure uninterrupted bliss;
For good and ill, in this imperfect state,
Are ever mix'd by the decrees of Fate.
With Wisdom's richest harvest Folly grows,
And baleful hemlock mingles with the rose;
All things are blended, changeable, and vain,
No hope, no wish, we perfectly obtain;
God may perhaps (might human Reason's line Pretend to fathom infinite design)
Have thus ordain'd things, that the restless mind
No happiness compleat on earth may find;
And, by this friendly chastisement made wise,
To Heaven her safest, best retreat may rise.

Come then, since now in safety we have past
Through Error's rocks, and see the port at last,
Let us review, and recollect the whole.—
Thus stands my argument.—The thinking soul
Cannot terrestrial or material be,
But claims by Nature Immortality:
God, who created it, can make it end,
We question not, but cannot apprehend
He will; because it is by him endued
With strong ideas of all-perfect Good.

G 4

With
With wond'rous powers to know, and calculate
Things too remote from this our earthly state;
With sure presages of a life to come,
All false and useless, if beyond the tomb
Our beings cease: we therefore can't believe
God either acts in vain, or can deceive.

If every rule of equity demands,
That Vice and Virtue from th' Almighty's hands
Should due rewards and punishments receive,
And this by no means happens whilst we live;
It follows, that a time must surely come,
When each shall meet their well-adjusted doom:
Then shall this scene, which now to human sight
 Seems so unworthy Wisdom infinite,
A system of consummate skill appear,
And, every cloud dispers'd, be beautiful and clear.

Doubt we of this! what solid proof remains,
That o'er the world a wise Disposer reigns?
Whilst all Creation speaks a power divine;
Is it deficient in the main design?
Not so: the day shall come, (pretend not now Presumptuous to enquire or when, or how)—
But after death shall come th' important day,
When God to all his justice shall display;
Each action with impartial eyes regard,
And in a just proportion punish and reward.
THE ARBOUR:

AN ODE TO CONTENTMENT.

BY MR. THOMAS COLE.

To these lone shades, where Peace delights to dwell,
May Fortune oft permit me to retreat:
Here bid the world, with all its cares, farewell,
And leave its pleasures to the rich and great.

Oft as the summer's fun shall cheer this scene
With that mild gleam which points his parting ray,
Here let my soul enjoy each eve serene,
Here share its calm, 'till life's declining day.

No glad some image then should 'scape my sight,
From these gay flowers, which border near my eye,
To you bright cloud, that decks, with richest light,
The gilded mantle of the western sky.

With ample gaze I'd trace that ridge remote,
Where opening cliffs disclose the boundless main;
With earnest ken from each low hamlet note
The steeple's summit peeping o'er the plain.

What various worlds that rural landscape fill,
Where mingling hedge-rows beauteous fields include;
And prudent Culture, with industrious skill,
Her chequered scene of crops and fallows shows.

* Of Queen's College, Cambridge.
How should I love to mark that rivulet's maze,
Through which it works its untaught course along:
Whilst near its grassy banks the herd shall graze,
And blithesome milkmaid chant her thoughtless song.
Still would I note the shades of length'ning sheep,
As scatter'd o'er the hill's stilt brow they rove;
Still note the day's last glimm'ring lustre creep
From off the verge of yonder upland grove.

Nor should my leisure seldom wait to view
The flow-wing'd rooks in homeward train succeed;
Nor yet forbear the swallow to pursu,
With quicker glance, close skimming o'er the mead.

But mostly here should I delight t'explore
The bounteous laws of Nature's mystic power;
Then muse on Him who blesseth all her store,
And give to solemn thoughts the sober hour,

Let mirth unenvy'd laugh with proud disdain,
And deem it spleen one moment thus to waste;
If so she keep far hence her noisy train,
Nor interrupt those joys she cannot taste.

Far sweeter streams shall flow from Wisdom's spring,
Than she receives from Folly's coziest bowl;
And what delights can her chief dainties bring,
Like those which feast the heavenly-pensive soul?

Hail,
Hail, Silence, thou art my frequent guest;
For thou art wont my gratitude to raise,
As high as wonder can the theme suggest,
Where'er I meditate my Maker's praise.

What joy for turn'd Pity to learn
All that my Christian solitude can teach,
Where weak-eyed Reason's self may well discern
Each clearer truth the gospel designs to preach?

No object here but may convince the mind
Of more than thoughtful honesty shall need;
Nor can Suspense long question here to find Sufficient evidence to fix its creed.

'Tis God that gives this hovel its awful gloom;
His arched verdure does its roof invest;
He breathes the life of fragrance on its bloom;
And with his kindness makes its owner blest.

Oh, may the guidance of thy grace attend
The use of all thy bounty shall below;
Left folly should mistake its sacred end,
Or vice convert it into means of woe.

Incline and aid me still my life to steer,
As conscience dictates what to shun or emulate;
Nor let my heart feel anxious hope or fear,
For aught this world can give me or refuse.

Then
To him I owe each fair instructive page,
Where Science tells me what her sons have known;
Collects their choicest works from every age,
And makes me wise with knowledge not my own.

Books rightly read may every state secure,
From fortune's evils may our peace defend;
May teach us how to stem, or to endure,
The foe malignant, and the faithless friend.

Should raged Want withdraw all outward aid,
Kind flowers of inward comfort they can bring;
Should keen Disease life's tainted stream invade,
Sweet to the soul from these pure health may spring.

Should both at once man's weakly frame infest;
Some letter'd charm may still relief supply;
Gainst all events prepare his patient breast,
And make him quite resigned to live, or die.

For though no words can time or fate restrain;
No sounds suppress the call of Nature's voice;
Though neither rhymes, nor spells, can conquer pain,
Not magic's self can wretchedness our choice.

Yet reason, while it forms the subtle plan,
Some pure source of pleasure to explore,
Must deem it vain for that poor pilgrim, man,
To think of seeing till his journey's o'er.
Must deem each fruitless toil, by heaven design'd
To teach him where to look for real bliss;
Else why should heaven excite the hope to find
What-balk'd pursuit must here for ever miss?

THE GROTTO:
AN ODE TO SILENCE

BY THE SAME.

COME, musling Silence, nor refuse to shed
Thy sober influence o'er this darkling cell:
The desart waste and lonely plain
Could ne'er confine thy peaceful reign;
Nor dost thou only love to dwell
'Mid the dark mansions of the vaulted dead:
For still at eve's serenest hour
All Nature owns thy soothing power:
Oft haft thou deign'd with me to rove,
Beneath the calm sequester'd grove;
Oft deign'd my secret steps to lead
Along the dewy pathless mead;
Or up the dusky lawn, to spy
The last faint gleamings of the twilight sky.
Then wilt thou still thy pensive vot'ry meet,
Oft as he calls thee to this gloomy seat:

For
For here, with solemn mystic rite,
Wert thou invok'd to consecrate the ground,
Ere these rude walls were rear'd remote from sight,
Or ere with moss this flaggy roof was crown'd.

Hall! blessed parent of each purer thought,
That doth at once the heart exalt and mend!
Here wilt thou never fail to find
My vacant solitude inclin'd
Thy serious lessons to attend.

For they I ween shall be with goodness fraught,
Whether thou bid me meditate
On man, in untaught Nature's state;
How far this life he ought to prize;
How far its transient scenes despise;
What heights his reason may attain,
And where its proud attempts are vain;
What toils his virtue ought to brave,
For Hope's rewarding joys beyond the grave:
Or if in man redeem'd you bid me trace
Each wond'rous proof of heaven's transcendent grace;
Then breathe some sparks of that celestial fire,
Which in the raptur'd seraph glows above,
Where fainting myriads crowd the joyful choir,
And harp their praises round the throne of love.
The trifling sons of Levity and Pride
Hence shall thy awful seriousness exclude;
Nor shall loud Riot's thoughtless train
With frantic mirth this grotto profane.
No foe to peace shall here intrude.
For thou wilt kindly bid each sound subside;
Save such as soothe the list'ning sense,
And serves to aid thy influence:
Save where, soft-breathing o'er the plain,
Mild Zephyr waves the ruffling grain:
Or where some stream, from rocky source,
Slow trickles down its ceaseless course:
Or where the sea's imperfect roar
Serves gently murmur'ing from the distant shore.
But most in Philomel, sweet bird of night,
In plaintive Philomel, is thy delight:
For she, or studious to prolong her grief,
Or oft to vary her exaustless lay,
With frequent pause, from thee shall seek relief,
Nor close her strain, till dawns the noisy day.

Without thy aid, to happier tasteful art,
No deep instructive science could prevail:
For only where thou dost preside,
Can wit's inventive powers be tried:
And reason's better task would fail,
Did not thy haunts the serious theme impart.
The critic, that with plodding head,
Toils o'er the learning of the dead;
Vol. VI. H The
The cloister'd hermit that explores,
By midnight lamp, religion's stores;
Each sage that marks, with thoughtful gaze,
The lunar orb, or planet's maze;
And every bard, that strays along
The sylvan shade, intent on sacred song;
Shall all to thee those various praises give,
Which, through thy friendly aid, themselves receive;
For though thou mayst from glory's seats retire,
Where loud applause proclaim the honour'd name;
Yet doth thy modest wisdom still inspire
Each nobler work that swells the voice of Fame.

THE PICTURE OF HUMAN LIFE.

TRANSLATED FROM THE GREEK OF CESES

THE THEBAN. BY MR. T. SCOTT.

Et vitae mundi vita est. Hor.

WHILE Saturn's
fan with solemn step we trod,
And view'd the votive honours of the God;

a A dissenting minister at Ipswich. He was author of a paraphrase on the Book of Job and other performances; and died at Hatton, in the county of Norfolk, November 1775.

b This temple was probably in the city of Thebes, for Ceses was a Theban.

c Devout offerings, for the most part in discharge of vows.

A picture'd
A pictur'd tablet, o'er the portal rais'd,
Attach'd our eye: in wonder lost, we gaz'd.
The pencil there some strange device had wrought,
And fables, all its own, disguis'd the thought.
Nor camp it seem'd, nor city: the design,
Whose moral mock'd our labour to divine,
Was a wall'd court, where rose another bound,
And, higher still, a third still less'ning ground.
The nether area open'd at a gate
Where a vast crowd impatient seem'd to wait.
Within, a group of female figures stood,
In motley dress, a sparkling multitude.
Without, in station at the porch, was seen
A venerable form, in act and mien
Like some great teacher, who with urgent tongue,
Authoritative, warn'd the rushing throng.
From doubt to doubt we wander'd; when appear'd
A fire, who thus the hard solution clear'd:
Strangers, that allegoric scene, I guess,
Conquers your skill, your home-born wits no less.
A foreigner, long since, whose nobler mind
Learning's best culture to strong genius join'd,
Here liv'd, convers'd, and shew'd th' admiring age
Another Samian or Elean sage.
He rear'd this dome to Saturn's awful name,
And gave that portrait to eternal fame.
He reason'd much, high argument he chose,
High as his theme his great conceptions rose.
Such wisdom flowing from a mouth but young,
I heard astonish'd, and enjoy'd it long:
Him oft I heard this moral piece expound,
With nervous eloquence and sense profound.

Father, if liasure with thy will conspire,
Yield, yield that comment to our warm desire.

Free to bestow, I warn you first, beware:
Danger impends, which summons all your care.
Wife, virtuous, blest, whose heart our precepts gain;
Abandon'd, blind, and wretched, who disdain.

For know, our purpos'd theme resembles best
The fam'd Enigma of the Theban pest:
Th' interpreter a plighted crown enjoy'd,
The stupid perish'd, by the Sphinx destroy'd.

Count Folly as a Sphinx to all mankind,
Her problem, How is Good and Ill defin'd?
Misjudging here, by Folly's law we die,
Not instant victims of her cruelty;
From day to day our reasoning part the wounds,
Devours its strength, its noblest powers confounds:

Awakes the last of d Punishment, and tears
The mind with pangs which guilty life prepares,
With opposite effect, where thoughtful skill
Discerns the boundaries of Good and Ill,
Folly must perish; and th' illumin'd breast
To Virtue fav'd, is like th' immortals blest.

Give

---
d The Caeselian and Salmasian editions read wondrous wicked, instead of wondrous bitter.

e Vide ver. 186.
Give audience, then, with no unheeding ear:
O haste, no heedless auditors stand here,
With strong desire, in dread suspense we wait,
So great the blessing, and the bare so great.

Infant, he rais'd his oratorial hand,
And said (our eye he guided with a wand)
Behold life's pencil'd scene, the natal gate,
The numbers thronging into mortal state.
Which danger's path, and which to safety bears,
That ancient, Genius of mankind, declares.
See him aloft, benevolent he bends,
One hand is pointing, one a roll extends.
Reason's imperial code; by heav'n impress'd
In living letters on the human breast.
Oppos'd to him, Delusion plies her part,
With skin of borrow'd snow, and blush of art,
With hypocritic fawn, and eyes aye dance
Whence soft infection steals in every glance.
Her faithless hand presents a crystal bowl,
Whose pois'nous draught intoxicates the soul.
Error and ignorance infus'd, compose
The fatal beverage which her fraud befolows.

Is that the hard condition of our birth?
Must all drink Error who appear on earth?
All; yet in some their measure drowns the mind,
Others but taste, less erring and less blind.
The hill court, or the sensual life.
Plings and resumes, and plunders and bestows,
Caprice divides the blessings and the woes.
Her grace unflable as her tottering ball,
Where'er she smiles, she meditates our fall.
When most we trust her, we are cheated most,
In disolute love we mourn our boast:
Her cruel blast invades our hasty fruit,
And withers all our glory at the root.

What mean those multitudes around her? Why
Such motley attitudes perplex our eye?
Some, in the act of wildest raptures, leap;
In agony some wring their hands, and weep.

Th' unreasoning crowd, to passion's sequel blind,
By passion fir'd, and impotent of mind;
Competitors in clamorous suit, to share
The toys she tosses with regardless air;
Trifles, for solid worth by most pursu'd,
Bright-colour'd vapours and fantastic good:
The pageantry of wealth, the blaze of fame,
Titles, an offspring to extend the name,
Huge strength, or beauty which the strong obey,
The victor's laurel, and despotic sway.

These, humours'd in their vows, with lavish praise
The glory of the gracious goddess raise:
Those other, losers in her chance-full game,
Shorn of their all, or frustrate in their aim,
In murmurs of their hard mishap complain.

And curse her partial and malignant reign.

Now,
Now, further still in this low sensual ground,
Traverse yon flowery mount's sequester'd bound.
In the green center of those citron shades,
'Mong gardens, fountains, flowery walks, and glades,
Voluptuous Sin her powerful spells employs,
Soul to seduce, seducing she destroys.
See! Lewdness, loosely zou’d, her bosom bares,
See! Riot her luxurious bowl prepares:
There stands Avidity, with ardent eye,
There dimpling Adulation smooths her lye.

There faction’d to what end?
In watch for prey,
Fortune’s infatuate favourites of a day.
These they carefs, they flatter, they entreat
To try the pleasures of their soft retreat,
Life disencumber’d, frolicksome, and free,
All ease, all mirth, and high felicity.
Whome’er by their inveigling arts they win,
To tread that magic paradise of Sin,
In airy dance his jocund hours skim round,
Sparkles the bowl, the festal songs resound:
His blood ferments, fir’d by the wanton glance,
And his loose soul dissolves in am’rous trance.
While circulating joys to joys succeed,
While new delights the sweet delirium feed;
The prodigal, in raptur’d fancy, roves
O'er fairy fields, and through Elysian groves:
Sees glittering visions in succession rise,
And laughs at Socrates the chaste and wise.
'Till, sober'd by distress, awake, confus'd,
Amaz'd, he knows himself a wretch abus'd;
A short illusion his imagin'd feast,
Himself the game, himself the slaughter'd beast,
Now, raving for his squander'd wealth in vain,
Slave to those tyrant jilt's he drags their chain:
Compell'd to suffer hard and hungry need,
Compell'd to dare each foul and desperate deed.
Villain, or knave, he joins the sharpening tribe,
Robbs altars, or is perjur'd for a bribe:
Stabs for a purse; his country pawns for gold,
To every crime of blackest horror fold.
Shiftless at length, of all resource bereft,
In the dire gripes of Punishment he's left.

Observe this strait-mouth'd cave: th' unwilling light
Just shews the dismal deep descent to night.
In cent'ry see these haggard crones, whose brows
Rude locks o'erhang, a frown their forehead plows:
Swarthy and foul their thrivell'd skin behold,
And fluttering shreds their vile defence from cold.
High-brandishing her lash, with stern regard,
Stands Punishment, an ever-waking ward;
While full'en Melancholy mopes behind,
Fix'd, with her head upon her knees reclin'd:
And, frantic, with remorseful fury, there
Fierce Anguish stamps, and rends her shaggy hair.
Who that ill-features a man,
Shriv'ring in nakedness, so spare and wan?
And she, whose eye agapes with horror stare,
Whose meagre form a sister's likeness bears?
Loud Lamentation, wild Despair. All these,
Fell vultures, the devoted caitiff seize.
Ah dreadful durance! with these fiends to dwell!
What tongue the terrors of his soul can tell!
Worry'd by these foul fiends, the wretch begins
Sharp penance, wages of remember'd sins:
Then deeper sinks, plunged in the pit of Woe,
Worse suff'ring in worse hell to undergo:
Useless, rare guest, Repentance o'er the gloom
Diffuse her radiance, and repeal his doom.
She comes! meek-ey'd, array'd in grave attire,
See Right Opinion, join'd with Good Desire,
Handmaids of Truth: with those, an adverse pair
(False Wisdom's minions, that deceiving fair)
Attend her solemn step: the furies flee.
Come forth, she calls, come forth to liberty,
Guilt-harrased thrall: thy future lot decide,
And, pondering well, elect thy future guide.
Momentous option! choosing right, he'll find
A sovereign medicine for his ulcer'd mind;
Led to True Wisdom, whose cathartic bowl
Recovers and beatifies the soul.
Misguided else, a counterfeit he'll gain,
Whose art is only to amuse the brain:

From
From vice to studious folly now he flies,
From blis still erring, still betray'd by lyes.

O heavens! where end the rights we mortals run?
How dreadful this, and yet how hard to find!
Say, father, what distinctive marks declare
That counterfeit of Wisdom?

8 View her there,
At yonder gate, with decent port, she stands,
Her spotless form that second court commands:
Styl'd Wisdom by the crowd, the thinking few
Know her disguise, the phantom of the true:
Skill'd in all learning, skill'd in every art
To grace the head, not meliorate the heart.

The sav'd, who meditate their noble flight
From a bad world, to Wisdom's lofty height,
Just touching at this inn, for short repast,
Then speed their journey forward to its last.

This the sole path?

Another path there lies,
The plain man's path, without proud Science wife.

Who they, which traverse this deluder's bound?
A busy scene, all thought or action round.
Her lovers, whom her specious beauty warms,
Who grasp, in vision, Truth's immortal charms,
Vain of the glory of a false embrace:
Fierce syllogistic tribes, a wrangling race.

§ The second court, or the studious life.
Bards rapt beyond the moon on Fancy's wings,
And mighty masters of the vocal strings:
Those who on labour'd speeches waste their oil,
Those who in crabbed calculations toil,
Who measure earth, who climb the starry road,
And human fates by heav'nly signs forebode,
Pleasure's philosophers, Lyceum's pride,
Disdainful soaring up to heights untry'd.
All who in learned triftles spin their wit,
Or comment on the works by triflers writ.

Who are ye virtuous females, like in face
To the lewd harlots, in the neither space,
-Fire agents of voluptuous Sin?
The same.

Admitted here?

Ev'n here, eternal shame!
They boast some rarer lefs ignoble spoils,
Art, wit, and reason, tangled in their toils.
And Fancy, with th' Opinions in her rear,
Enjoys these studious walks, no stranger here:
Where wild hypothesis, and learn'd romance
Too oft lead up the philosophic dance.
Still these ingenious heads, alas! retain
Delusion's dole, still the vile dregs remain
Of ignorance with madding folly join'd,
And a foul heart pollutes th' embellish'd mind.
Nor will presumption from their souls reject,
Nor will they from one vicious plague be freed.
'Till,
Till, weary of these vanities, they've found
Th' exalted way to Truth's enlighten'd ground,
Quaff'd her cathartic, and all cleans'd within,
By that strong energy, from pride and sin,
Are heal'd and fav'd. But loitering here they spend
Life's precious hours in thinking to no end:
From science up to science let them rise,
And arrogate the swelling style of wise;
Their wisdom's folly, impotent and blind,
Which cures not one distemper of the mind.

Enough. Discover now the faithful road,
Which mounts us to the joys of Truth's abode.
Survey this solitary waste, which rears
Nor bush nor herb, nor cottage there appears.
At distance see yon strait and lonely gate
(No crowds at the forbidding entrance wait)
Its avenue a rugged rocky soil,
Travell'd with painful step and tedious toil.
Beyond the wicket, tow'ring in the skies
See Difficulty's cragged mountain rise,
Narrow and sharp th' ascent; each edge a brink,
Whence to vast depth dire precipices sink.

Is that the way to Wisdom? Dreadful way!
The landscape frowns with danger and dismay.
Yet higher still, around the mountain's brow
Winds yon huge rock, whose steep smooth sides allow
No track. Its top two sister figures grace,
Health's rosy habit glowing in their face.

With
With arms pretend ed o’er the verge they lead,
The promptitude of friendship in their mien.
The powers of Cont inence and Patience, there
Station’d by Wisdom, her commission bear
To rouse the spirit of her fainting son
Thus far advance’d, and urge and urge him on.
Courage! they call, the coward’s sloth disdain:
Yet, yet awhile, the noble toil sustain:
A lovely path soon opens to your sight.

But ah! how climb’d that rock’s lofty height?
These generous guides, who Virtue’s course befriend,
In succour of her pilgrim swift descend,
Draw up their trembling charge; then, smiling, greet
With kind command to rest his weary feet,
With their own force his panting breast they arm,
And with their own intrepid spirit warm:
Next, plight their guidance in his future way
To Wisdom, and in rapt’rous view display
The blissful road (there it invites your eyes)
How smooth and easy to the foot it lies,
Through beauteous land, from all annoyance clear,
Of thorny evil and perplexing fear.

h Yon lofty grove’s delicious bowers to gain,
You cross th’ expanse of this enamell’d plain;
A meadow with eternal beauty bright,
Beneath a purer heav’n, o’erflow’d with light.

h The third court, or the virtuous life.

Full
Full in the center of the plain, behold
A court far-flaming with its wall of gold
And gate of diamond, where the righteous rest;
This clime their home, the country of the blest:
Here all the Virtues dwell, communion sweet!
With Happiness, who rules the peaceful seat.
In elevation, at th' effulgent portal, see
A beauteous form, of mildest majesty.
Her eyes how piercing! how sedate her mien!
Mature in life, her countenance serene:
Spirit and solid thought each feature shows,
And her plain robe with state unstudied flows.
She stands upon a cube of marble, fix'd
As the firm rock, two lovely nymphs betwixt,
Her daughters, copies of her looks and air,
Her candid Truth, and sweet Persuasion there:
She, she is Wisdom. In her steadfast eye
Behold th' expressive type of certainty:
Certain her way, and permanent the deed
Of gift substantial to her friends decreed.
She gives magnanimous contempt of fear,
She gives the confidence erect and clear,
And bids th' invulnerable mind to know
Her safety from the future shafts of woe.
O treasure, richer than the sea or land!
But why without the walls her destin'd stand?
There standing, she presents her potent bowl,
Divine cathartic, which restores the soul.

This
This asks a comment.

In some dire disease,
Macbaon's skill first purges off the lees:
Then clear and strong the purple current flows,
And life renew'd in every member grows:
But if the patient all controul despise,
Just victim of his stubborn will he dies.
So Wisdom, by her rules, with healing art
Expels Delusion's mischiefs from the heart;
Blindness, and error, and high-boasting pride,
Intemp'rance, lust, fierce wrath's impetuous tide,
Hydropic avarice, all the plagues behind
Which in the first mad court oppress'd the mind.
Thus purg'd, her pupil through the gate she brings,
The Virtues hail their guest, the guest enraptured sings.
Behold the spotless band, celestial charms!
Scene that with awe chastises whom it warms:
No harlotry, no paint, no gay excess,
But beauty unaffected as their drefs.
See Knowledge grasping a refulgent star,
See Fortitude in panoply of war:
Justice her equal scale aloft displays,
And rights both human and divine she weighs.
There Moderation, all the pleasures bound
In brazen chains her dreaded feet surround.
There bounteous Liberality expands
To want, to worth, her ever-loaded hands.

The
The florid hue of Temperance, her side
Adorn'd by Health, a nymph in blooming pride.
Lo, soft-ey'd Meekefs holds a curbing rein,
Anger's high-mettled spirit to restrain:
While Moral Order tunes her golden lyre,
And white-rob'd Probity compleats the choir.

O fairest of all fair! O blissful state!
What hopes sublime our ravish'd soul dilate!
Substantial hopes, if, by the doctrine taught,
The fashion'd manners are to habit wrought.
Yes; 'tis resolv'd. We'll every nerve employ.
Live, then, restor'd; and reap the promis'd joy.

But whither do the Virtues lead their trust?
To Happiness, reverter of the just.

Look upward to the hill beyond the grove,
A sovereign pile extends its front above:
Stately and strong, the lofty castle stands,
Its boundless prospect all the courts commands.
Within the porch, high on the jasper throne,
Th' Imperial Mother by her form is known;
Bright as the morn, when smiling on the hills,
Earth, air, and sea, with vernal joy they fills.
Rich without lavish cost her vest behold
In colours of the sky, and fring'd with gold:
A tiar, wreath'd with every flow'r that blows
Of liveliest tints, around her temples glows:
Eternal bloom her snowy temples binds,
Fearless of burning suns and blasting winds.

Vol. VI.

I

Now,
Now, with a crown of wond'rous power, her hand
(Asst'ant, round her, all the virtues stand)
Adorns her hero, honourable meed
Of conquests won by many a valiant deed.
What conquests?

Formidable beasts subdu'd:
Lab'ring he fought, he routed, he pursu'd.
Once, a weak prey, beneath their force he cowr'd,
O'erthrown, and worry'd, and well-nigh devour'd:
Till rouz'd with his inglorious sloth, possest
With generous ardour kindling in his breast,
Lord of himself, the victor now constrains
Those hostile monsters in his powerful chains.

Explain those savage beasts at war with man.
Error and Ignorance, which head the van,
Heart-gnawing Grief, and loud-lamenting Woe,
Incontinence, a wild-destroying foe,
Rapacious Avarice; cruel numbers more:
O'er all he triumphs now, their slave before.

O great achievements! more illustrious far
These triumphs, than the bloody wreaths of war.
But, say; what salutary power is sped
By the fair crown, which decks the hero's head?

Most beatific. For possessing this
He lives, rich owner of man's proper bliss:
Bliss independent or on wealth or power,
Fame, birth, or beauty, or voluptuous hour.
His hopes divorce'd from all exterior things,
Within himself the fount of pleasure springs;
Springs ever in the self-approving breast,
And his own honest heart's a constant feast.

Where, next, his steps?

He measures back his way,

Conducted by the Virtues, to survey.

His first abode. The giddy crowd, below,
Waiting their wretched span in crime, they show;
How in the whirl of passions they are tost,
And, shipwreck'd on the lurking shelves, are lost;
Here fierce Ambition haling in her chain
The mighty, there a despicable train
Impure in Lusts inglorious fetter bound,
And slaves of Avarice rooting up the ground:
Thralls of Pride, thralls of swelling Pride,
Unnumber'd fools, unnumber'd plagues beside.
All-powerless they to burst the galling band,
To spring aloft, and reach yon happy land,
Entangled, impotent the way to find,
The clear instruction blotted from their mind.

Which the Good Genius gave; Guilt's gloomy fears
Becloud their suns and fadden all their years.

I stand convinc'd, but yet perplex'd in thought
Why to review a well-known scene he's brought.
Scene rudely known. Uncertain and confus'd,
His judgement by illusions was abus'd.
His evil was not evil, nor his good
Aught else but vanity misunderstood.
Confounding good and evil, like the throng,
His life, like theirs, was action always wrong.
Enlighten'd now in the true bliss of man,
He shapes his alter'd course by Wisdom's plan:
And, blest himself, beholds with weeping eyes
The madding world an hospital of sighs.

This retrospectio ended, where succeds
His course?

Where'er his wife volition leads.
Where'er it leads, safety attends him still:
Not safer, should he on Apollo's hill,
Among the Nymphs, among the vocal Powers,
Dwell in the Sanctum of Corycian bowers:
Honour'd by all, the friend of human-kind,
Belov'd physician of the sick mind;
Not Esculapius more, whose power to save
Redeems his patient from the yawning grave.

But never more shall his old restless foes
Awake his fears, nor trouble his repose?
Never. In righteous habitude inst"d,
From Passion's baneful anarchy secured,
In each enticing scene, each instant hard,
That sovereign antidote his mind will guard;
Like him, who, of some virtuous drug poss'est,
Grasps the fell viper coil'd within her nest,

Hear
Hears her dire hissings, sees her terrors rise,
And, unappall'd, destruction's tooth defies.

_Yon troops in motion from the mount explain,
Various to view; for there a goodly train,
With garlands crown'd, advance with comely pace,
Noble their port, and in each tranquil face
Joy sparkles: others, a bare-headed throng,
Batter'd and gash'd, drag their slow steps along,
Captive of some strange female crew._

The crown'd,
Long seeking, safe arriv'd at _Wisdom's_ bound,
Exult in her imparted grace. _The rest_,
Those on whom _Wisdom_, unprevailing, preft
Her healing aid; rejected from her care,
In evil plight their wicked days they wear:
Those too, who _Difficulty's_ hill had gain'd,
There safely stopp'd, by daftard sloth detain'd:
Apostate now, in thorny wilds they rove,
Pursuing furies scourge the caitiff drove:
_Sorrows_ which gnaw, _remorseful Thoughts_ which tear,
_Blindness of mind_, and _heart-oppressing Fear_,
With all the contumelious rout of _Shame_,
And every ill, and every hateful name.
Relap'sd to _Lewdness_, and her _sensual Queen_,
Unblushing at themselves, but drunk with spleen,
_Wisdom's_ high worth their canker'd tongues dispraise,
Revile her children, and blaspHEME her ways.

_Apostates._

_Deluded_
For short reflection, at her table sit,
And taste what science may your palate hit:
Then wing your journey forward till you reach
True Wisdom, and imbibe the truths she'll teach.

Such is th' advice the friendly Genius gives:
He perishes who scorns; who follows, lives.
And thus this moral piece instructs; if aught
Is mystic still, reveal your doubting thought.

Thanks, generous Sire; tell, soon, the transient bait,
The Genius grants us at False Wisdom's gate.

Whate'er in arts or sciences is found,
Of solid use, in their capacious round,
These, Plato reasons, like a curbing rein,
Unruly youth from devious starts restrain.

Must we, solicitous our souls to save,
Assistance from these previous studies crave?

Necessity there's none. We'll not deny
Their merit in some less utility;
But they contribute, we aver, no part
To heal the manners and amend the heart.

An author's meaning, in a tongue unknown,
May glimmer through translation in our own;
Yet, masters of his language, we might gain
Some trivial purposes by tedious pain.
So in the sciences, though rudely taught,
We may attain the little that we ought;

In Natural knowledge, how far useful, and when unprofitable and hurtful.

Yet:
Yet, accurately known, they might convey
More light, not wholly useless in its way.
But virtue may be reach'd, through all her rules,
Without the curious subtilties of schools.

How! not the learn'd excel the common shoe,
In powerful aids to meliorate the soul?
Blind as the crowd, alas! to good and ill,
Intangled by the like corrupted will,
What boas the man of letters o'er the rest?
Skill'd in all tongues, of all the arts possest,
What hinders but he sink into a lot,
A libertine, or villain in a plot,
Miser, or knave, or whatsoever you'll name
Of moral lunacy and reason's shame?

Scandals too rife!

How, then, for living right
Avail those studies, and their vaunted light
Beyond the vulgar?

Nothing. But disclose
The cause from whence this strange appearance grows,
Held by a potent charm in this retreat
They dwell, content with nearness to the seat
Of Virtuous Wisdom.

Near, methinks, in vain:
Since numbers, oft, from out the nether plain,
'Scap'd from the snares of Lewdness and Excess,
Undevious to her lofty station presi,
Yet pass these latter'd clans.

What,
PARADISE REGAINED.

By H. T.

I.

Seek not for Paradise with curious eye
In Asiatic climes, where Tigris' wave,
Mix'd with Euphrates in tumultuous joy,
Doth the broad plains of Babylonia lave.

II.

'Tis gone with all its charms; and like a dream,
Like Babylon itself, is swept away;
Bestow one tear upon the mournful theme,
But let it not the gentle heart disdain.

III.

For know where'er love and virtue guide,
They lead us to a state of heavenly bliss,
Where joys unknown to guilt and shame preside,
And pleasures unalloy'd each hour increase.

IV.

Behold that grove, whose waving boughs admit,
Through the live colonade, the fruitful hill,
A moving prospect with fat herds replete,
Whose lowing voices all the valleys fill.

V. There
V.
There through the spiry grass where the brook,
(By yon tall poplar which erects the head
Above the verdure of the neighbouring tank,)
And gently murmurs o'er the adjoining mead.

VI.
Philander and Cleora, happy pair,
Taste the cool breezes of the gentle wind;
Their breasts from guilt, their looks are free from care,
Sure index of a calm contented mind.

VII.
'Tis here in virtuous lore the studious fair
Informs her babes, nor scorns herself to improve,
While in his smile she lives, whose pleasing care
Dispens'd knowledge from the lips of love.

VIII.
No wild desires can spread their poison here,
No discontent their peaceful hours attend;
False joys, nor flattering hopes, nor servile fear,
Their gentle minds with jarring passions rend.

IX.
Here oft in pleasing solitude they rove,
Recounting o'er the deeds of former days;
With inward joy their well-spent time approve,
And feel a recompence beyond all praise.

X.
Or in sweet converse through the grove, or near
The fountain's birnk, or where the arbour's shade
Beats back the heat, fair Virtue's voice they hear,
More musical by sweet digressions made.

XI. With
XI.
With calm dependance every good they taste,
   Yet feel their neighbours' wants with kind regret,
Nor cheer them (ah! ah! ah!)
   But deal forth blessings round their happy seat.

XII.
'Tis to such virtue, that the Power Supreme
   The choicest of his blessings hath design'd,
And fixed them plenteous over every clime,
   The calm delights of an untainted mind.

XIII.
Ere yet the sad effects of foolish pride,
   And mean ambition still employ'd in strife,
And luxury did o'er the world preside,
   Deprav'd the taste, and pall'd the joys of life.

XIV.
For such the Spring, in richest mantle clad,
   Pours forth her beauties through the gay parterre:
And Autumn's various bosom is o'erspread
   With all the blushing fruits that crown the year.

XV.
Or Summer tempts, in golden beams array'd,
   Which o'er the fields in borrow'd luftre glow,
To meditate beneath the cooling shade
   Their happy state, and whence their blessings flow.

XVI.
E'en rugged Winter varies but their joy,
   Painting the cheek with fresh vermilion-hue;
And those rough frosts which softer frames annoy
   With vig'rous health their slack'ning nerves renew.

XVII. From XVII.
From the dark bosom of the dappled Morn
To Phæbus shining with meridian light,
Or when mild Evening does the sky adorn,
Or the pale moon rides through the spangled night;

 XVIII.
The varying scenes in every virtuous soul
Each pleasing change with various pleasures blest,
Raise cheerful hopes, and anxious fears control,
And form a Paradise of inward peace.

To the Right Hon. Sir ROBERT WALPOLE.

—Quod canset amicus, ut si
Causis iter monstrare velit.—

Hor.

By the Hon. Mr. DODINGTON, afterwards Lord MELCOMBE.

THO' strength of genius, by experience taught,
Gives thee to found the depth of human thought,
To trace the various workings of the mind,
And rule the secret springs that rule mankind;
Rare gift! yet, Walpole, wilt thou condescend
To listen, if thy unexperienced friend
Can aught of use impart, though void of skill,
And raise attention by sincere good will:

For
For friendship sometimes want of parts supplies,
The heart may furnish what the head denies.
As, when the rapid Rhine o'er swelling tides,
To grace old Ocean's coast, in triumph rides,
Though rich in source, he drains a thousand springs,
Nor scorns the tribute each small rivulet brings:
So thou shalt hence absorb each feeble ray,
Each dawn of meaning in thy brighter day;
Shalt like, or, where thou canst not like, excuse,
Since no mean interest shall prophane the Muse;
No malice wrapt in truth's disguise offend,
No flattery taint the freedom of a friend.
When first a generous mind surveys the great,
And views the crowds that on their fortune wait,
Pleas'd with the shew, (though little understood,) He only seeks the power, to do the good:
Thinks, till he tries, 'tis godlike to dispose,
And gratitude still springs, when bounty flows;
That every grant sincere affection wins,
And where our wants have end, our love begins.
But they who long the paths of state have trod,
Learn from the clamours of the murm'ring crowd,
Which cram'd, yet craving, still their gates besiege,
'Tis easier far to give, than to oblige.
This of thy conduct seems the nicest part,
The chief perfection of the statesman's art,
To give to fair assent a fairer face,
Or soften a refusal into grace.

But
But few there are, that can be freely kind,
Or know to fix the favours on the mind;
Hence some where'er they would oblige, offend,
And while they make the fortune lose the friend:
Still give unthank'd; still squander, not bestow;
For great men want not what to give, but how.
The race of men that follow courts, 'tis true;
Think all they get, and more than all, their due;
Still ask, but ne'er consult their own defects,
And measure by their interest, not their parts.
From this mistake so many men we see
But ill become the thing they wish to be:
Hence discontent and fresh demands arise;
More power, more favour in the great man's eyes:
All feel a want, though none the cause suspects,
But hate their patron for their own defects.
Such none can please; but who reforms their hearts,
And when he gives them places, gives them parts.
As these o'erprize their worth, so fuire the great
May sell their favours at too 'dear a rate.
When merit pities while clamour is preferr'd,
And long attachment waits among the herd;
When no distinction, where distinction's due,
Marks from the many the superior few:
When strong cabal constrains them to be just,
And makes them give at last, because they must;
What hopes that men of real worth should prize
What neither friendship gives, nor merit buys?
Ambition here shall at due distance stand;
Nor is wit dangerous in an honest hand:
Besides, if failings at the bottom lie,
He views those failings with a lover's eye.
Though small his genius, let him do his best,
Our wishes and belief supply the rest:
Let others barter servile faith for gold,
His friendship is not to be bought or sold.
Fierce opposition he unmoved shall face,
Modest in favour, daring in disgrace:
To share thy adverse fate alone pretend,
In power a servant, out of power a friend.
Here pour thy favours in an ample flood,
Indulge thy boundless thirst of doing good.
Nor think that good alone to him confin'd;
Such to oblige is to oblige mankind.
If thus thy mighty master's steps thou trace,
The brave to cherish, and the good to grace,
Long shalt thou stand from rage and faction free,
And teach us long to love the king and thee;
Or fall a victim dangerous to the foe,
And make him tremble when he strikes the blow;
While honour, gratitude, affection join,
To deck thy close, and brighten thy decline.
Illustrious doom! the great when thus displeas'd,
With friendship guarded, and with virtue gras'd,
In awful ruin, like Rome's senate, fall
The prey and worship of the wond'ring Gaul.
No doubt to genius some reward is due
(Excluding that were satirizing you):
But yet believe thy undesigning friend;
When truth and genius for thy choice contend,
Though both have weight, when in the balance cast,
Let probity be first, and parts the last.

On these foundations if thou dar'lt be great,
And check the growth of folly and deceit,
When party rage shall drop through length of days,
And calumny be ripen'd into praise,
Then future times shall to thy worth allow
That fame, which envy would call flattery now.

Thus far my zeal, though for the task unfit,
Has pointed out the rocks where others split:
By that inspir'd, though stranger to the Nine,
And negligent of any fame but thine,
I take that friendly, but superfluous part,
That acts from nature what I teach from art.

To a Lady on a Landscape of her Drawing.

By Mr. Parrot.

Behold the magic of Therefa's hand!
A new creation blooms at her command.
Touch'd into life the vivid colours glow,
Catch the warm stream, and quicken as they flow.
[ 250 ]

The ravish'd sight the pleasing landscape fills,
Here sink the valleys, and there rise the hills.
Not with more horror nods bleak Calpe’s height,
Than here the pictur’d rock astounds the sight.
Not Thames more devious-winding leaves his source,
Than here the wand’ring rivers shape their course.
Obliquely lab’ring runs the gurgling rill;
Still murm’ring runs, or seems to murmur still.
An aged oak, with hoary moss o’erspread,
Here lifts aloft its venerable head;
There overshadowing hangs a sacred wood,
And nods inverted in the neigh’ring flood.
Each tree as in its native forest shoots,
And blushing bends with Autumn’s golden fruits.
Thy pencil lends the rose a lovelier hue,
And gives the lily fairer to our view.
Here fruits and flow’rs adorn the varied year,
And paradise with all its sweets is here.
There flowing to its fall a tower appears,
With tempests shaken, and a weight of years.
The dain’ded meadow, and the woodland green,
In order rise, and fill the various scene.

Some parts, in light magnificently dress’d,
Obtrusive enter, and stand all confess’d,
Whilst others decently in shades are thrown,
And by concealing make their beauties known.

- Gibraltar.

Alternate
Alternate thus, and mutual is their aid,
The lights owe half their lustre to the shade.
So the bright fires that light the milky way,
Lost and extinguished in the solar ray;
In the sun’s abode pour a flood of light,
And borrow all their brightness from the night.

To cheat our eyes, how well dost thou contrive!
Each object here seems real and alive.
Not more resembling life the figures stand,
Form’d by Lysippus, or by Phidias’ hand.
Unnumber’d beauties in the piece unite,
Rush on the eye, and crowd upon the sight;
At once our wonder and delight you raise,
We view with pleasure, and with rapture praise.

ODE to C U P I D on Valentine’s Day.

C O M E, thou rosy-dimpled boy,
Source of every heart-felt joy.

Leave the blissful bow’rs awhile,
Paphos and the Cyprian isle:
Visit Britain’s rocky shore,
Britons too thy pow’r adore;
Britons hardy, bold, and free,
Own thy laws, and yield to thee.
Source of every heart-felt joy,
Come, thou rosy-dimpled boy.

K 4

Hasle
Haste to Sylvia, haste away:
This is thine, and Hymen's day.
Bid her thy soft bondage wear,
Bid her for Love's rites prepare.
Let the nymphs with many a flower
Deck the sacred nuptial bower.
Thither lead the lovely fair;
And let Hymen too be there.
This is thine, and Hymen's day:
Haste to Sylvia, haste away.

Only while we love, we live;
Love alone can pleasure give,
Pomp and power, and tinsel state,
Those false pageants of the great,
Crowns and sceptres, envied things,
And the pride of Eastern kings,
Are but childish empty toys,
When compar'd to Love's sweet joys,
Love alone can pleasure give;
Only while we love, we live.
To the Worthy, Humane, Generous, Reverend, and Noble, Mr. FREDERICK CORNWALLIS, now Archbishop of Canterbury.

By Dr. SAMUEL DAVIES.

Written in the Year 1743.

In frolic's hour, ere serious thought had birth,
There was a time, my dear Cornwallis, when
Fancy would take me on her airy wing
And waft to views romantic; there display
Some motley vision, shade and sun: the cliff,
O'erhanging sparkling brooks and ruins grey,
Bade me meanders trace, and catch the form
Of varying clouds, and rainbows learn to paint.

Sometimes ambition, bustling by, would twitch
My spirits, and with winning look sublime
Allure to follow. What though steep the track,
Her mountain's top would overpay, when climb'd,
The follower's toil; her temple there was fine,
And lovely thence the prospects. She could tell
Where laurels grew, whence many a wreath antique;
But more advis'd to shun the barren twig,
(What is immortal verdure without fruit?)
And woe some thriving art ; her num'rous mines
Were open to the teacher's skill and praise;
Caught by th' harangue, heart beat, and fluttering pulse.
Sounded irregular marches, to be gone.
What, pause a moment when Ambition calls! No
No, the blood gallops to the distant goal, to confidence;
And throbs to reach it. Let the lame fits still.
When Fortune gentle, at the hill's verge extreme,
Array'd in decent robe, and plain attire,
Smiling approach'd ; and what occasion ask'd
Of climbing? She already provident;
Had cater'd well, if stomach could digest.
Her viands, and a palate not too nice,
Unfit the said, for perilous attempt,
That manly limb requir'd, and nerves tough.
She took, and lay'd me in a vale remote,
Amid the gloomy scene of fir and yew,
On apple ground; where Morpheus strew'd the bed,
Obscurity her curtain round me drew.
And siren Sloth a dull quietus fung.
Sithence no fairy lights, no quick'ning ray,
No stir of pulse, nor objects to entice,
Abroad the spirits; but the cloyster'd heart
Sits squat at home, like pagod in a nitch.
Demure, or grandees, with nod-watching eyes,
And folded arms, in presence of the throne,
Turk, or Indostan—Cities, forums, courts, town.

And
And praying fanhedgius, and drumming wars,
Affect no more than stories told to bed
Lethargic, which at intervals the sick
Hears and forgets, and wakes to doze again.
Instead of converse and variety,
The same trite round, the same stale silent scene:
Such are thy comforts, blessed Solitude!

But Innocence is there, but Peace all kind,
And simple Quiet with her downy couch,
Meads lowing, tune of birds, and lapse of streams;
And Saunter with a book; and warbling Muse,
In praise of hawthorns.—Life's whole business this!
Is it to bask i' th' sun? if so, a snail
Were happy crawling on a southern wall.

Why fits Content upon a cottage hill
At even-tide; and blesteth the coarse meal
In footy corner? why sweet slumbers wait
Th' hard pallet? not because from haunt reioke,
Sequestr'd in a dingle's bushy lap:
'Tis labour makes the peasant's fav'ry fare,
And works out his repose: for ease must ask
The leave of diligence to be enjoy'd.

Oh! listen not to that enchantress Ease
With seeming smile; her palatable cup
By standing grows insipid; and beware
Perdition, for there's poison in the lees.
What health impair'd, and crowds inactive maim'd!
What daily martyrs to her fl感激 cause!
Less strict devoir the Russ and Persian claim
Despotick; and, as subjects long inur'd
To servile burden, grow supine and tame:—
So fares it with our sov'reign, and her train.

What tho' with lure fallacious the pretend
From worldly bondage to set free; what gain
Her votaries? What avails from iron chains
Exempt, if rosy fetters bind as fast?

Befir, and answer your creation's end.
Think we that man with vig'rous pow'r endow'd,
And room to stretch, was destin'd to fit still?
Sluggards are Nature's rebels, slight her laws,
Nor live up to the terms on which they hold
Their vital lease. Laborious terms and hard!
But such the tenure of our earthly state!
Riches and fame are Industry's reward;
The nimble runner courses Fortune down,
And then he banquets, for she feeds the bold.

Think what you owe your country, what yourself.
If splendor charm not, yet avoid the scorn
That treads on lowly stations. Think of some Affiduous booby mounting o'er your head,
And thence with saucy grandeur looking down:
Think of (Reflection's stab!) the pitying friend
With shoulder shrugg'd, and sorry. Think that Time
Has golden minutes, if discreetly seiz'd:
And if some sad example, indolent,
To warn and scare be wanting—think of me.

To
TO HIS FRIEND AND NEIGHBOUR

DR. THOMAS TAYLOR. 1744.

BY THE SAME.

French pow'r, and weak allies, and war, and want—
No more of that, my friend; you touch a string
That hurts my ear. All politics apart,
Except a generous wish, a glowing pray'r
For British welfare, commerce, glory, peace.
Give party to the winds: it is a word,
A phantom sound, by which the cunning great
Whistle to their dependents: a decoy,
To gull th' unwary: where the master stands.
Encouraging his minions, his train'd birds,
Fed and care'st'd, their species to betray.
See, with what hollow blandishment and art
They lead the winged captives to the snare;
Fools! that in open aether might have soar'd,
Free as the air they cut; sipt purest rills;
Din'd with the Thames, or bath'd in crystal lakes.

Heav'n knows, it is not insolence that speaks!
The tribute of respect, to greatness due,
Not the brib'd sycophant more willing pays.

Still,
Still, still as much of party be retain'd,
As principle requires, and sense directs;
Else our vain bark, without a rudder, floats,
The scorn and pastime of each veering gale.

This gentle evening let the fun descend
Untroubled; while it paints your ambient hills
With faded lucre, and a sweet farewell:
Here is our seat. That a castle opposite,
Proud of its woody crest, adorns the scene.

 Dictate, O vers'd in books, and just of taste,
 Dictate the pleasing theme of our discourse.
Shall we trace science from her Eastern home
Chaldean? or the banks of Nile? where Thebes,
Nursing her daughter arts, majestic stood,
And pour'd forth knowledge from an hundred gates.
There first the marble learn'd to mimic form;
The pillar'd temple rose; and pyramids,
Whose undecaying grandeur laughs at Time.
Birth-place of letters; where the sun was shewn
His radiant way, and heavens were taught to roll.

There too the Muses tun'd their earliest lyre,
Warbling soft numbers to Serapis' ear;
'Till, chas'd by tyrants, or a milder clime
Inviting, they remov'd with pilgrim harp,
And all their band of melody to Greece.

* A castle belonging to the Earl of Oxford.
As when a flock of limets, if perchance
Deliver'd from the falcon's talon, fly
With trembling wing to covert, and their notes
Renew, tell every bush of their escape,
And trill their merry thanks to Liberty.

The tuneful tribe, pleas'd with their new abode,
Polish'd the rude inhabitants; whence tales
Of lift'ning woods, and rocks that danc'd to sound,
Hear the full chorus lifting hymns to Jove!
Linus and Orpheus catch the strain; and all
The raptur'd audience utter loud applause!

A song, believe me, was no trifle Then:
Weighty the Muse's talk, and wide her sway:
Her's was Religion; the refounding Fanes
Echo'd her language; Polity was her's;
And the world bow'd to legislative verse.

As states increas'd, and governments were form'd,
Her aid less useful, she retir'd to grots
And shady bow'rs, content to teach and please.
Under her laurel frequent bards repos'd;
Voluble Pindar troll'd his rapid song,
And Sappho breath'd her spirited complaint.
Hence sprung the tragic rage, the lyric charm,
And Homer's genuine thunder.—Happy Greece!
Bless'd in her offspring! Seat of eloquence,
Of arms and reason; patriot-virtue's seat!
Did the sun thither dart uncommon rays!
Did some presiding genius hover o'er,
That animated soul with brooding wings?
The sad reverse might start a gentle tear.
Go, search for Athens; her deserted ports.
Enter, a noiseless solitary shore,
Where commerce crowded the Piræan strand.
Trace her dark streets, her wall-embarrass'd fountains;
And pensive wonder, where her glories beam'd.
Where are her orators, her sages, now?—
Shatter'd her mould'ring arches, her towers in dust,—
But far less ruin'd, than her soul decay'd.
The stone, inscrib'd to Socrates, debas'd
To prop a reeling cot.—Minerva's dome
Possess'd by those, who never kiss'd, her shield.
—Upon the mount, where old Musæus sung,
Sits the gruff turban'd captain, and exacts
Harsh tribute!—In the grove, where Plato taught
His polished strain sublime, a stupid Turk
Is preaching ignorance and Mahomet.
(Where He, whom only dauntless Philip fear'd,
Shook the athenian's throng;—here holy Paul
Harangu'd the Pagan multitude, and brought
To flaring human wisdom news from heav'n.)

Turn next to Rome:—Is that the clime, the place,
Where, on his laurel'd throne, with tuneful choirs
Of arts surround'd, great Augustus reign'd?

And
And (greater far) the venerable band
Of elder heroes (fame's eternal theme!)
In splendid huts, and noble poverty,
Brave for their country liv'd, and fought, and died.

Heav'n! what firm Sons! who knew not gold had price,
Nor perfidy, nor baseness knew.—They, they,
The demi-gods of Rome! whose master voice,
Whose awe-commanding eye, more terror struck,
Than rods, and lictors, and Praetorian bands.
Could the pure crimson tide, the noblest blood,
In all the world, to such pollution turn:
Like Jordan's river, pouring his clear flood
Into the black Asphalts' slimy lake?

Patrons of wit, and victors of mankind,
Bards, warriors, worthies, (revolution strange!)
Are pimps, and fiddlers, mountebanks, and monks.
In Tully's hive, rich magazine of sweets!
The lazy drones are buzzing, or asleep.

But we forgive the living for the dead;
Indebted more to Rome than we can pay:
Of a long dearth prophetic, she laid in
A feast for ages.—O thou banquet nice!
Where the soul riots with secure excess.
What heart-felt bliss! what pleasure-winged hours
Transported owe we to her letter'd sons!—
We, by their favour, Tyber's banks enjoy;
Their temples trace, and share their noble games;

Vox. VI, 1 Enter
Enter the crowded theatre at will,
March to the forum, hear the consul plead,
Are present in the thundering Capitol
When Tully speaks,—At softer hours, attend
Hammonious Virgil to his Mantuan farm,
Or Baia’s shore,—how often drink his strains,
Rural, or epic, sweet!—how often rove
With Horace, bard and moralist benign!
With happy Horace rove, in fragrant paths
Of myrtle bowers, by Tivoli’s cascade.

Hail, precious pages! that amuse and teach,
Exalt the genius, and improve the breast.
Ye sage historians, all your stores unfold,
Reach your clear steady mirror;—in that glass
The forms of good and ill are well pourtray’d.

But chiefly thou, supreme Philosophy!
Shed thy blest influence; with thy train appear
Of graces mild: far be the Stoic boast,
The Cynics snarl, and churlish pedantry.
Bright visitant, if not too high my wish,
Come in the lovely dress you wore, a guest:
At Plato’s table; or in studious walks,
In green Frescati’s academic groves,
The Roman feasting his selected friends.

Tamer of pride! at thy serene rebuke
See crouching insolence, spleen, and revenge
Before thy shining taper disappear.
Tutor of human life! auspicious guide!
Whose faithful clue unravels every maze:
Whose skill can disengage the tangled thorn,
And smooth the rock to down! whose magic powers
Controll each storm, and bid the roar be still.

VACATION.

By ————, Esq.

HENCE sage, mysterious Law,
That fitt’st with rugged brow, and crabbed look
O’er thy black-letter’d book,
And the night-watching student strik’st with awe;
Away with thy dull train,
Slow-pac’d Advice, Surmise, and squint-ey’d Doubt;
Dwell with the noisy rout
Of busy men, ’mid cities and throng’d halls,
Where Clamour ceaseless bawls,
And Enmity and Strife thy state sustains.
But on me thy blessings pour,
Sweet Vacation. Thee, of yore,
In all her youth and beauty’s prime,
Summer bore to aged Time,
As he one funny morn beheld her
Tending a-field of corn: the elder
There ’mid poppies red and blue,
Unsuspected nearer drew,

L 2

And,
While, in pastures rich below
Among the grazing cattle, low
Moves the bull with heavy tread
Hanging down his lumpish head,
And the proud steed neigheth oft
Shaking his wanton mane aloft.
Or, traversing the wood about,
The jingling packhorse-bells remote
I hear, amid the noontide stillness,
Sing through the air with brassy shrillness;
What time the waggon's cumbrous load
Grates along the gravelly road:
There onward, drest'd in homely guise,
Some unregarded maiden hies.
Unless by chance a travelling squire,
Of base intent and foul desire,
Stops to inuare, with speech beguiling,
Sweet innocence and beauty smiling.
Nor fail I joyful to partake
The lively sports of country wake,
Where many a lad and many a lass
Foot it on the clofe-trod gras.s.
There nimble Marian of the green
Matchless in the jig is seen,
Allow'd beyond compare by all
The beauty of the rustic ball:
While the tripping damsels near,
Stands a lout with waggish leer.
He, if Marian chance to shew
Her taper leg and stocking blue,
Winks and nods and laughs aloud,
Among the merry-making crowd,
Utt'ring forth, in awkward jeer,
Words unmeet for virgin's ear.
Soon as evening clouds have shed
Their wat'ry store on earth's soft bed,
And through their flowing mantles thin,
Clear azure spots of sky are seen,
I quit some oak's close-cover'd bow'r,
To taste the boon of new-fall'n show'r,
To pace the corn-field's grassy edge
Close by a fresh-blown sweet-briar hedge;
While at every green leaf's end
Pearly drops of rain depend,
And an earthy fragrance 'round
Rises from the moisten'd ground.
Sudden a sun-beam darting out,
Brightens the landscape all about,
With yellow light the grove o'erspreads,
And tips with gold the haycocks' heads:
Then as mine eye is eastward led,
Some fair castle rears its head,
Whose height the country round commands,
Well known mark to distant lands,
There the windows glowing bright
Blaze from afar with ruddy light,

Borrow'd
Borrow'd from clouds of scarlet dye,
Just as the sun hath left the sky.
But if chill Eurus out the air
With keener wing, I then repair
To park or woodland, shelter meet,
Near some noble's ancient seat,
Where long winding walks are seen
Stately oaks and elms between;
Whose arms promiscuous form above
High over-arch'd a green alcove;
While the hoarse-voic'd hungry rook
Near her stick-built nest doth croak,
Waving on the topmatt bough;
And the master flag below
Bellows loud with savage roar,
Stalking all his hinds before.
Thus musing, night with even pace
Steals on, o'ershad'wing nature's face;
While the bat with dusty wings
Flutter's round in giddy rings,
And the buzzing chaffers come
Close by mine ear with solemn hum.
Homeward now my steps I guide
Some rising grassy bank beside,
Studded thick with sparks of light
Issuing from many a glow-worm bright,
While village-cur with minute bark
Alarms the pilferer in the dark.
Save what lights from heaven convey,
Cluster'd in the milky way,
Or scatter'd numbers in the air
Twinkling all o'er the boundless sky.
Then within doors let me meet
The viol touch'd by finger neat,
Or, soft symphonies among
Wrap me in the sacred song,
Attun'd by Handel's matchless skill,
While Attention mute and still
Fixes all my soul to hear
The voice harmonious, sweet and clear.
Nor let smooth-tongu'd Converse fail,
With many a well-devised tale,
And stories link'd, to twist a chain.
That may awhile o'er Time detain,
And make him rest upon his scythe
Plas'd to see the hours so blithe.
While, with sweet attractive grace,
The beauteous housewife of the place
Wins the heart of every guest.
By courteous deeds, and all contest
Which shall reaciest homage shew
To such sov'reign sweetness due.
These delights, Vacation, give,
And I will choose to live.

To
To a Lady very handsome, but too fond of Dress.

By the same.

Prythee why so fantastic and vain?
What charms can the toilet supply?
Why so studious, admirers to gain?
Need beauty lay traps for the eye?
Because that thy breast is so fair,
Must thy tucker be still setting right?
And canst thou not laughing forbear,
Because that thy teeth are so white?

Shall sovereign beauty descend
To act so ignoble a part?
Whole hours at the looking-glass spend,
A slave to the dictates of art?
And cannot thy heart be at rest
Unless thou excellest each fair
In trinkets and trumpery dress'd?
Is not that a superfluous care?

Vain,
Vain, idle attempt! to pretend
The lily with whiteness to deck!
Does the rich solitaire recommend
The delicate turn of thy neck?
The glossy bright hue of thy hair
Can powder or jewels adorn?
Can perfumes or vermivals compare
With the breath or the blush of the morn?

When, embarras'd with baubles and toys,
Thou'rt set out so enormously fine,
Over-doing thy purpose destroys,
And to please thou hast too much design:
Little know'st thou, how beauty beguiles,
How alluring the innocent eye;
What sweetness in natural smiles,
And what charms in simplicity lie.

Thee Nature with beauty has clad,
With genuine ornaments dress'd;
Nor can Art an embellishment add
To set off what already is best:
Be it thine, self-accomplish'd to reign:
Bid the toilet be far set apart,
And dismiss with an honest disdain
That impertinent Abigail, Art.

ANACREON,
ANACREON. Ode III.

Translated by the Same.

In the dead of the night, when with labour oppress'd
All mortals enjoy the calm blessing of rest,
Cupid knock'd at my door; I awoke with a noise,
And "who is it (I call'd) that my sleep thus destroys?"

"You need not be frighten'd, he answer'd mild,
"Let me in; I'm a little unfortunate child;
"'Tis a dark rainy night; and I'm wet to the skin;
"And my way I have lost; and do, pray, let me in."

I was mov'd with compassion; and striking a light,
I open'd the door; when a boy flood in sight,
Who had wings on his shoulders; the rain from him dripp'd;
With a bow and with arrows too he was equipp'd.

I stirr'd up my fire, and close by its side,
I set him down by me: with napkins I dried,
I chaf'd him all over, kept out the cold air,
And I wrung with my hands the wet out of his hair.

He from wet and from cold was no sooner at ease,
But taking his bow up, he said, "If you please
"We will try it; I would by experiment know
"If the wet hath not damag'd the string of my bow."

Forthwith
Forthwith from his quiver an arrow he drew,
To the string he apply'd it; and twang went the yew;
The arrow was gone; in my bosom it center'd:
No sting of a hornet more sharp ever enter'd.

Away skipp'd the urchin, as brisk as a bee,
And laughing, "I wish you much joy, friend, quoth he:
"My bow is undamag'd, for true went the dart;
"But you will have trouble enough with your heart."

Angustam amice, &c.

By Mr. TITLEY*, to Dr. BENTLEY.

H

E that would great in science grow,
By whom bright Virtue is ador'd,
As first must be content to know
An humble roof, an homely board.

With want and rigid college laws
Let him, inur'd betimes, comply;
Firm to religion's sacred cause,
The learned combat let him try;

* Walter Titley, Esq; afterwards resident at the court of Denmark.
Let him her envied praises tell,
And all his eloquence disclose
The fierce endeavours to repel,
And still the tumult of her foes.

Him early form’d, and season’d young,
Subtle opposers soon will fear,
And tremble at his artful tongue,
Like Parthians at the Roman spear.

Grim death, th’ inevitable lot
Which fools and cowards strive to fly,
Is with a noble pleasure fought.
By him who dares for truth to die.

With purest luster of her own
Exalted Virtue ever shines,
Nor, as the vulgar smile or frown,
Advances now, and now declines.

A glorious and immortal prize,
She on her hardy son beallows,
She shews him heaven, and bids him rise,
Though pain, and toil, and death oppose.

With lab’ring flight he wings th’ obstructed way,
Leaving both common souls and common clay.

A Reply
A Reply to a Copy of Verses made in imitation of Book III. Ode 2. of Horace.

Angustiam, amice, pauperiem pati, &c.

And sent by Mr. Titley to Dr. Bentley.

By Dr. Bentley.

Who strives to mount Parnassus' hill,
And thence poetic laurels bring,
Must first acquire due force, and skill,
Must fly with swan's, or eagle's wing.

Who nature's treasures would explore,
Her mysteries and arcana know,
Must high as lofty Newton soar,
Must stoop as delving Woodward's low.

Who studies ancient laws and rites,
Tongues, arts, and arms, and history,
Must drudge like Selden days and nights,
And in the endless labour die.

* Dr. John Woodward. See his Essay towards a Natural History of the Earth and terrestrial Bodies, especially Minerals; as also of the Sea, Rivers, and Springs. With an Account of the Universal Deluge, and of the Effects that it had upon the Earth. 8vo. 1695.
Who travels in religious jars
   (Truth mixt with error, shade with rays,)
Like Whiston wanting pyx or stars,
   In ocean wide or sinks or stray.

But grant our hero's hope long toll
   And comprehensive genius crown,
All sciences, all arts his spoil,
   Yet what reward, or what renown?

Envy, innate in vulgar souls,
   Envy, steps in and stops his rise;
Envy, with poison'd tarnish fouls
   His lustre, and his worth decries.

He lives inglorious, or in want,
   To college and old books confin'd;
Instead of learn'd he's call'd pedant,
   Dunces advanc'd he's left behind;
Yet left content, a genuine ftoic he,
Great without patron, rich without South-sea.

Inscriptions
INSCRIPTION on a Grotto of Shells at Crux-Easton, the Work of Nine young Ladies.

By Mr. Pope.

Here, shunning idleness at once and praise,
This radiant pile nine rural sisters raise;
The glittering emblem of each spotless dame,
Clear as her soul, and shining as her frame;
Beauty which Nature only can impart,
And such a polish as disgraces Art;
But Fate dispos'd them in his humble fort,
And hid in deserts what would charm a court.

VERSES occasioned by seeing a Grotto built by Nine Sisters.

By N. Herbert, Esq.

So much this building entertains my sight,
Nought but the builders can give more delight:
In them the master-piece of Nature's shown,
In this I see Art's master-piece in stone.
She charms the sight alone, but you the heart.

* In the county of Hants, the seat of Edward Lilie, Esq.

b Miss Lisles, daughters of Edward Lilie, Esq; and sisters to Dr. Lilie.
An Excuse for INCONSTANCY, 1737.

By the Rev. Dr. Lisle.

WHEN Phœbus's beams are withdrawn from our sight,
We admire his fair sifter, the regent of night;
Though languid her beauty, though feeble her ray,
Yet still she's akin to the God of the day.
When Susan, like Cynthia, has finish'd her reign,
Then Charlotte, like Phœbus, shall shine out again.
As Catholic bigots fall humble before
The pictures of those whom in heart they adore,
Which though known to be nothing but canvas and paint,
Yet are said to enliven their zeal to the saint;
So to Susan I bow, charming Charlotte, for she
Has just beauty enough to remind me of thee.
Inconstant and faithless in love's the pretence
On which you arraign me: pray hear my defence:
Such censures as these to my credit redound;
I acknowledge, and thank a good appetite for't:
When venison and claret are not to be found,
I can make a good meal upon mutton and port.

Dr. Thomas Lisle, son of Edward Lisle, Esq; of Crux-Easton, in Hampshire. He was educated at Magdalen College, Oxford, where he took the degree of M. A. June 23, 1732; B. D. November 28, 1740; and D. D. April 22, 1743. He was at the time of his death, 27th March, 1767, rector of Burclere, in the county of Hants.
Tho’ Highclear’s so fine that a prince would not scorn it,
Though nature and taste have combind to adorn it;
Yet the artist that owns it would think it severe,
Were a law made to keep him there all round the year.
How enrag’d would the rector of Boscoville look,
If the king should enjoin him to read but one book!
And how would his audience their fortune bemoan,
If he gave them no sermons but what were his own!
’Tis variety only makes appetite last,
And by changing our dishes we quicken our taste.

To V E N U S. A R A N T, 1732.

Set to Music by Dr. HAYES.

B Y T H E S A M E.

R E C I T A T I V E.

O Goddess most rever’d above,
Bright parent of almighty Love,
Whose power th’ immortal Gods confess,
Hear and approve my fond address:
In melting softness I thy doves outvie,
Then teach me like thy swans to sing and fly;

b The seat of the Hon. R. Herbert.
c Wotton, the author’s parish in the Isle of Wight.
So I thy vot'ry will for ever be;
My song, my life I'll consecrate to thee.

Air.
Give me numbers strong and sweet,
Glowing language, pointed wit;
Words that might a Vestal move,
And melt a frozen heart to love.
Bid, bid thy blind boy
All his vigour employ;
On his wings would I soar up to fame:
'Tis but just, if he scorch
My breast with his torch,
In my wit too he kindle a flame.

Recitative.
Trophies to Chastity let others raise,
In notes as cold as the dull thing they praise:
To rage like mine more sprightly themes belong;
Gay youth inspires, and beauty claims my song;
Me all the little Loves and Graces own;
For I was born to worship them alone.

Air.
Tell not me the joys that wait
On him that's rich, on him that's great:
Wealth and wisdom I despise;
Cares surround the rich and wise.
No, no,—let love, let life be mine;
Bring me women, bring me wine:

Speed
[181]

Speed the dancing hours away,
And mind not what the grave ones say;
Speed, and gild 'em as they fly
With love and freedom, wit and joy:
Bus'ness, title, pomp, and state,
Give 'em to the fools I hate.

The POWER OF MUSIC. A SONG.

Imitated from the SPANISH.

BY THE SAME.

Set to Music by Dr. HAYES.

I.

WHEN Orpheus went down to the regions below,
Which men are forbidden to see,
He tun'd up his lyre, as old histories shew,
To set his Eurydice free.

II.

All hell was astobish'd a person so wise
Should rashly endanger his life,
And venture so far—but how vast their surprize!
When they heard that he came for his wife.
III.

To find out a punishment due to his fault,
Old Pluto had puzzled his brain;
But hell had not torments sufficient, he thought,
—So he gave him his wife back again.

IV.
But pity succeeding found place in his heart,
And, pleas'd with his playing so well,
He took her again in reward of his art;
Such merit had music in hell!

---

LETTER from Smyrna to his Sisters at Crux-Easton, 1733:

By the same.

The hero who to Smyrna bay
From Easton, Hants, purfu'd his way,
Who travers'd seas, and hills and vales,
To fright his sisters with his tales,
Sing, heavenly muse; for what befel
Thou saw'st, and only thou canst tell.
Say first (but one thing) premise,
I'll not be chid for telling yses;
Besides, my grannum us'd to say
I always had a knack that way;

So,
So, if the love of truth be in ye,
Read Strabo, Diodorus, Pliny—
But like some authors I could name,
W rept in myself I lose my theme,
Say first, those very rocks we spy’d,
But left ’em on the starboard side,
Where Juno urg’d the Trojan’s fate:
Shield us, ye Gods! from female hate!
Then how precarious was the doom
Of Cæsar’s line, and mighty Rome,
Snatch’d from the very jaws of ruin,
And sav’d, poor a Diæ, for thy undoing.
What saw we on Sicilian ground?
(A foil in ancient verse renown’d.)
The self-same spot, or Virgil ly’d,
On which the good Anchises dy’d:
The fields where Ceres’ daughter sported,
And where the pretty Cyclops courted.
The nymph, hard-hearted as the rocks,
Refus’d the monster, scorn’d his flocks,
And took a shepherd in his stead,
With nought but love and mirth to plead;
An instance of a generous mind
That does much honour to your kind,
But in an age of fables grew,
So possibly it mayn’t be true.

* Dido.

M 4

While
While on the summit Ætna glows,
His shivering sides are chill'd with snows.
Beneath, the painted landscape chars;
Here infant Spring in Winter's arms
Wantons secure; in youthful pride
Stands Summer laughing by her side;
Ev'n Autumn's yellow robes appear,
And one gay scene discloses all the year.

Hence to rude Ærigo we came,
Known once by Cytherea's name;
When Ocean first the goddess bore,
She rode on this distinguishing shore.
Here first the happy Paris stopp'd,
When Helen from her lord elop'd.
With pleas'd reflection I survey'd
Each secret grot, each conscious shade;
Envy'd his choice, approv'd his flame,
And fondly wish'd my lot the same.
O were the cause reviv'd again!
For charming Queensbury liv'd not then,
The radiant fruit, had she been there,
Would scarce have fall'n to Venus' share;
Saturnia's self had way'd her claim.
And modest Pallas blush'd for shame;
All had been right: the Phrygian swain
Had sigh'd for her, but sigh'd in vain.

The
The fair Oenone joy'd to find
The pains she felt repaid in kind;
No rape reveng'd, no room for strife,
Atrides might have kept his wife,
Old Troy in peace and plenty smil'd—
But the b best poem had been spoil'd.

How did my heart with joy run o'er,
When to the fam'd Cecropian shore,
Wafted by gentle breezes, we
Came gliding through the smooth still sea!
While backward rov'd my busy thought
On deeds in distant ages wrought;
On tyrants gloriously withstand;
On seas disdain'd with Persian blood;
On trophies rais'd o'er hills of flain
In Marathon's unrival'd plain.
Then, as around I cast my eye,
And view'd the pleasing prospect nigh,
The land for arms and arts renown'd,
Where wit was honour'd, poets crown'd;
Whose manners and whose rules refin'd
Our souls, and civiliz'd mankind;
Or (yet a loftier pitch to raise
Our wonder, and complete its praise)
The land that c Plato's master bore—
How did my heart with joy run o'er!

---

b Iliad.
c Socrates.

Now
Now casting on the eastern side,
We peep'd where Penes rolls his tide;
Where Arethusa came to appease
The shepherd that had lost his bees,
And led him to Cyrene's grott;
'Tis a long tale, and matters not.
Dryden will tell you all that past;
See Virgil's Georgics, book the last.
I speak not, but to let you know
This grott still stands in statu quo;
Of which, if any doubt remain,
I've proof, as follows, clear and plain.
Here, sistres, we such honours met!
Such honours I shall ne'er forget.
The Goddess (no uncommon case),
Proud, I suppose, to shew her place,
Or piqu'd perhaps at your renown,
Sent Boreas to invite us down;
And he so press'd it, that we us'd
Some pains to get ourselves excus'd.
My brother shipmates, all in haste,
Declar'd, that shells were not their taste;
And I had a somewhere seen, you know,
A finer grott than she could shew.

Hence let the Muse to Delos roam,
Or Nio, fam'd for Homer's tomb;

At Crux-Easton.
To Naxos, known in ancient time.
For Bacchus' love, for Theseus' crime.
Can she the Lesbian vine forget
Whence Horace reenforced his wit?
Where the fam'd harp Arion strung,
Nor play'd more sweet than Sappho sung?
Could the old bards revive again,
How would they mourn th' inverted scene!
Scarce with the barren waste acquainted,
They once so beautifully painted.
And here, 'twixt friends, I needs must say,
But let it go no farther, pray,
These fung-up, cry'd-up countries are
Displeasing, rugged, black, and bare;
And all I've yet beheld or known
Serve only to endear my own.
The matters I shall next disclose,
'Tis likely, may be wrapp'd in prose;
But verse methought would suit these better,
Besides, it lengthens out my letter.
Read then, dear girls, with kind regard,
What comes so far, what comes so hard;
And to our mother too make known,
How travelling has improv'd her son.
Let not malicious critics join
Pope's homespun rhymes in rank with mine,
Form'd on that very spot of earth,
Where Homer's self receiv'd his birth;
Add, as I said, t' enhance their worth,
The pains they cost in bringing forth;
While his, as all mankind agrees,
Though wrote with care, are wrote with ease.

Part of a LETTER to my Sisiers at CRUX-EASTON, written from CAIRO in EGYPT, August 1734.

BY THE SAME.

WHILE you, my dear girls, in your paradise stray,
Diverting with innocent freedom the day,
I wander alone in a barbarous land,
Half bak'd by the sun, half blind by the sand.
Then your wood too and grotto so swim in my fight,
They give me no respite by day nor by night;
No sooner asleep but I'm dreaming of you;
I am just wak'd from one,—would to God it were true.

Methought I was now a fine gentleman grown,
And had got, Lord knows how, an estate of my own.
Good-bye to plain Tom, I was rais'd a peg higher;
Some call'd me his worship, and others the squire.
'Twas a place, I remember, exactly like Easton,
A scene for an emperor's fancy to feast on.
There I built a fine house with great cost and great care,
(Your la'ships have form'd many such in the air)
Not of stucco, nor brick, but as good Portland stone
As Kent a would desire to be working upon.

The painter and architect.
The apartments not small, nor monstrously great,
But chiefly for use, and a little for state;
So begilt, and becarv'd, and with ornaments grac'd,
That every one said, I'd an excellent taste.
Here I liv'd like a king, never hoarded my pelf,
Kept a coach for my sisters, a nag for myself,
With something that's good when our Highclear friends come,
And, spite of 'quire Herbert, a fire in each room.
A canal made for profit as well as for pleasure,
That's about, let me see, two acres in measure;
Both the eye to delight, and the table to crown,
With a jack, or a perch, when my uncles come down.
An exceeding great wood, that's been set a great while,
In length near a league, and in breadth near a mile.
There every dear girl her bright genius displays,
In a thousand fine whimsies a thousand fine ways.
O how charming the walks to my fancy appear!
What a number of temples and grottos are here!
My soul was transported to such an extreme,
That I leap'd up in raptures,—when lo! 'twas a dream.
Then vexing I chid the impertinent day
For driving to sweet a delusion away.
Thus spectres arise, as by nurse-maidens we're told,
And hie to the place where they buried their gold:
There hov'ring around until morning remain;
Then sadly return to their torments again.
LETTER from MARSEILLES to my Sisters at Crux-Easton, May 1735.

BY THE SAME.

SCENE, the Study at Crux-Easton. Molly and Fanny are sitting at work; enter to them Harriot in a passion.

HARRIOT.

LORD! sifter, here’s the butcher come,
And not one word from brother Tom;
The punctual spark, that made his boast
He’d write by every other poet!
That ever I was so absurd
To take a man upon his word!
Quoth Frances, Child, I wonder much
You could expect him to keep touch:
’Tis so, my dear, with all mankind;
When out of sight you’re out of mind.
Think you he’d to his sisters write?
Was ever girl so unpoltite!
Some fair Italian stands posses’d,
And reigns sole mistress in his breast;
To her he dedicates his time,
And fawns in prose, or sighs in rhyme.

She’ll
She'll give him tokens of her love,
Perhaps not easy to remove;
Such as will make him large amends
For loss of sisters, and of friends.

Cries Harriot, When he comes to France,
I hope in God he'll learn to dance,
And leave his awkward habits there,
I'm sure he has enough to spare.

O' could he leave his faults, faith Fanny,
And bring the good alone, if any,
Poor brother Tom! he'd grow so light,
The wind might rob us of him quite!
Of habits he may well get clear;
Ill humours are the faults I fear,
For in my life I ne'er saw yet
A creature half so passionate.

Good heav'ns! how did he rave and tear,
On my not going you know where;
I scarcely yet have got my dread off:
I thought he'd bite my sister's head off.
'Tween him and Jenny what a clatter
About a fig, a mighty matter!
I could recount a thousand more,
But scandal's what I most abhor.

Molly, who long had patient sat,
And heard in silence all their chat,
Observing how they spoke with rancour,
Took up my cause, for which I thank her.
What eloquence was then display'd!
The charming things that Molly said,
Perhaps it suits not me to tell;
But faith! she spoke extremely well.
She, first, with much ado, put on
A prudish face, then thus begun.
Heyday! quoth she, you let your tongue
Run on most strangely, right or wrong.
'Tis what I never can connive at;
Besides, consider whom you drive at;
A person of establish'd credit,
Nobody better, though I say it.
In all that's good, so tried and known,
Why, girls, he's quite a proverb grown,
His worth no mortal dares dispute:
Then he's your brother too to boot.
At this she made a moment's pause,
Then with a figh resum'd the cause.
Alas! my dears, you little know
A sailor's toil, a trav'ler's woe;
Perhaps this very hour he strays
A lonely wretch through desart ways;
Or shipwreck'd on a foreign strand,
He falls beneath some ruffian's hand:
Or on the naked rock he lies,
And pinch'd by famine waifies and dies.
Can you this hated brother see
Floating, the sport of wind and sea?
Can you his feeble accents hear,
Though but a thought, nor drop a tear?
He faintly strives, his hopes are fled,
The billows booming o'er his head.
He mounts upon the waves again,
He calls on us, but calls in vain.
To death preserves his friendship true,
And mutters out a kind adieus.
See now he rises to our sight,
Now this in everlasting night.

Here Fanny's colour rose and fell,
And Harriot's throat began to swell:
One sidled to the window quite,
Pretending some unusual sight,
The other left the room outright.
While Molly laugh'd, her enmity obtain'd,
To think how artfully the sign'd.

VOL. VI. N THE
The HISTORY of PORSENNA, King of RUSSIA.

IN TWO BOOKS.

BY THE SAME.

Arva, beta
Pangus arma, divites et insulas.
Hor. Epod. 16.

BOOK I.

IN Russia's frozen clime some ages since
There dwelt, historians say, a worthy prince,
Who to his people's good confin'd his care,
And fix'd the basis of his empire there;
Inlarg'd their trade, the lib'ral arts improv'd,
Made nations happy, and himself belov'd;
To all the neigh'ring states a terror grown,
The dear delight, and glory of his own.
Not like those kings, who vainly seek renown,
From countries ruin'd, and from battles won;
Those mighty Nimrods, who mean laws despis'd,
Call murder but a princely exercise,
And, if one bloodless sun should steal away,
Cry out with Titus, they have lost a day.
Who, to be more than men, themselves debase
Beneath the brute, their Maker's form deface,
Raising their titles by their God's disgrace.
Like fame to bold Elostratus we give,
Who scorn'd by less than sacrilege to live;
On holy ruins rais'd a lasting name,
And in the temple's fire diffus'd his shame.
Far different praises, and a brighter fame,
The virtues of the young Porfenna claim;
For by that name the Russian king was known,
And sure a nobler ne'er adorn'd the throne.
In war he knew the deathful sword to wield,
And sought the thickest dangers of the field,
A bold commander; but, the storm o'erblown,
He seem'd as he were made for peace alone;
Then was the golden age again restor'd,
Nor left his justice honour'd than his sword.
All needless pomp, and outward grandeur spair'd,
The deeds that grac'd him were his only guard;
No private views beneath a borrow'd name;
His and the public interest were the fame.
In wealth and pleasure let the subject live,
But virtue is the king's prerogative;
Porfenna there without a rival stood,
And would maintain his right of doing good.
Nor did his person less attraction wear,
Such majesty and sweetness mingled there.
Heav'n with uncommon act the clay refin'd,
A proper mansion for so fair a mind;
Each look, each action bore peculiar grace,
And love itself was painted on his face.
In peaceful time he suffer'd not his mind
To rust in sloth, though much to peace inclin'd;
Nor wanton in the lap of pleasure lay,
And, loft to glory, loiter'd life away;
But active riling ere the prime of day,
Through woods and lonely deserts lov'd to stray;
With hounds and horns to wake the furious bear,
Or rouze the tawny lion from his laire;
To rid the forest of the savage brood,
And whet his courage for his country's good.
One day, as he pursu'd the dang'rous sport,
Attended by the nobles of his court,
It chanc'd a beast of more than common speed
Sprang from the brake, and through the desert fled.
The ardent prince, impetuous as the wind,
Rush'd on, and left his lagging train behind.
Fir'd with the chase, and full of youthful blood,
O'er plains, and vales, and woodland wilds he rode,
Urging his courser's speed, nor thought the day
How wasted, nor how intricate the way;
Nor, 'till the night in dusky clouds came on,
Restrain'd his pace, or found himself alone.
Mis'ring his train, he strove to measure back
The road he came, but could not find the track;
Still
Still turning to the place he left before,
And only lab'ring to be lost the more.
The bugle horn, which o'er his shoulders hung,
So loud he winded, that the forest rung;
In vain, no voice but Echo from the ground,
And vocal woods make mock'ry of the sound.

And now the gathering clouds began to spread
O'er the dun face of night a deeper shade;
And the hoarse thunder, growling from afar,
With herald voice proclaim'd th' approaching war;
Silence awhile ensued,—then by degrees
A hollow wind came muttering through the trees.
Sudden the full-sprung sky discharged its store,
Of rain and rattling hail a mingled shower;
The active lightning ran along the ground;
The fiery bolts by fits were hurl'd around,
And the wide forests trembled at the sound.

Amazement seiz'd the prince;—where could he fly?
No guide to lead, no friendly cottage nigh.
Penive and unresolved awhile he stood,
Beneath the scanty covert of the wood;
But drove from thence soon fellied forth again,
As chance directed, on the dreary plain;
Constrain'd his melancholy way to take
Through many a loathsome bog, and thorny brake,
Caught in the thicket, sounder ring in the lake.
Wet with the storm, and wearied with the way,
By hunger pinch'd, himself to beasts a prey;
Nor wine to cheer his heart, nor fire to burn,
Nor place to rest, nor prospect to return.
Drooping and spiritless, at life's despair,
He bade it pass, not worth his farther care;
When suddenly he spied a distant light,
That faintly twinkled through the gloom of night,
And his heart leap'd for joy, and bless'd the welcome sight.
Oft-times he doubted, it appear'd so far,
And hung so high, 'twas nothing but a star,
Or kindled vapour wand'ring through the sky,
But still press'd on his steed, still kept it in his eye;
'Till, much fatigue and many dangers past,
At a huge mountain he arriv'd at last.
There, lighting from his horse, on hands and knees
Grop'd out the darksome road by slow degrees,
Crawling or clamb'ring o'er the rugged way;
The thunder rolls above, the flames around him play.
Joyful at length he gain'd the steepy height,
And found the rift whence sprang the friendly light.
And here he stopp'd to rest his wearied feet,
And weigh the perils he had still to meet;
Unsheath'd his trusty sword, and dealt his eyes
With caution round him to prevent surprize;
Then summon'd all the forces of his mind,
And ent'ring boldly cast his fears behind,
Resolv'd to push his way, whate'er withhold,
Or perish bravely, as a monarch should.

While
While he the wonders of the place survey'd,
And through the various cells at random stray'd,
In a dark corner of the cave he view'd
Somewhat, that in the shape of woman stood;
But more deform'd than dreams can represent
The midnight hag, or poet's fancy paint
The Lapland witch, when she her broom bestrides,
And scatters storms and tempesta as she rides.
She look'd as nature made her to disgrace
Her kind, and cast a blot on all the race;
Her shrivel'd skin, with yellow spots besmeared,
Like mouldy records seem'd; her eyes were bleared;
Her feeble limbs with age and palsy shook;
Bent was her body, haggard was her look.
From the dark nook outcrept the filthy crone,
And propped upon her crutch came tottering on.
The prince in civil guise approach'd the dame,
Told her his piteous case, and whence he came,
And 'till Aurora should the shades expel,
Implor'd a lodging in her friendly cell.
Mortal, whoe'er thou art, the fiend began,
And, as she spake, a deadly horror ran
Through all his frame: his cheeks the blood forsook,
Chatter'd his teeth, his knees together struck.
Whoe'er thou art, that with presumption rude
Durst on our sacred privacy intrude,
And without licence in our court appear,
Know, thou'rt the first that ever enter'd here.

N 4

But
But since thou pleas'dst excuse, thou'rt hither brought;
More by thy fortune than thy own default,
Thy crime, though great, an easy pardon finds,
For mercy ever dwells in royal minds;
And would you learn from whose indulgent hand
You live, and in whose awful presence stand,
Know farther, through you wide extended plains
Great Eolus the King of tempests reigns,
And in this lofty palace makes abode,
Well suited to his state, and worthy of the God,
The various elements his empire own,
And pay their humble homage at his throne;
And hither all the storms and clouds resort,
Proud to increase the splendor of his court.
His queen am I, from whom the beauteous race
Of winds arose, sweet fruit of our embrace!
She scarce had ended, when, with wild uproar
And horrid din, her sons impetuous pour
Around the cave; came rushing in amain
Lybs, Eurus, Boreas, all the boisterous train;
And close behind them on a whirlwind rode
In clouded majesty the blustering God.
Their locks a thousand ways were blown about;
Their cheeks like full-blown bladders frutted out;
Their boastful talk was of the feats they had done,
Of trees uprooted, and of towns o'erthrown;
And, when they kindly turn'd them to accost
The prince, they almost pierc'd him with their frost.

The
The gaping bag in fix'd attention stood,
And at the close of every tale cried—'Good!'
Blessing with outstretched arms each darling son,
In due proportion to the mischief done.
And where, said she, does little Zephyr stray?
Know ye, my sons, your brother's rout to-day?
In what bold deeds does he his hours employ?
Grant heav'n no evil has befall'n my boy!
Ne'er was he known to linger thus before.
Scarce had she spoke, when at the cavern door
Came lightly tripping in a form more fair
Than the young poet's fond ideas are,
When fir'd with love he tries his utmost art
To paint the beauteous tyrant of his heart.
A satin vest his slender shape confin'd,
Embroider'd o'er with flowers of every kind,
Flora's own work, when first the goddess strove
To win the little wanderer to her love.
Of burnish'd silver were his sandal's made,
Silver his buskins, and with gems o'erlaid;
A saffron-colour'd robe behind him flow'd,
And added grace and grandeur as he trod.
His wings, than lilies whiter to behold,
Sprinkled with azure spots, and streak'd with gold;
So thin their form, and of so light a kind,
That they for ever danc'd, and flutter'd in the wind.
Around his temples, with becoming air,
In wanton ringlets curl'd his auburn hair,

And
And o'er his shoulders negligently spread;
A wreath of fragrant roses crown'd his head.
Such his attire, but O! no pen can trace,
No words can shew the beauties of his face;
So kind! so winning! so divinely fair!
Eternal youth and pleasure flourish there;
There all the little Loves and Graces meet,
And every thing that's soft, and every thing that's sweet.

Thou vagrant, cried the dame in angry tone,
Where couldst thou loiter thus so long alone?
Little thou canst what anxious thoughts molest,
What pangs are lab'ring in a mother's breast.
Well do you shew your duty by your haste,
For thou of all my sons art always last;
A child less fondled would have fled more fast.
Sure 'tis a curse on mothers, doom'd to mourn,
Where best they love, the least and worst return.

My dear mama, the gentle youth replied,
And made a low obeisance, cease to chide,
Nor wound me with your words, for well you know
Your Zephyr bears a part in all your woe;
How great must be his sorrow then to learn
That he himself's the cause of your concern!
Nor had I loiter'd thus had I been free,
But the fair princess of Felicity
Intreated me to make some short delay.
And, ask'd by her, who could refuse to stay?
Surrounded by the damsels of her court,
She sought the shady grove, her lov'd resort;
Freshest rose the grass, the flowers were mix'd between,
Like rich embroid'ry on a ground of green.
And in the midst, protected by the shade,
A crystal stream in wild meanders play'd;
While in its banks, the trembling leaves among,
A thousand little birds in concert sing.
Close by a mount with fragrant shrubs o'ergrown,
On a cool mossy couch she laid her down;
Her air, her posture, all conspir'd to please;
Her head, upon her snowy arm at ease
Reclin'd, a studied carelessness express'd;
Loose lay her robe, and naked heav'd her breast.
Eager I flew to that delightful place,
And pour'd a shower of kisses on her face;
Now hover'd o'er her neck, her breast, her arms,
Like bees o'er flowers, and tasted all her charms;
And then her lips, and then her cheeks I tried,
And fam'd, and wanton'd round on every side.
O Zephyr, cried the fair, thou charming boy,
Thy presence only can create me joy;
To me thou art beyond expression dear,
Nor can I quit the place while thou art here.
Excuse my weaknesses, madam, when I swear
Such gentle words, join'd with so soft an air,
Pronounce'd so sweetly from a mouth so fair,

Quite
Quite ravish'd all my sense, nor did I know,
How long I stay'd; or when, or where to go.
Meanwhile the damsels, deboonair and gay,
Prattled around, and laugh'd the time away;
These in soft notes address'd the ravish'd ear,
And warbled out so sweet, 'twas heav'n to hear;
And those in rings, beneath the greenwood shade,
Danc'd to the melody their fellows made.
Some, studious of themselves, employ'd their care
In weaving flowery wreaths to deck their hair;
While others to some fav'rite plant convey'd
Refreshing showers, and cheer'd its drooping head.
A joy so general spread through all the place,
Such satisfaction dwelt on every face,
The nymphs so kind, so lovely look'd the queen,
That never eye behold a sweeter scene.

Porfenna like a statue fix'd appear'd,
And, wrapp'd in silent wonder, gaz'd and heard;
Much he admir'd the speech, the speaker more,
And dwelt on every word, and griev'd to find it o'er.
O gentle youth, he cried, proceed to tell,
In what fair country does this princess dwell;
What regions unexplor'd, what hidden coast
Can so much goodness, so much beauty boast?
To whom the winged god with gracious look,
Numberless sweets diffusing while he spoke,
Thus answer'd kind—These happy gardens lie
Far hence remov'd, beneath a milder sky;
Their name—The kingdom of Felicity.
Sweet scenes of endless bliss, enchanted ground;
A foil for ever sought, but seldom found;
Though in the search all human kind in vain
Weary their wits, and waste their lives in pain.
In different parties, different paths they tread,
As reason guides them, or as folly leads;
These wrangling for the place they never shall see,
Debating those, if such a place there be;
But not the wisest, nor the best, can say
Where lies the point, or mark the certain way.
Some few, by Fortune's favour'd for her sport,
Have fail'd in sight of this delightful port;
In thought already seiz'd the bless'd abodes,
And in their fond delirium rank'd with gods.
Fruitless attempt! all avenues are kept
By dreadful foes, sentry that never slept.
Here fell Detraction dart, her pois'rous breath
Fraught with a thousand stings, and scatters death;
Sharp-sighted Envy there maintains her post,
And shakes her flaming brand, and stalks around the coast.
These on the helpless bark their fury pour,
Plunge in the waves, or dash against the shore;
Teach wretched mortals they were doom'd to mourn,
And ne'er must rest but in the silent urn.

But say, young monarch, for what name you bear
Your mien, your dress, your person, all declare;
And though I seldom saw the frozen north,
Yet I have heard of brave Porson's worth.

My
My brother Boreas through the world has flown,
Swelling his breath to spread forth your renown;
Say, would you choose to visit this retreat,
And view the world where all these wonders meet?
With you some friend o'er that tempestuous sea
To bear you safe! behold that friend in me.
My active wings shall all their force employ,
And nimbly waft you to the realms of joy;
As once, to gratify the god of Love,
I bore fair Psyche to the Cyprian grove;
Or as Jove's bird, descending from on high,
Snatch'd the young Trojan trembling to the sky.
There perfect bliss thou may'st for ever share,
'Scap'd from the busy world, and all its care;
There in the lovely princess thou shalt find
A mistress ever blooming, ever kind.
All ecstacy on air Porsenna trod,
And to his bosom strain'd the little god;
With grateful sentiments his heart o'erflow'd,
And in the warmest words millions of thanks bestow'd.

When Eolus in surly humour broke
Their strict embrace, and thus abruptly spoke.
Enough of compliment; I hate the sport
Of meanless words; this is no human court,
Where plain and honest are discarded quite,
For the more modish title of polite;
Where in soft speeches hypocrites impart
The venom'd ills that lurk beneath the heart;
In friendship's holy guise their guilt improve,
And kindly kill with specious shew of love.
For us,—my subjects are not us'd to wait,
And waste their hours to hear a mortal prate;
They must abroad before the riling sun,
And hie 'em to the seas: there's mischief to be done.
Excuse my plainness, Sir, but business stands,
And we have storms and shipwrecks on our hands.

He ended frowning, and the noisy rout
Each to his several cell went puffing out.
But Zephyr, far more courteous than the rest,
To his own bower convey'd the royal guest;
There on a bed of roses neatly laid,
Beneath the frag. ance of a myrtle shade,
His limbs, to needful rest the prince applied,
His sweet companion slumbering by his side.

BOOK II.

No sooner in her silver chariot rose
The ruddy morn, than, fated with repose,
The prince address'd his host; the God awoke,
And leaping from his couch, thus kindly spoke:
This early call, my lord, that chides my stay,
Requires my thanks, and I with joy obey.
Like you I long to reach the blissful coast,
Haste the slow night, and mourn the moments lost.
The bright Rosinda, loveliest of the fair
That crowd the princess' court, demands my care;
Ev'n now with fears and jealousies o'erborn
Upbraids, and calls me cruel and forsworn.
What sweet rewards on all my toils attend,
Serve at once my mistress and my friend!
Just to my love and to my duty too,
Well paid in her, well pleas'd in pleasing you.
This said, he led him to the cavern gate,
And clasped him in his arms; and pois'd his weight;
Then, balancing his body here and there,
Stretch'd forth his agile wings, and launch'd in air;
Swift as the fiery meteor from on high
Shoots to its goal, and gleams athwart the sky.
Here with quick fan his lab'ring pinions play;
There glide at ease along the liquid way;
Now lightly skim the plain with even flight;
Now proudly soar above the mountain's height.

Spiteful Detraction, whose envenom'd hate
Sports with the suff'ring of the good and great;
Spares not our prince, but with opprobrious sneer
Arraigns him of the heinous sin of fear;
That he, so tried in arms, whose very name
Infus'd a secret panic where it came,
Ev'n he, as high above the clouds he flew,
And spied the mountains leas'n'ing to the view,
Nought round him but the wide expanded air,
Helpless, abandon'd to a stripling's care,

Struck
Struck with the rapid whirl, and dreadful height,
Confess’d some faint alarm, some little fright.

The friendly God, who instantly divin’d
The terrors that possess’d his fellow’s mind,
To calm his troubled thoughts, and cheat the way,
Describing the nations that beneath them lay,
The name, the climate, and the soil’s increase,
Their arms in war, their government in peace;
Shew’d their domestic arts, their foreign trade,
What interest they pursued, what leagues they made.
The sweet discourse so charm’d Porfenna’s ear,
That lost in joy he had no time for fear.

From Scandinavia’s cold inclement waste
O’er wide Germania’s various realms they past,
And now on Albion’s fields suspend their toil,
And hover for a while, and bless the soil.
O’er the gay scene the prince delighted hung,
And gaz’d in rapture, and forgot his tongue;
Till bursting forth at length, Behold, cried he,
The promised site, the land I long’d to see;
Those plains, those vales, and fruitful hills declare
My queen, my charmer must inhabit there.
Thus rav’d the monarch, and the gentle guide,
Pleased with his error, thus in smiles replied.

I must applaud, my lord, the lucky thought;
Ev’n I, who know th’ original, am caught,
And doubt my senses, when I view the draught.

Vol. VI. O

The
The slow-ascending hill, the lofty wood
That mantles o'er its brow, the silver flood
Wand'ring in mazes through the flow'ry mead,
The herd that in the plentiful pastures feed,
And every object, every scene excites
Fresh wonder in my soul, and fills with new delights
Dwells cheerful Plenty there, and learned Ease,
And Art with Nature seems at strife to please.
There Liberty, delightful goddess, reigns,
Gladdens each heart, and gilds the fertile plains;
There firmly seated may she ever smile,
And show'r her blessings o'er her fav'rite isle!
But see, the rising sun reproves our stay.
He said, and to the ocean wing'd his way,
Stretching his course to climates then unknown,
Nations that swelter in the burning zone.
There in Peruvian vales a moment stayed,
And smooth'd his wings beneath the citron shade;
Then swift his oary pinions plied again,
Cross'd the new world, and fought the Southern main;
Where many a wet and weary league o'erpast,
The wish'd-for paradise appear'd at last.
With force abated now they gently sweep
O'er the smooth surface of the shining deeps;
The Dryads hail'd them from the distant shore,
The Nereids play'd around, the Tritons swam before,
While soft Favonius their arrival greets,
And breathes his welcome in a thousand sweets.
Nor pale disease, nor health-consuming care,
Nor wrath, nor foul revenge, can enter there;
No vapour'd foggy gloom imbrows the sky;
No tempests rage, no angry lightnings fly;
But dews, and soft refreshing airs are found,
And pure aetherial azure shines around.
Whate'er the sweet Sabæan soil can boast,
Or Mecca's plains, or India's spicy coast;
What Hybla's hills, or rich Æbalia's fields,
Or flow'ry vale of fam'd Hymettus yields;
Or what of old th' Hesperian orchard grac'd;
All that was e'er delicious to the taste,
Sweet to the smell, or lovely to the view,
Collected there with added beauty grew.
High-tow'ring to the Heavens the trees are seen,
Their bulk immense, their leaf for ever green;
So closely interwove, the tell-tale sun
Can ne'er descry the deeds beneath them done,
But where by fits the sportive gales divide
Their tender tops, and fan the leaves aside.
Like a smooth carpet at their feet lies spread
The matted grass, by bubbling fountains fed;
And on each bough the feather'd choir employ
Their melting notes, and nought is heard but joy.
The painted flowers exhale a rich perfume,
The fruits are mingled with eternal bloom,
And Spring and Autumn hand in hand appear,
Lead on the merry months, and join to cloath the year.
Here, o'er the mountain's shaggy summit pour'd,
From rock to rock the tumbling torrent roar'd,
While beauteons Iris in the vale below
Paints on the rising fumes her radiant bow.
Now through the meads the mazy current stray'd,
Now hid its wand'ring in the myrtle shade;
Or in a thousand veins divides its course,
Visits each plant, refreshes every flower;
O'er gems and golden sands in murmurs flows,
And sweetly soothes the soul, and lulls to soft repose.

If hunger call, no sooner can the mind
Express her will to needful food inclin'd,
But in some cool recess, or op'ning glade,
The seats are plac'd, the tables neatly laid,
And instantly convey'd by magic hand
In comely rows the costly dishes stand;
Meats of all kinds that nature can impart,
Prepar'd in all the nicest forms of art.
A troop of sprightly nymphs array'd in green,
With flow'ry chaplets crown'd, come scudding in;
With fragrant blossoms these adorn the feast,
Those with officious zeal attend the guest;
Beneath his feet the silken carpet spread,
Or sprinkle liquid odours o'er his head.
Others in ruby cups with roses bound,
Delightful! deal the sparkling nectar round;
Or weave the dance, or tune the vocal lay;
The lyres resound, the merry minstrels play;

Gay
Gay health, and youthful joys o'erspread the place,
And swell each heart, and triumph in each face.
So, when embold'nd by the vernal air,
The busy bees to blooming fields repair;
For various use employ their chymic pow'r;
One calls the snowy pounce, one sucks the flow'r;
Again to different works returning home,
Some a beeze, the boney, some erect the comb;
All for the general good in concert strive,
And every soul's in motion; every limb's alive.
  And now descending from his flight, the God
On the green turf releas'd his precious load;
There, after mutual salutations past,
And endless friendship vow'd, they part in haste;
Zephyr impatient to behold his love,
The prince in raptures wand'ring through the grove,
Now skipping on, and singing as he went,
Now stopping short to give his transports vent;
With sudden gusts of happiness oppress'd;
Or stands entranced, or raves like one poss'd;
His mind afloat, his wand'ring senses quite
O'ercome with charms, and frantic with delight;
From scene to scene by random steps convey'd,
Admires the distant views, explores the secret shade,
Dwells on each spot, with eager eye devours
The woods, the lawns, the buildings, and the bowers;
New sweets, new joys at every glance arise,
And every turn creates a fresh surprize.

  Or aive, fiment.

Close,
Close by the borders of a rising wood,
In a green vale a crystal grotto stood;
And o'er its side, beneath a beechen shade,
In broken falls a silver fountain play'd.
Hither, attracted by the murmur'd stream,
And cool recess, the pleas'd Porfenna came,
And on the tender grass reclining chose
To wave his joys awhile, and take a short repose.
The scene invites him, and the wanton breeze
That whispers through the vale, the dancing trees,
The warbling birds, and rills that gently creep,
All join their music to prolong his sleep.

The princess for her morning walk prepar'd;
The female troops attend, a beauteous guard.
Array'd in all her charms appear'd the fair;
Tall was her stature, unconfin'd her air;
Proportion deck'd her limbs, and in her face
Lay love inshrin'd, lay sweet attractive grace
Temp'ring the aweful beams her eyes convey'd,
And like a lambent flame around her play'd.
No foreign aids, by mortal ladies worn,
From shells and rocks her artless charms adorn;
For grant that beauty were by gems increas'd,
'Tis render'd more suspected at the least;
And foul defects, that would escape the sight,
Start from the piece, and take a stronger light.
Her chestnut hair in careless rings around
Her temples wav'd, with pinks and jessamine crown'd,
And, gather'd in a silken cord behind,
Curl'd to the waist, and floated in the wind;
O'er these a veil of yellow gauze she wore,
With amaranths and gold embroider'd o'er.
Her snowy neck half naked to the view
Gracefully fell; a robe of purple hue
Hung loosely o'er her slender shape, and tried
To shade those beauties, that it could not hide.

The damsels of her train with mirth and song
Frolic behind, and laugh and sport along.
The birds proclaim their queen from every tree;
The beasts run frisking through the groves to see;
The Loves, the Pleasures, and the Graces meet
In antic rounds, and dance before her feet.
By whate'er fancy led, it chanc'd that day
They through the secret valley took their way,
And to the crystal grot advancing spied
The prince extended by the fountain's side.

He look'd as, by some skilful hand express'd,
Apollo's youthful form retir'd to rest;
When with the chase fatigued he quits the wood
For Pindus' vale, and Aganippe's flood;
There sleeps secure, his careless limbs display'd
At ease, encircled by the laurel shade;
Beneath his head his sheaf of arrows lie,
His bow unbent hangs negligently by.
The flumbering prince might boast an equal grace,
So turn'd his limbs, so beautiful his face.

O 4

Waking
Waking he started from the ground in haste,
And saw the beauteous choir around him plac'd;
Then, summoning his senses, ran to meet
The queen, and laid him humbly at her feet:
Deign, lovely princes, to behold, said he;
One, who has travers'd all the world to see
Those charms, and worship thy divinity:
Accept thy slave, and with a gracious smile
Excuse his rashness, and reward his toil.
Stood motionless the fair with mute sur prise,
And read him over with admiring eyes;
And while the deedlast gaz'd, a pleasing smart
Ran thrilling through her veins, and reach'd her heart.
Each limb she scan'd, consider'd every grace,
And sagely judg'd him of the phoenix race.
An animal like this she ne'er had known,
And thence concluded there could be but one;
The creature too had all the phoenix air;
None but the phoenix could appear so fair.
The more she look'd, the more she thought it true,
And call'd him by that name, to shew she knew.
O handsome phoenix, for that such you are
We know: your beauty does your breed declare;
And I with sorrow own through all my coast
No other bird can such perfection boast;
For Nature form'd you single and alone:
Alas! what pity 'tis there is but one!
Were there a queen so fortunate to shew
An aviary of charming birds like you,
What envy would her happiness create.
In all, who saw the glories of her state!

The prince laugh’d inwardly, surpriz’d to find
So strange a speech, so innocent a mind.
The compliment indeed did some offence
To reason, and a little wrong’d her sense;
He could not let it pass, but told his name,
And what he was, and whence, and why he came;
And hinted other things of high concern
For him to mention, and for her to learn.
And she ‘ad a piercing wit, of wond’rous reach
To comprehend whatever he could teach.
Thus hand in hand they to the palace walk,
Pleas’d and instructed with each other’s talk.

Here should I tell the furniture’s expense,
And all the structure’s vast magnificence,
Describe the walls of shining sapphire made,
With emerald and pearl the floors inlaid,
And how the vaulted canopies unfold
A mimic heav’n, and flame with gems and gold;
Or how Felicity regales her guest,
The wit, the mirth, the music, and the feast;
And on each part bestow the praises due,
’Twould tire the writer, and the reader too.
My amorous tale a softer path pursues:
Love and the happy pair demand my Muse.

O could
O could her art in equal terms express
The lives they lead, the pleasures they possess!
Fortune had ne'er so plenteously before
Bestow'd her gifts, nor can she lavish more.
'Tis heaven itself, 'tis ecstasy of bliss,
Uninterrupted joy, untir'd excess;
Mirth following mirth the moments dance away;
Love claims the night, and friendship rules the day.
Their tender care no cold indifference knows;
No jealousies disturb their sweet repose;
No sickness, no decay; but youthful grace,
And constant beauty shines in either face.
Benumming age may mortal charms invade,
Flowers of a day that do but bloom and fade;
Far different here, on them it only blows
The lily's white, and spreads the blushing rose;
No conquest o'er those radiant eyes can boast;
They like the stars shine brighter in its frost;
Nor fear its rigour, nor its rule obey;
All seasons are the same, and every month is May.
Alas! how vain is happiness below!
Man soon or late must have his share of woe:
Slight are his joys, and fleeting as the wind;
His griefs wound home, and leave a sting behind.
His lot distinguishing'd from the brute appears
Less certain by his laughter than his tears;
For ignorance too oft our pleasure breeds,
But sorrow from the reasoning soul proceeds,
If man on earth in endless bliss could be,
The boon, young prince, had been bestow'd on thee.
Bright shone thy stars, thy Fortune flourish'd fair,
And seem'd secure beyond the reach of care,
And so might still have been, but anxious thought
Has dash'd thy cup, and thou must taste the draught.

It so befel: as on a certain day
This happy couple toy'd their time away,
He ask'd how many charming hours were flown,
Since on her slave her heav'n of beauty shone.
Should I consult my heart, cried he, the rate
Were small, a week would be the utmost date:
But when my mind reflects on actions past,
And counts its joys, time must have fled more fast.
Perhaps I might have said, three months are gone,
Three months! replied the fair, three months alone!
Know that three hundred years have roll'd away,
Since at my feet the lovely phoenix lay.
Three hundred years! re-echoed back the prince,
A whole three hundred years compeleted since
I landed here! O! whither then are flown:
My dearest friends, my subjeéts, and my throne?
How strange, alas! how alter'd shall I find
Each earthly thing, each scene I left behind!
Who knows me now! on whom shall I depend
To gain my rights! where shall I find a friend!
My crown perhaps may grace a foreign line,
A race of kings, that know not me nor mine;

Who
Who reigns may with my death; his subjects treat
My claim with scorn, and call their prince a cheat.
Oh had my life been ended as begun!
My deatin'd stage, my race of glory run,
I should have died well pleas'd; my honour'd name
Had liv'd, had flourish'd in the list of fame;
Reflecting now my mind with horror fees
The sad survey, a scene of shameful case,
The odious blot, the scandal of my race,
Scarce known, and only mention'd with disgrace.

The fair beheld him with impatient eye,
And red with anger made this warm reply:
Ungrateful man! is this the kind return
My love deserves? and can you thus with scorn
Reject what once you priz'd, what once you swore.
Surpass'd all charms, and made ev'n glory poor?
What gifts have I bestow'd, what favours shewn!
Made you partaker of my bed and throne;
Three centuries preserv'd in youthful prime,
Safe from the rage of death, and injuries of time.
Weak arguments! for glory reigns above
The feeble ties of gratitude and love.
I urge them not, nor would request your stay;
The phantom glory calls, and I obey;
All other virtues are regardless quite,
Sunk and absorb'd in that superior light.
Go then, barbarian, to thy realms return,
And shew thyself unworthy my concern;

Go,
Go, tell the world, your tender heart could give
Death to the princes, by whose care you live.

At this a deadly pale her cheeks o'erspread,
Cold trembling seiz'd her limbs, her spirits fled;
She sunk into his arms: the prince was mov'd,
Felt all her griefs, for still he greatly lov'd.
He sigh'd, he wish'd he could forget his throne,
Confine his thoughts, and live for her alone;
But glory shot him deep, the venom'd dart
Was fix'd within, and rankled at his heart;
He could not hide its wounds, but pin'd away
Like a sick flower, and languish'd in decay.
An age no longer like a month appeas,
But every month becomes a hundred years.

Felicity was griev'd, and could not bear
A scene so chang'd, a sight of so much care.
She told him with a look of cold disdain,
And seeming ease, as women well can feign,
He might depart at will; a milder air
Would mend his health; he was no pris'ner there;
She kept him not, and wish'd he ne'er might find
Cause to regret the place he left behind,
Which once he lov'd, and where he still must own
He had at least some little pleazure known.

If these prophetic words awhile destroy
His peace, the former balance it in joy.
He thank'd her for her kind concern, but chose
To quit the place, the rest let heav'n dispose.

For
For Fate, on mischief bent, perverts the will,
And first infatuates whom it means to kill.
  Aurora now, not, as she wont to rise,
In gay attire ting'd with a thousand dyes,
But sober-fad in solemn state appears,
Clad in a dusky veil bedew'd with tears.
Thick mantling clouds beneath her chariot spread,
A faded wreath hangs drooping from her head.
The sick'ning sun emits a feeble ray,
Half drown'd in fogs, and struggling into day.
Some black event the threat'ning skies foretel.
Porsenna rose to take his last farewell.
A curious vest the mournful princess brought,
And armour by the Lemnian artist wrought,
A shining lance with secret virtue stor'd,
And of resistless force a magic sword,
Caparisons and gems of wond'rous price,
And loaded him with gifts and good advice;
But chief she gave, and what he most would need,
The fleetest of her stud, a flying steed.
The swift Grisippo, said th' afflicted fair,
(Such was the courser's name) with speed shall bear,
And place you safely in your native air;
Assist against the foe, with matchless might
Ravage the field, and turn the doubtful fight;
With care protect you till the danger cease,
Your trust in war, your ornament in peace.

But
But this, I warn, beware; whate'er shall lay
To intercept your course, or tempt your stay,
Quit not your saddles, nor your speed abate,
'Till safely landed at your palace gate.
On this alone depends your weal or woe;
Such is the will of Fate, and so the Gods foreshew.
He in the sokest terms repaid her love,
And vow'd, nor age, nor absence, should remove
His constant faith, and sure she could not blame
A short divorce due to his injur'd fame.
The debt discharged, then should her soldier come
Gay from the field, and, flush'd with conquest, home;
With equal ardour her affection meet,
And lay his laurels at his mistress' feet.
He ceas'd, and sighing took a kind adieu;
Then urg'd his steed; the fierce Grisippo flew;
With rapid force outstripp'd the lagging wind,
And left the blissful shores, and weeping fair behind;
Now o'er the seas pursu'd his airy flight,
Now scower'd the plains, and climb'd the mountain's height.

Thus driving on at speed the prince had run
Near half his course, when, with the setting sun,
As through a lonely lane he chanc'd to ride,
With rocks and bushes fenced on either side,
He spied a waggon full of wings, that lay
Broke and o'erturn'd across the narrow way.
The helpless driver on the dirty road
Lay struggling, crush't beneath th' incumbent load.

Never
Never in human shape was seen before
A wight so pale, so feeble, and so poor.
Comparisons of age would do him wrong,
For Nestor'sself, if plac'd by him, were young.
His limbs were naked all, and worn so thin,
The bones seem'd starting through the parchment skin,
His eyes half drown'd in rheum, his accents weak,
Bald was his head, and furrow'd was his cheek.

The conscious steed stopp'd short in deadly fright.
And back recoiling stretch'd his wings for flight,
When thus the wretch with supplicating tone,
And rueful face, began his piteous moan,
And, as he spake, the tears ran trickling down.

O gentle youth, if pity e'er inclin'd
Thy soul to generous deeds, if e'er thy mind
Was touch'd with soft distress, extend thy care
To save an old man's life, and ease the load I bear.
So may propitious heaven your journey speed,
Prolong your days, and all your vows succeed.

Mov'd with the prayer the kind Peerenna said,
Too nobly-minded to refuse his aid,
And, prudence yielding to superior grief,
Leap'd from his steed, and ran to his relief;
Remov'd the weight, and gave the pris'ner breath,
Just choke'd, and gasping on the verge of death;
Then reach'd his hand, when lightly with a bound
The grisly spectre, vaulting from the ground,
Seiz'd
Seiz'd him with sudden gries; the ground'd, fell; pitied! - Stood horror-struck, and thoughtless of defence.

O king of Russia, with a thund'ring sound, Bellow'd the ghastly deed: at length they found |
Receive the ruler of mankind: and know; My name is Time, thy ever-aheaded foe. These feet are founderd, and the wings you see. Worn to the pinion in pursuit of thee. Through all the world, in vain for ages sought, But Fate has deposed thee now, and thou art caught! Then round his neck his arm he firmly cast; to rise will not. And seiz'd him by the throat, and grasp'd him fast Till forc'd, at length the soul sub'd its last, And the pale breath left: the side fell bleeding at his feet. Scarce had the cruel spoiler left his prey, When, to it chanced, young Zephyr pass'd that way: Too late his presence to warn his friend. A sad, but helpless, witness of his end, He chafes, and fans, and strives in vain to save His streaming wounds; the work was done too soon, Now lightly with a soft embrace upstart, The lifeless body, and bathes it in his tears; Then to the blissful seats with speed conveys, And graceful on the mossy carpet lays, With decent care, close by the fountain's side, Where first the princess had her phoenix spied. There with sweet flowers his lovely limbs he strew'd, And gave a parting kiss, and sighs and tears bestow'd.

Vol. VI.
To that sad solitude the weeping dame,
Wild with her love, and swoon'd with sorrow, came:
There was she wont to vent her griefs, and pour
Those dear delights that must no more return.
Thither that morn with more than usual care
She sped, but oh what joy to find him there
As just arriv'd, and weary with the way;
Retir'd to soft repose her hero lay:
Now near approaching, she began to steep
With careful steps, loth to disturb his sleep.
'Till quite o'ercome with tenderness she flew,
And round his neck her arms in transport threw:
But, when she found him dead, no tongue can tell
The pangs she felt, the shriek'd, and swooning fell.
Waking, with loud lament'st she pierc'd the skies,
And fill'd th' affrighted forest with her cries.
That fatal hour the palace gate she barr'd,
And fix'd around the coast a stronger guard.
Now rare appearing, and at distance seen,
With crowds of black misfortunes plac'd between;
Mischief's of every kind, corroding care,
And fears, and jealousies, and dark despair.
And since that day: (the wretched world must own
These mournful truths by sad experience known)
No mortal e'er enjoy'd that happy clime,
And every thing on earth submits to Time.
The Ever-Green.

By William Shenstone, Esq.

When tepid breezes fann'd the air,
And violets perfum'd the glade,
Pensive and grave my charming fair
Beneath yon shady lime was laid.

Flourish, said I, those favour'd boughs,
And ever soothe the purest flames;
Witness to none but faithful vows!
Wounded by none but faithful names!

Yield every tree that crowns the grove
To this which pleas'd my wandering dear!
Range where you will, ye bands of love,
Ye still shall seem to revel here.

Lavinia smil'd—and whilst her arm
Her fair reclining head sustain'd,
Betray'd she felt some fresh alarm;
And thus the meaning smile explain'd.

When summer suns shine forth no more,
Will then this lime its shelter yield?
Protect us when the tempests roar,
And winter drives us from the field?

Yet
Yet faithful then the tir shall last—
I smile, she ery'd, but ah! I tremble,
To think, when my fair season's past,
Which Damon then will most resemble.

ANSWER

BY THE SAME.

Too tim'rous maid, can time or chance
A pure ingenious flame controul ?
O lay aside that tender glance,
That melts my frame, that kills my soul.

Were but thy outward charms admir'd,
Frail origin of female sway !
My flame, like other flames inspir'd,
Might then like other flames decay:

But whilst thy mind shall seem thus fair,
Thy soul's unfading charms be seen,
Thou may'lt resign that shape and air,
Yet find thy swain—an ever-green.
CANDOUR.

BY THE SAME.

The warmest friend, I ever prov'd,
My bitterest foe I see:
The kindest maid I ever lov'd,
Is false to love and me.

But shall I make the angry vow,
Which tempts my wavering mind?
Shall dark suspicion cloud my brow,
And bid me shun mankind?

Avault, thou hell-born fiend! no more
Pretend my steps to guide;
Let me be cheated o'er and o'er,
But let me still confide.

If this be folly, all my claim
To wisdom I resign;
But let no sage presume to name
His happiness with mine.

LYSANDER
LYSANDER to CLOE.

BY THE SAME.

'TIS true, my wish will never find
Another nymph so fair, so true;
Since all that's bright, and all that's kind,
In those expressive eyes I view.

And I with grateful zeal could haste
To China for the merest toy,
Could scorch on Libya's barren waste,
To give my dear a moment's joy.

But, fickle as the wave or wind,
I once may fleet those lovely arms;
Pardon a free ingenuous mind,
I do not half deserve thy charms.

If I in any praise excel,
'Tis in soft themes to paint my flame;
But Chloe's sweetness bids me tell,
I shall not long remain the same.

I know its season will expire,
Replaced by cool esteem alone;
Nor more thy matchless breast admire
Than I detest and scorn my own.
This interval my fate allows,
And friendship dictates all I say.
O thun to hear my future vows,
When giddy love returns the lay.

So some poor man may foresee
The random hours of madness
He mourns the fates' severe decree,
And cautions whom he loves to fly.

CLOE TO LYSANDER

BY THE SAME.

Of vagrant loves, and fickle flames
Lyfander's Muse may tell,
And sure such artless freedom claims
His Cloe's best farewell.

Whene'er his heart becomes the theme
We see his fancy thine;
But let not vain Lyfander dream
That e'er that heart was mine.

Can he that fondly hopes to move,
With caution chill his lay?
Can he who feels the power of love,
Foretell that love's decay?

P 4

Why
Why seize believing symphonies in vain?
Go seek some pathless vale,
And listen to thy vocal strain,
Soft echoing down the dale.

While artless Cloe, hence retir'd,
Shall this sad maxim prove;
No bosom, once with love inspir'd,
Could ever cease to love.

TO THE MEMORY OF AN AGREEABLE LADY BURYED
IN MARRIAGE TO A PERSON UNDESERVING HER.

'Twas always held, and ever will,
By sage mankind, discreeter,
'T was to anticipate a lesser ill
Than undergo a greater.

When mortals dread diseases, pain, ill
And languishing conditions in their view,
Who don't the lesser ills sustain
Of physic and physicians and their fees?

Rather than lose his whole estate,
He that but little wits is,
Full gladly pays, four parts in eight,
'To taxes and excises,
With
With numerous ills in single life
   The bachelor's attended;
Such to avoid, he takes a wife—
   And much the case is mended.

Poor Gratia, in her twentieth year,
   Foreseeing future woe,
Chose to attend a monkey here,
   Before an ape below.

An Elegy, written on Valentine Morning.
   By ***

Hark, through the sacred silence of the night,
   Loud Chanticleer doth sound his clarion shrill,
Hailing with song the first pale gleam of light,
   That floats the dark brow of yon eastern hill.

Bright star of morn, oh! leave not yet the wave,
   To deck the dewy frontlet of the day,
Nor thou, Aurora, quit Tithonus' cave,
   Nor drive retiring darkness yet away,

Ere these my rustic hands a garland twine,
   Ere yet my tongue indite a simple song,
For her I mean to hail my Valentine,
   Sweet maiden, fairest of the virgin throng.

3
Sweet is the morn, and sweet the gentle breeze,
That fans the fragrant bosom of the spring,
Sweet chirps the lark, and sweeter far than these,
The gentle love-song gurgling turtles sing.

Oh let the flowers be fragrant as the morn,
And as the turtle's song my ditty sweet:
Those flowers my woven chaplet must adorn,
That ditty must my waking charmer greet.

And thou, blest saint, whom choral creatures join
In one enlivening symphony to hail,
Oh be propitious, gentle Valentine,
And let each holy tender sigh prevail.

Oh give me to approach my sleeping love,
And strew her pillow with the freshest flowers,
No sigh unhallow'd shall my bosom move,
Nor step profane pollute my true-love's bower.

At sacred distance only will I gaze,
Nor bid my unreproved eye refrain,
Mean while my tongue shall chant her beauty's praise
And hail her sleeping with the gentlest strain.

"Awake my fair, awake, for it is time;
Hark, thousand songsters rise from yonder grove,
And rising carol this sweet hour of prime,
Each to his mate, a soundelay of love."
All nature sings the hymeneal song,
All nature follows, where the spring invites;
Come forth, my love, to us these joys belong,
Ours is the spring, and all her young delights.

For us she throws profusely forth her flowers,
Which in fresh chaplets joyful I will twine;
Come forth, my fair, oh do not lose these hours,
But wake, and be my faithful Valentine.

Full many an hour; all lonely have I sigh'd,
Nor dared the secret of my love reveal,
Full many a fond expedient have I tried
My warmest wish in silence to conceal.

And oft to far retired solitude
All mournfully my slow step have I bent,
Luxurious there indulg'd my musing mood,
And there alone have given my sorrows vent.

This day resolv'd I dare to plight my vow,
This day, long since the feast of love decreed,
Embden'd will I speak my flame, nor thou
Refuse to hear how sore my heart does bleed.

Yet if I should behold my love awake,
Ah, frail resolves, ah whither will ye fly?
Full well I know I shall not silence break,
But struck with awe almost for fear shall die.
Oh no, I will not trust a fault'ring speech
In broken phrase an awkward tale to tell
A tale, whose tenderness no tongue can reach,
Nor softest melody can utter well.

But my meek eye, best herald to my heart,
I will compose to soft and downcast look,
And at one humble glance it shall impart
My love, nor fear the language be mistook.

For she shall read (apt scholar at this lore)
With what fond passion my true bosom glows,
How hopeless of return I still adore,
Nor dare the boldness of my wish disclose.

Should she then smile,—yet ah! she smiles on all,
Her gentle temper pities all distress;
On every hill, each vale, the sun-beams fall,
Each herb, and flower, each tree, and shrub they bless.

Alike all nature grateful owns the boon,
The universal ray to all is free;
Like fond Endymion should I hope the moon,
Because among the rest she shines on me?

Hope, vain presumer, keep, oh keep away:
Ev'n if my woe her gentle bosom move,
Pity some look of kindness may display;
But each soft glance is not a look of love.

Yet,
Yet, heavenly visitant, thou dost not quit
Those bow'rs where angels sweet division sing,
Nor deignest thou on mortal shrine to sit
Alone, for round thee ever on the wing,

Glad choirs of love, attend, and hov'ring wait
Thy mild command; of these thy blooming train
Oh bid some sylph in morning dreams relate,
Ere yet my love awake, my secret pain.

THE Dowager.

BY THE SAME.

Where aged elms, in many a goodly row,
Give yearly shelter to the constant crow,
A mansion stands:—long since the pile was rais'd,
Whose Gothic grandeur the rude hind amaz'd.
For the rich ornament on every part
Confess'd the founder's wealth, and workman's art;
Though as the range of the wide court we tread,
The broken arch now totters o'er the head;
And where of old rose high the social smoke,
Now swallows build, and lonely ravens croak.
Though Time, whose touch each beauty can deface,
Has torn from every tow'r the sculptur'd grace;
Though
Though round each stone the fluggerd ivy crawls,
Yet ancient state fits hovering on the walls.

Where wont the festive chorus to resound,
And jocund dancing frequent beat the ground,
Now silence spreads around her gloomy reign,
Save when the mastiff clanks his iron chain.
Save when his hoarse bark echoes dire alarm,
Fierce to protect the place from midnight harm.

Its only guard; no revel founding late
Drives the night villain from the lonely gate.

An hallow'd matron and her simple train
The solemn battlements alone contain;
An hoary dowager, whose placid face
Old age has deck'd with lovely awful grace;
With almost vernal bloom her cheek still strow'd,
As beauty ling'ring left her lov'd abode.

That lov'd abode, where join'd with truth and sense
She form'd the features to mute eloquence.
And bade them charm the still attentive throng,
Who watch'd the sacred lessons of her tongue.
For not through life the dame had liv'd retir'd,
But once had thone, e'en midst a court admir'd;

What time the lov'd possessor of her charms
Returning from the war in victor arms,
Call'd from his monarch's tongue the plaintive praise,
While honour wreath'd him with unfading bays.

She, happy partner of each joyful hour,
Then walk'd serene amid the pomp of pow'r.
While all confess'd no warrior's wish could move
For fairer prize than such accomplished love:
Nor to that love could aught more transport yield,
Than graceful valour from the victor field.
Thus flourish'd once the beauteous and the brave;
But mortal bliss meets the untimely grave:
Aurelius died—his relic's pious tear
O'er his lov'd ashes frequent flow'd sincere;
Each decent rite with due observance paid,
Each solemn requiem offered to his shade,
Plac'd 'mid the brave his urn in holy ground,
And bade his hallow'd banners wave around.
Then left the gaudy scenes of pomp and power,
While prudence beckon'd to that ancient bower,
And those paternal fields, the sole remains
Of ample woods and far-extended plains,
Which tyrant custom rudely tore away,
To distant heirship an expected prey.
Serene she sought the far retired grove,
Once the blest'd mansion of her happy love,
Please'd with the thought, that memory oft would raise
A solemn prospect of those blooming days
Aurelius gave; her pious purpose now
To keep still constant to her sacred vow,
In lonely luxury her sorrows feed,
And pass her life in widow's decent weed.
One pledge of love her comfort still remain'd,
Whom in this solitude she careful train'd

To
To virtuous lore; and while as year by year
New graces made Aurelia still more dear;
Full many an hour unheeded she would trace
The father's semblance in the daughter's face;
While tender sighs oft heav'd her faithful breast,
And sudden tears her lasting love express.
Thus long she dwelt in innate virtues great,
Amid the villages in sacred state:
For every grace to which submission bows,
The pow'r which conscious dignity bestows,
She felt superior; for from ancient race
She gloried her long ancestry to trace;
And ever had Aurelia's thought aspire
To every grace, each ray of sacred fire,
That full of heav'n-born dignity informs
The mortal breast which ardent virtue warms;
Then led her to the venerable hall
Where her successive fires adorn'd the wall;
And arched windows with their blazon bright
Shed through the herald glow a solemn light;
There clad in rough habiliments of war
Full many a hero bore a glorious scar;
There in the civic fur the sons of peace,
Whose counsels bade their country's tumults cease;
While by their side, gracing the ancient scene,
Hung gentle ladies of most comely mien.
Then eager through the well-known tale she ran,
In what fair sault each honour had been won.
What female grace each virgin had possessed
To charm to gentle love the manly breast;
Pleased to observe how long her gen’rous blood
Through fair and brave had pass’d a spotless flood.
Mean while the young Aurelia’s bosom stir’d
With emulation by each tale inspir’d,
In eager transport frequent breath’d her prayer
The graces of her ancestry to share:
Nor breath’d in vain, her fond maternal guide
Cherish’d with care each spark of virtuous pride;
And ever as she gave a lesson new,
Would point some old example to her view:
Inflam’d by this, her mind was quickly fraught
With each sage precept, that her mother taught.
The goodly dame, thus blest’d in her employ,
Felt each soft transport of parental joy,
And liv’d content, her utmost with fulfill’d
In the fair prospect of a virtuous child;
Resign’d she waited now the awful hour
When death should raise her to that heav’nly bow’r,
Where with her lov’d Aurelius she might share
The pleasing task, to watch with guardian care
Their offspring’s steps, and hov’ring o’er her head,
The gracious dew of heavenly peace to shed;
Nor fear’d her decency of life would prove
An added bliss to all the joys above.
ODE TO THE HONOURABLE ****.

BY MR. F. COVENTRY.

NOW Britain's senate, far renown'd,
Assembles full an awful band!
Now Majesty, with golden circle crown'd,
Mounts her bright throne, and waves her gracious hand.
"Ye chiefs of Albion with attention hear,
"Guard well your liberties, review your laws,
"Begin, begin th' important year,
"And boldly speak in Freedom's cause."
Then starting from her summer's rest
Glad Eloquence unbinds her tongue.
She feels rekindling raptures wake her breast,
And pours the sacred energy along.
'Twas here great Hampden's patriot voice was heard,
Here Pym, Kimbolton sir'd the British soul,
When Pow'r her arm despotic rear'd
But felt a senate's great controul.
'Twas here the pond'ring worthies sat,
Who fix'd the crown on William's head,
When awe-struck Tyranny renounc'd the state,
And bigot James his injur'd kingdoms fled.

Thee,
The generous youth, whom nature, birth adorn,
The choice select from you assembled throng:
O thou to serve thy country born,
Tell me, young hero of my song,
Thy genius now in fairest bloom,
And warm with fancy's brightest rays,
Why sleeps thy soul unconscious of its doom?
Why idly fleet thy unapplauded days?
Thy country beckons thee with lifted hand,
Arise, she calls, awake thy latent flame,

... Arise; 'tis England's high command,
And snatch the ready wreaths of fame.
Be this thy passion; greatly dare
A people's jarring wills to sway,
With curst Corruption wage eternal war,
That where thou goest, applauding crowds may say,
"Lo, that is he, whose spirit-ruling voice
"From her wild heights can call Ambition down,
"Can still Sedition's brutal noise,
"Or shake a tyrant's purple throne:"
Then chiefs, and sages yet unborn
Shall boast thy thoughts in distant days,
With thee fair History her leaves adorn,
And laurell'd bards proclaim thy lasting praise.
To Miss *. By Miss Eliza Carter.

I,

The midnight moon serenely smiles
O'er nature's soft repose,
No lowering cloud obscures the skies,
Nor ruffling tempest blows.

II.
Now every passion sinks to rest,
The throbbing heart lies still,
And varying schemes of life no more
Distract the labouring will.

III.
In silence hush'd, to reason's voice
Attends each mental power;
Come, dear Emilia, and enjoy
Reflection's favourite hour.

IV.
Come: while this peaceful scene invites,
Let's search this ample round;
Where shall the lovely fleeting form
Of Happiness be found?

V.
Does it amidst the frolic mirth
Of gay assemblies dwell?
Or hide beneath the solemn gloom
That shades the hermit's cell?

VI. How
VI.
How oft the laughing brow of joy
A sick'ning heart conceals,
And through the cloister's deep recess
Invading sorrow steals.

VII.
In vain through beauty, fortune, wit,
The fugitive we trace!
It dwells not in the faithless smile
That brightens Clodia's face.

VIII.
Perhaps the joy to these deny'd,
The heart in friendship finds:
Ah! dear delusion! gay conceit
Of visionary minds!

IX.
How'ever our varying notions rove,
All yet agree, in one,
To place its being in some state
At distance from our own.

X.
O blind to each indulgent aim
Of power, supremely wise,
Who fancy happiness in aught
The hand of Heav'n denies.

XI.
Vain is alike the joy we seek,
And vain what we possess,
Unless harmonious reason tunes
The passions into peace.
XII.
To temper'd wishes, just desires,
Is happiness confin'd,
And deaf to folly's call attends
The music of the mind.

Lady Mary Wortley Montague, to Sir William Yorke.

I.
Dear Colin, prevent my warm blushes,
Since how can I speak without pain?
My eyes have oft told you their wishes,
Ah! can't you their meaning explain?
My passion would lose by expression;
And you too might cruelly blame:
Then don't you expect a confession
Of what is too tender to name.

* Sir William Yonge of Exeter, in the County of Devon, Bart. a gentleman who made a distinguished figure in the political world during the reign of King George the Second. He was uniformly attached to the measures of Sir Robert Walpole, afterwards Lord Orford, and geerally in possession of some lucrative post under government. On revi-
v ing the order of the Bath in 1725, he had the honour to be named one of the Knights Companions. His death happened on August 16th, 1755.

II. Since
II.
Since yours is the province of speaking,
Why should you expect it of me?
Our wishes should be in our keeping,
Till you tell us what they should be.
Then quickly why don’t you discover?
Did your breast feel tortures like mine,
Eyes need not tell over and over
What I in my bosom confine.

SIR WILLIAM YONGE'S ANSWER.

GOOD madam, when ladies are willing,
A man must needs look like a fool;
For me, I would not give a shilling
For one that is kind out of rule.
At least you might stay for my offer,
Not snatch like old maids in despair,
If you’ve liv’d to these years without proffer;
Your sights are now lost in the air.

II:
You might leave me to guess by your blushing,
And not speak the matter so plain;
’Tis ours to pursue and be pushing,
’Tis yours to affect a disdain.
That you’re in a pitiful taking,
By all your sweet ogle I see;
But the fruit that will fall without flaking
Indeed is too mellow for me.
Miss Soper's Answer to a Lady, who invited her to retire into a monastic Life at St. Cross, near Winchester.

In vain, mistaken maid, you'd fly
To desert and to shade;
But since you call, for once I'll try...
How well your vows are made.

II.
To noise and cares let's bid adieu,
And solitude commend.
But how the world will envy you,
And pity me your friend!

III.
You, like rich metal hid in earth,
Each swain will dig to find;
But I expect no second birth,
For dross is left behind.

Repent.
REPTENCE.

BY THE SAME.

I.

ALL attendants apart,
I examin'd my heart,
Last night when I lay'd me to rest;
And methinks I'm inclin'd
To a change of my mind,
For, you know, second thoughts are the best.

II.

To retire from the crowd,
And make ourselves good,
By avoiding of every temptation,
Is in truth to reveal
What we'd better conceal,
That our passions want some regulation.

III.

It will much more redound
To our praise to be found,
In a world so abounding with evil,
Unspotted and pure;
Though not so demure,
As to wage open war with the devil.
IV.

Then bidding farewell,
To the thoughts of a cell,
I'll prepare for a militant life;
And if brought to distress,
Why then—I'll confess,
And do penance in shape of a wife.

A SONG, BY T. PERCY.

O Nancy, wilt thou go with me,
Nor light to leave the flattering town?
Can silent glens have charms for thee,
The lowly cot and russet gown?
No longer dress'd in silken sheen,
No longer deck'd with jewels rare,
Say, canst thou quit each courtly scene,
Where thou wert fairest of the fair?

O Nancy! when thou'rt far away,
Wilt thou not cast a wish behind?
Say, canst thou face the parching ray,
Nor shrink before the wintry wind?
O can that soft and gentle mien
Extremes of hardship learn to bear,
Nor sad regret each courtly scene,
Where thou wert fairest of the fair?

a Thomas Percy, D. D. now Dean of Carlisle.

O Nancy!
O Nancy! canst thou love so true,
Through perils keen with me to go?
Or when thy swain mishap shall rue,
To share with him the pang of woe?
Say, should disease or pain befall,
Wilt thou assume the nurse's care,
Nor wilful those gay scenes recall
Where thou wert fairest of the fair?

And when at last thy love shall die,
Wilt thou receive his parting breath?
Wilt thou repose each struggling sigh,
And clear with smiles the bed of death?
And wilt thou o'er his breathless clay
Strew flow'rs, and drop the tender tear,
Nor then regret those scenes so gay,
Where thou wert fairest of the fair?

CYNTHIA,
CYNTHIA, AN ELEGIAE POEM.

BY THE SAME.

Libeat tibi Cynthia mecum
Roscida muscosi atriq teneris juris.

BENEATH an aged oak's embowering shade,
Whose spreading arms with gray moss fringed were,
Around whose trunk the clasping ivy stray'd;
A love-lorn youth oft pensively would repair.

Fast by, a Naiad taught her stream to glide,
Which through the dale a winding channel wove,
The silver willow deck'd its verdant side,
The whispering sedges wav'd along the shore.

Here oft, when Morn peep'd o'er the dusky hill;
Here oft when Eve bedew'd the misty vale;
Careless he laid him all beside the rill,
And pour'd in strains like these his artless tale.

Ah! would he say—and then a sigh would heave?
Ah, Cynthia! sweeter than the breath of morn,
Soft as the gentle breath that fans at eve,
Of thee bereft, how shall I live forlorn?

Ah!
Ah! what avails this sweetly solemn bow'r,
That silent stream where dimpling eddies play;
Yon th'my bank bedeck'd with many a flow'r,
Where maple-tufts exclude the beam of day?

Robb'd of my love, for how can these delight,
Though lavish Spring her smiles around has cast!
Despair, alas! that whels the soul in night,
Dims the sad eye and deadens every taste.

As droops the lily at the blighting gale;
Or a crimson-spotted cowslip of the mead,
Whose tender stalk (alas! their stalk so frail)
Some haisty foot hath bruis'd with heedless tread;

As droops the woodbine, when some village hind
Hath fell'd the sapling elm it fondly bound;
No more it gadding dances in the wind,
But trails its fading beauties on the ground:

So droops my soul, dear maid, downcast, and sad,
For ever! ah! for ever torn from thee;
Bereft of each sweet hope, which once it had,
When love, when treacherous love first smil'd on me.

--- On her left breast
A mole cinque-spotted; like the crimson drop,
'Th' bottom of a cowslip.

Shakespeare's Cymbeline, Act 3.
Return, blest days, return, ye laughing hours,
Which led me up the roseate steep of youth;
Which strew’d my simple path with vernal flow’rs;
And bade me court chast Science and fair Truth.

Ye know, the curling breeze, or gilded fly
That idly wantons in the noon-tide air,
Was not so free, was not so gay as I,
For ah! I knew not then or love, or care.

Witness, ye winged daughters of the year,
If e’er a sigh had learnt to heave my breast!
If e’er my cheek was conscious of a tear,
’Till Cynthia came and robb’d my soul of rest!

O have you seen, bath’d in the morning dew,
The budding rose its infant bloom display;
When first its virgin tints unfold to view,
It shrinks and scarcely trusts the blaze of day?

So soft, so delicate, so sweet she came,
Youth’s damask glow just dawning on her cheek:
I gaz’d, I sigh’d, I caught the tender flame,
Felt the fond pang, and droop’d with passion, weak.

Yet not unpitied was my pain the while;
For oft beside yon sweet-briar in the dale,
With many a blush, with many a melting smile,
She sate and listen’d to the plaintive tale.

Ah
Ah me! I fondly dreamt of pleasures rare,
Nor deem'd so sweet a face with scorn could glow:
How could you cruel then pronounce despair,
Chill the warm hope, and plant the thorn of woe?

What though no treasure canker in my chest,
Nor crowds of suppliant vassals hail me lord!
What though my roof can boast no princely guest,
Nor surfeits lurk beneath my frugal board!

Yet should Content, that shuns the gilded bed,
With smiling Peace, and Virtue there forgot,
And rose-lip'd Health, which haunts the straw-built shed,
With cherub Joy, frequent my little cot:

Led by chaste Love, the decent band should come,
O charmer would'st thou deign my roof to share!
Nor should the Muses scorn our simple dome,
Or knit in mystic dance the Graces fair.

The wood-land nymphs, and gentle fays, at eve
Forth from the dripping cave and mossy dell,
Should round our hearth fantastic measures weave,
And shield from mischief by their guardian spell.

Come then, bright maid, and quit the city throng,
Have rural joys no charm to win the soul?
— She proud, alas! derides my lowly song,
Scorns the fond vow, and spurns the ruffet stole.

Then,
Then, Love, begone, thy thirstless empire yield;
In youthful toils I'll lose th' unmanly pain:
With echoing horns I'll rouse the jocund field,
Urge the keen chace, and sweep along the plain.

Or all in some lone moss-grow'n tow'r sublime
With midnight lamp I'll watch pale Cynthia round,
Explore the choicest rolls of ancient Time,
And heal with Wisdom's balm my hapless wound.

Or else I'll roam—Ah no! that sigh profound
Tells me that stubborn love disdains to yield;
Nor flight, nor Wisdom's balm can heal the wound,
Nor pain for sake me in the jocund field.

D I A L O G U E t o C H L O R I N D A

B Y M R . A L S O P .

S. C E A S E, Chlorinda, cease to chide me,
When my passion I relate;
Why should kindness be denied me?
Why should love be paid with hate?

* Anthony Alsop, the author of this dialogue and of the three subsequent poems, was educated in Westminster college, and from thence
If the fruit of all my wishes
Must be, to be treated so;
What could you do more than this is
To your most outrageous foe?

C. Simple Strephón, cease complaining,
Talk no more of foolish love;
Think not e'er my heart to reign in,
Think not all you say can move.

thence elected to Christ Church in Oxford, where he took the degrees of M. A. March 23, 1696, and of B. D. Dec. 12, 1706. On his coming to the university he was very soon distinguished by Dean Aldrich. He passed through the usual offices in his college to that of Censor with considerable reputation, and for some years had the principal noblemen and gentlemen belonging to the society committed to his care. In this useful employment he continued until his merits recommended him to Sir Jonathan Trelawny, Bishop of Winchester, who appointed him his chaplain, and soon after gave him a prebend in his own Cathedral, together with the rectory of Brightwell, in the county of Berks, which afforded him ample provision for a learned retirement, in which he remained to the end of his days; and so well satisfied was he with a recluse life, that he could not be drawn from it by the repeated solicitations of those who thought him qualified for a more public character and a higher station. His death, which happened June 10, 1726, was occasioned by his falling into a ditch that led to his garden door, the path being narrow, and part of it giving way under his feet.

Vog. VI. R Did
Did I take delight to fret
Thrice ten thousand slaves a day.
Thrice ten thousand times your better,
Gladly would my rule obey.

S. Strive not, fairest, to unbind me:
Let me keep my pleasing chain;
Charms that first to love inclin'd me,
Will for ever love maintain.

Would you send my heart a roving?
First to love I must forbear.
Would you have me cease from loving?
You must cease from being fair.

C. Strephon, leave to talk thus idly:
Let me hear of love no more:
You mistake Chlorinda widely,
Thus to seize her o'er and o'er.

Seek not her who still forbids you;
To some other tell your moan:
'Choose where'er your fancy leads you,
Let Chlorinda but alone.

S. If Chlorinda still denies me
That which none but she can give,
Let the whole wide world despise me,
'Tis for her alone I live.
Grant me yet this one poor favour,
With this one request comply;
Let us each go on for ever,
I to ask, and you deny.

C. Since, my Strephon, you so kind are,
   All pretensions to resign;
Trust Chlorinda.—You may find her.
   Less severe than you divine.
Strephon struck with joy beholds her,
   Would have spoke, but knew not how,
But he look'd such things as told her
   More than all his speech could do.

TO CHLORINDA.

BY THE SAME.

S E E, Strephon, what unhappy fate
   Does on thy fruitless passion wait,
Adding to flame fresh fuel:
Rather than thou should'st favour find,
The kindest soul on earth's unkind,
And the best nature cruel.

R. 2
The goodness, which Chlorinda shews,
From mildness and good breeding flows,
But must not love be styl'd:
Or else 'tis such as mothers try,
When, wearied with incessant cry,
They still a sroward child:

She with a graceful mien and air,
Gently civil, yet severe,
Bids thee all hopes give o'er.
Friendship she offers, pure and free;
And who, with such a friend as she,
Could want, or wish for more?

The cur that swam along the flood,
His mouth well fill'd with morsel good,
(Too good for common cur!)
By visionary hopes betray'd,
Gaping to catch a fleeting shade,
Lost what he held before.

Mark, Strephon, and apply this tale,
Left love and friendship both should fail;
Where then would be thy hope?
Of hope, quoth Strephon, talk not, friend;
And for applying—know, the end
Of every cur's a rope.
The Fable of Ixion
To Chlorinda.

By the same.

Ixion, as the poets tell us,
Was one of those pragmatic fellows,
Who claim a right to kiss the hand
Of the best lady in the land;
Demonstrating, by dint of reason,
That impudence in love’s no treason.

He let his fancy soar much higher;
And ventur’d boldly to aspire
To Juno’s high and mighty grace,
And woo’d the goddess face to face.
What mortal e’er had whims so odd,
To think of cuckolding a God?

For she was both Jove’s wife and sister,
And yet the rascal would have kiss’d her.

How he got up to heaven’s high palace,
Not one of all the poets tell us;
It must be therefore understood,
That he got up which way he could.
Nor is it, that I know, recorded,
How bows were made, and speeches worded;
So, leaving this to each one's guess,
I'll only tell you the success.

But first I stop awhile to shew
What happen'd lately here below.

Chlorinda, who beyond compare
Of all the fair-ones is most fair;
Chlorinda, by the Gods design'd
To be the pattern of her kind;
With every charm of face and mind;
Glanc'd light'ning from her eyes to blue,
And shot poor Strophon through and through;
He, over head and ears her lover,
Try'd all the ways he could to move her;
He sigh'd, and vow'd, and pray'd, and cry'd,
And did a thousand things besides;
She let him sigh, and pray, and cry on—
But now hear more about Ixion.

The Goddess, proud (as folks report her),
Disdain'd that shorth sighted should court her;
And yet she chose the fool to flatter,
To make him fancy some great matter;
And hope in time he might get at her;
Grac'd him with now and then a smile,
But only scorn'd him all the while;
Resolv'd at last a trick to shew him,
Seeming to yield, and so undo him.

Now
Now which way, do you think, she took?
(For do't she would by hook or crook);
Why, thus I find it in my book.
She call'd a pretty painted cloud,
The brightest of the wand'ring crowd;
For she, you know, is queen o' th' air,
And all the clouds and vapours there
Governs at will, by nod or summons,
As Walpole does the house of commons.
This cloud, which came to her stark-naked,
She dres'd as fine as hands could make it.
For her own wardrobe out she brought
Whate'er was dainty, wove or wrought;
A snock which Pallas spun and gave her,
Once on a time to gain her favour;
A gown that ha'n't on earth its fellow,
Of finest blue, and lin'd with yellow,
Fit for a goddess to appear in,
And not a pin the worse for wearing;
A quilted petticoat beside,
With whalebone hoop fix fathom wide;
With these she deck'd the cloud, d'ye see?
As like herself, as like could be:
So like, that could not I or you know.
Which was the cloud, and which was Juno.
Thus dres'd she sent it to the villain,
To let him act his wicked will on:

R 4

Then
Then laugh'd at the poor fool aloud,
Who 'e d a goddesse | grasp'd a cloud.
This, you will say, was well done on her
T' expose the temptes of her honour—
But more of him you need not hear;
Only to Strephon lend an ear.
He never entertain'd one thought
With which a goddesse could find fault;
His spotless love might be forgiven
By every saint in earth and heaven.
Juno herself, though nice and haughty,
Would not have judg'd his passion naughty.
All this Chlorinda's self confess'd,
And own'd his frame was pure and chaste,
Read what his teeming Muse brought forth,
And prais'd it far beyond its worth:
Mildly receiv'd his fond address,
And only blam'd his love's excess:
Yet she, so good, so sweet, so smiling,
So full of truth, so unbeguiling,
One way or other still devis'd,
To let him see he was despis'd:
And when he plum'd, and grew most proud,
All was a vapour, all a cloud.

A TALE.
A TALE.

TO CHLORINDA.

BY THE SAME.

DAME Venus, a daughter of Jove's,
And amongst all his daughters most fair,
Lost, it seems, to her day the two doves
That wafted her car through the air.

The dame made a heavy sad rout,
Ran about heav'n and earth to console 'em;
And sought high and low to find out,
Where the biddyes were stray'd, or who stole 'em.

To the god, who the stragglers should meet,
She promis'd most tempting fine pay,
Six kisses than honey more sweet,
And a seventh far sweeter than they.

The proposal no sooner was made,
But it put all the Gods in a flame;
For who would not give all he had
To be kiss'd by so dainty a dame?
To Cyprus, to Paphos, they run,
Where the Goddess of us'd to retire;
Some rode round the world with the sun,
And search'd every country and shire.

But with all their hard running and riding,
Not a God of 'em claim'd the reward;
For no one could tell tale or tiding,
If the doves were alive or were starv'd.

At last the fly shooter of men,
Young Cupid (I beg the God's pardon),
Mamma, your blue birds I have seen
In a certain terrestrial garden.

Where, where, my dear child, quickly shew,
Quoth the dame, almost out of her wits:
Do but go to Chlorinda's, says Cu,
And you'll find 'em in shape of pewits.

Is it she that hath done me this wrong?
Full well I know her, and her arts;
She has follow'd the thieving trade long,
But I thought she dealt only in hearts.

I shall soon make her know, so I shall—
And with that to Jove's palace she run,
And began like a bedlam to bawl,
I am cheated, I am robbed, I'm undone.

Chlorinda,
Chlorinda, whom none can approach
Without losing his heart or his senses,
Has stole the two doves from my coach,
And now flaunts it at Venus' expenses.

She has chang'd the poor things to pewits,
And keeps 'em like ord'nary fowls:
So, when she robs men of their wits,
She turns 'em to asses or owls.

I could tell you of many a hundred
Of figure, high station, and means,
Whom she without mercy has plunder'd,
Ever since she came into her teens.

But her thefts upon earth I'd have borne,
Or have let 'em all pass for mere fable;
But nothing will now serve her turn,
But the doves out of Venus's stable.

Is it fit, let your mightyness say,
That I, like some pittyful flirt,
Should tarry within doors all day,
Or else trudge it afoot in the dirt?

Is it fit that a mortal should trample
On me, who am sty'd queen of beauty?
O make her, great Jove, an example,
And teach Nimble-fingers her duty.
Sir Jove, when he heard her thus rage,
For all his great gravity, smil'd;
And then, like a judge wise and sage,
He began in terms sober and mild.

Learn, daughter, to bridle your tongue,
Forbear to traduce with your prattle
The fair, who has done you no wrong,
And scorn to purloin goods and chattel.

She needs neither gewgaw, nor trinket,
To carry the world all before her;
Her deserts, I would have you to think it,
Are enough to make all men adore her.

Your doves are elop'd, I confess,
And chuse with Chlorinda to dwell,
But blame not the lady for this;
For sure 'tis no crime to excel.

As for them, I applaud their high aims;
Having serv'd from the time of their birth
The fairest of heavenly dàmes,
They would now serve the fairest on earth.
ODE on LYRIC POETRY,

By Dr. M'ariot.

I. 1.

INMATE of sneaking cats, whose rustle shed,
Within this humble bed,
Her twittering progeny contains,
The swallow sweeps the plains,
Or lightly skims from level lakes the dew.
The ringdove ever true
In plaintive accents tells of unrelenting fate,

Far from the ravens croak, and bird of night,
That shrieking wings her flight
When, at his matter'd site,
Hid in the dusky desart vale,

With starting eye, and visage pale,
The grimly wizard sees the spectres rise unholy;

But haunts the woods that held her beauteous mate,
And woos the Echo soft with murmurs melancholy.

I. 2.

Sublime alone the feather'd monarch flies,
His nest dark mists upon the mountains shrowd;
In vain the howling storms arise,
When borne on outstretche'd plume aloft he springs,
Dashing with many a stroke the parting cloud,
Or to the buoyant air commits his wings
Floating with even sail adown the liquid skies;

Then
Then darting upward, swift his wings aspire,
Where thunders keep their gloomy seat,
And lightnings arm'd with heaven's avenging ire.
None can the dread artillery meet,
Or through the airy region, tove,
But he who guards the throne of Jove,
And grasps the flaming bolt of sacred fire.

I. 31

Know, with young Ambition bold,
In vain, my Muse, thy dazzled eyes explore,
Distant aims, where wont to soar,
Their burning way the kindling spirits hold,
Heights too arduous wisely shun;
Humbler flights thy wings attend;
For heaven-taught Genius can alone ascend
Back to her native sky,
And with directed eagle eye
Pervade the lofty spheres, and view the blazing sun.

II. 1

But hark! o'er all the flower-enam'ld ground,
What mutic breathes around!
I see, I see the virgin train
Unlock their streams again,
Rolling to many a vale their liquid lapse along,
While at the warbled song
Which holds entranc'd Attention's wakeful ear,
Broke are the magic bands of iron sleep.

Love,
Love, wayward child, oft wont to weep,
In tears his robe to steep
Forgets; and Care that counts his store,
Now thinks each mighty business o'er;
While sits on ruin'd cities, war's wide-wasting glory,
Ambition, ceasing the proud pile to rear,
And sighs; unfinish'd leaving half her ample story.

II. 2.
Then once more, sweet enthusiasm, happy lyre,
Thy soothing solace deign awhile to bring.
I strive to catch the sacred fire,
And wake thee emulous on Granta's plain,
Where all the Muses haunt his hallow'd spring,
And where the Graces dunt the fordid train,
Scowndrel of heaven-born arts which thee and peace inspire:
On life's sequester'd sconce they silent wait,
Nor heed the baleful pomp of power,
Nor shining dreams that crowd at Fortune's gate;
But smooth th' invincible hour
Of pain, which man is doom'd to know,
And teach the mortal mind to glow
With pleasures plac'd beyond the shaft of Fate.

II. 3.
But, alas! th' amusive reed
Ill suits the lyre that asks a master's hand,
And fond fancies vainly feed
A breast that life's more active scenes demand.
Sloth ignoble to disclaim
'Tis enough: the lyre unstrung,
At other feet the victor palm I sing
In Grants's glorious shrine;
Where crown'd with radiance divine
Her smiles shall nurse the Muse; the Muse shall lift her fame.

ARION, an ODE.

BY THE SAME.

I.
QUEEN of each sacred sound, sweet child of air,
Who sitting thron'd upon the vaulted sky,
Dost catch the notes which undulating fly,
Oft wafted up to thy exalted sphere,
On the soft bosom of each rolling cloud,
Charming thy listen'ning ear
With strains that bid the panting lover die:
Or laughing mirth, or tender grief inspire,
Or with full chorus loud
Which lift our holy hope, or fan the hero's fire:
Enchanting Harmony, 'tis thine to cheer
The soul by woe which sinks opprest,
From sorrow's eye to wipe the tear,
And on the bleeding wound to pour the balmy rest.

II. 'Twas
II.

'Twas when the winds were roaring loud,
And Ocean swell'd his billows high,
By savage hands condemn'd to die,
Rais'd on the stem the trembling Lesbian flood.

All past he heard the tempest blow,
As on the watery grave below

He fix'd his weeping eye.

Ah! hateful lust of impious gold,

What can thy mighty rage withhold,

Deaf to the melting powers of Harmony!

But ere the bard unpitied dies,

Again his soothing art he tries,

Again he sweeps the strings,

Slowly fade the notes arise,

While thus in plaintive sounds the sweet musician sings.

III.

From beneath the coral cave

Circled with the silver wave,

Where with wreaths of emerald crown'd

Ye lead the festive dance around,

Daughters of Venus, hear, and save.

Ye Tritons, hear, whose blast can swell

With mighty sounds the twisted shell;

And you, ye sib'rs Syrens, hear,

Ever beauteous, ever sweet,

Who lull the listen'ting pilot's ear

With magic song, and softly breath'd deceit.
By all the Gods who subject roll
From gushing urns their tribute to the main,
By him who bids the winds to roar,
By him whose trident shakes the shore,
If e'er for you I raise the sacred strain
When pious mariners your power adore,
Daughters of Nereus, hear and save.

IV.

He sung, and from the coral cave,
Circled with the silver wave,
With pitying ear
The Nereids hear.
Gently the waters flowing,
The winds now ceas'd their blowing,
In silence listening to his tuneful lay,
Around the bark's sea-beaten side,
The sacred dolphin play'd,
And sportive dash'd the briny tide:
The joyous omen soon the bard survey'd,
Nor fear'd with bolder leap to try the watery way:
On his scaly back now riding,
O'er the curling billow gliding,
Again with bold triumphant hand
He bade the notes aspire,
Again to joy attun'd the lyre,
Forgot each danger past, and reach'd secure the land.

HORACE.
What

Part II in the First Volume.

Exception of the old Club at Wittenberge. Mr. Erasmus had made a great p... Paul Pock's, Pock to—Puckert, Puck. The great German were
July 14, 1554, when he was 62, and he was back his body became extinct.

Peter's confidence, but enjoyed that honour a very short time. He died in Second's reign passed his life with little notice or respect from the the period he lost his popularity; and during the remainder of George employment; and Mr. Pock's was gain from, or the Priory Council, test with the minister, Sir Robert Willoughby, who in 1544 received the left with the king's own hand, and at the same time ordered to be put one of every commission of the peace. He succeeded as deputy in this con-their on July 14, 1543, he was knighted one of the king's Privy Councilors and ceased to wait to opposition to the measures of the Commonwealth
Holland. In 1545 he was elected brigadier of the
He was appointed secretary at Westminster and afterwards Collector of the which by Lord Bath, a...—Pace, Pace, and the Earl of Northumberland, the first Monmouth, 26th March 1685. He very early was introduced into the

Or any thing that's foreign:

NEVER dear Faz, commit thy blame

Imitated by Lord B a n...—P a t e to P a z, guid pelluci, Camber, &c.

H O R A C E. BOOK II. ODE II.
What can Bavaria do to us,
What Prussia's monarch, or the Rufs,
Or e'en prince Charles of Lorraine?

II.
Let us be cheerful whilst we can,
And lengthen out the short-lived span,
Enjoying every hour.
The moon itself we see decay,
Beauty's the worse for every day,
And so's the sweetest flower.

III.
How oft, dear Faz, have we been told,
That Paul and Faz are both grown old,
By young and wanton lasses?
Then, since our time is now so short,
Let us enjoy the only sport
Of toasting off our glasses.

IV.
From White's we'll move th' expensive scene,
And steal away to Richmond Green;
There free from noise and riot,
Polly each morn shall fill our tea,
Spread bread and butter—and then we
Each night get drunk in quiet.

V. Unless
V.
Unless perchance earl Leicester comes,
As noisy as a dozen drums,
And makes an horrid pother.
Else might we quiet sit and quaff,
And gently chat, and gayly laugh
At this and that and t'other.

VI.
Br—— shall settle what's to pay,
Adjust accounts by algebra;
I'll always order dinner——
Br——, though solemn, yet is fly,
And leers at Poll with roguish eye
To make the girl a sinner.

VII.
Powell, d'ye hear, let's have the ham,
Some chickens and a chine of lamb——
And what else?—let's see——look ye——
Br—— must have his damn'd bouillie,
B—— fattens on his fricasse,
I'll have my water-sucky.

VIII.
When dinner comes, we'll drink about,
No matter who is in, or out,
'Till wine, or sleep, o'ertake us;
Each man may nod, or nap, or wink,
And when it is our turn to drink,
Our neighbour then shall awake us.

IX. Thus
IX.
Thus let us live in soft retreat,
Nor envy, nor despise the great,
Submit to pay our taxes;
With peace or war be well content,
'Till eas'd by a good parliament,
'Till Scroop his hand relaxes.

X.
Never enquire about the Rhine;
But fill your glass, and drink your wine;
Hope things may mend in Flanders;
The Dutch we know are good allies,
So are they all, with subsidies,
And we have choice commanders.

XI.
Then here's the King, God bless his grace!
Though neither you nor I have place,
He hath many a wise adviser;
And yet no treason sure's in this,
Let who will take the prayer amiss,
God send 'em all much wiser!

A P A N E
A PANEGYRIC ON ALE.

---Mea nec Falerum
Temperant vites, neque Formiani
Pocula collae.

BY T. WARTON.

BALM of my cares, sweet solace of my toils,
Hail, juice benignant! o'er the costly cups
Of riot-flitting wine, unwholsome draught,
Let pride's loose sons prolong the wasteful night:
My sober evening let the tankard bless,
With toast imbown'd, and fragrant nutmeg fraught,
While the rich draught, with oft repeated whiffs,
Tobacco mild improves: divine repast!
Where no crude surfeit, or intemperate joys
Of lawless Bacchus reign: but o'er my soul
A calm Lethean creeps: in drowsy trance
Each thought subsides, and sweet oblivion wraps
My peaceful brain, as if the magic rod
Of leaden Morpheus o'er mine eyes had shed
Its opiate influence. What though fore ills
Oppress, dire want of chill-dispelling coals,
Or cheerful candle, save the makeweight's gleam
Haply remaining; heart-rejoicing ale
Cheers the sad scene, and every want supplies.

S 4
Of tutor sage, upon the learned leaves
Of deep Sphigleian much I meditate;
While ale inspires, and lends her kindred aid.
The thought-perplexing labour to pursue,
Sweet Helicon of logic!—But if friends
Congenial call me from the toilsome page,
To pot-house I repair, the sacred haunt,
Where, Ale, thy votaries in full resort
Hold rites nocturnal. In capacious chair
Of monumental oak, and antique mould,
That long has stood the rage of conquering Time
Inviolate, (not in more ample feast
S'nokes rosy Justice, when th' important cause,
Whether of hen-roost or of mirthful rape,
In all the majesty of paunch, he tries,)
Studious of ease, and provident I place
My gladsome limbs, while in repeated round
Returns replenish'd the successive cup,
And the brisk fire conspires to genial joy.
Nor seldom to relieve the lingering hours
In innocent delight, amusive putt,
On smooth joint-stool in emblematic play,
The vain visitudes of fortune shews.
Nor reck'ning, name tremendous, me disturbs,
Nor, call'd-for, chills my breast with sudden fear,
While on the wonted door (expressive mark!)
The frequent penny-shouts describ'd to view
In snowy characters, a graceful row.
Hail, Ticking! surest guardian of distress,
Beneath thy shelter penniless I quaff
The cheering cup: though much the poet's friend,
Ne'er yet attempted in poetic strain,
Accept this humble tribute of my praise.
Nor proctor thrice with vocal heel alarms
Our joys secure, nor deigns the lowly roof
Of pot-house snug to visit: wiser he
The splendid tavern haunts, or coffee-house
Of James or Juggins, where the grateful breath
Of mild Tobacco ne'er diffus'd its balm;
But the lewd spendthrift, falsely deem'd polite,
While steams around the fragrant Indian bowl,
Oft damns the vulgar sons of humbler Ale:
In vain—the proctor's voice alarms their joy;
Just fate of wanton pride, and vain excess!
Nor leis by day delightful is thy draught,
Heart-easing Ale, whose sorrow-soothing sweets
Oft I repeat in vacant afternoon,
When tatter'd stockings ask my mending hand
Not unexperienc'd, while the tedious toil
Slides unregarded. Let the tender swain
Each morn regale on nerve-relaxing tea,
Companion meet of languor-loving nymph:
Be mine each morn with eager appetite

And
And hunger undissimulated, to repair
To friendly butt'ry, there on smoking craft
And foaming Ale to banquet unrestrain'd,
Material breakfast! Thus in ancient times
Our ancestors robust with liberal cups
Ushert'd the morn, unlike the languid sons
Of modern days; nor ever had the might
Of Britons brave decay'd, had thus they fed,
With English Ale improving English worth.
With Ale irriguous, undismay'd I hear
The frequent dun ascend my lofty dome
Importunate: whether the plaintive voice
Of laund'rs shrill awake my startled ear,
Or taylor with obsequious bow advance;
Or groom invade me with defying look
And fierce demeanor, whose emaciate steeds
Had pantedit off beneath my goring sleek:
In vain they plead or threat; all-powerful Ale
Excuses new supplies, and each descends
With joyless pace and debt-despairing looks.
E'en Sp—y with indignant bow retires,
Sterneft of duns! and conquer'd quits the field.

Why did the gods such various blessings pour
On helpless mortals, from their grateful hands
So soon the short-lived bounty to recall?
Thus while, improvident of future ill,
I quaff the luscious tankard unrestrain'd,
And thoughtless riot in ambrosial bliss,
Sudden (dire fate of all things excellent!)
Th' unpitying burfar's cross-affixing hand
Blasts all my joys, and stops my glad career.
Nor now the friendly pot-house longer yields
A sure retreat when ev'n ing shades the skies,
Nor a Sheppard, ruthless widow, now vouchsafes
The wonted trust, and 'Winter ticks no more.
Thus Adam exil'd from the blissful scenes
Of Eden griev'd, no more in hallow'd bow'r
On neath'ry fruit's to feast, fresh shade or vale
No more to visit, or vine-mantled grot;
But all forlorn the naked wilderness,
And un rejoicing solitudes to trace.
Thus too the matchless bard, whose lay refounds
The Splendid Shilling's praise, in nightly gloom
Of lonesome garret pin'd for cheerful Ale:
Whose steps in verse Miltonic I pursue,
Mean follower! like him with honest love
Of Ale divine inspir'd, and love of song.
But long may bounteous Heav'n with watchful care,
Avert his hapless fate! enough for me,
That, burning with congenial flame, I dar'd
His guiding steps at distance to pursue,
And sing his fav'rite theme in kindred strains.

a Noted alehouses in Oxford.
ODE TO THE GENIUS OF ITALY, OCCASIONED
BY THE EARL OF CORKE'S GOING ABROAD.

BY MR. J. DUNCOMBE.

O THOU that, on a pointless spear reclin'd,
In dusk of eve oft tak'st thy lonely way,
Where Tyber's flow, neglected waters stray,
And pour'st thy fruitless sorrows to the wind,
Grieving to see his shore no more the seat
Of arts and arms, and liberty's retreat.

Italia's Genius, rear thy drooping head,
Shake off thy trance, and weave an olive crown,
For see! a noble guest appears, well known
To all thy worthies, though in Britain bred;
Guard well thy charge, for know, our polished sire
Reluctant spares thee such a son as Boyle.

There, while their sweets thy myrtle groves dispense,
Lead to the Sabine or the Tuscan plain,
Where playful Horace tun'd his amorous strain,
And Tully pour'd the stream of eloquence;
Nor fail to crown him with that ivy bloom,
Which graceful mantles o'er thy Maro's tomb.
At that blest spot, from vulgar cares refin'd,
In some soft vision, or indulgent dream —
Inspire his fancy with a glorious theme,
And point new subjects to his generous mind,
At once to charm his country, and improve
The last, the youngest object of his love.

But O! mark well his transports in that shade,
Where, circled by the bay's unsading green,
Amidst a rural and sequester'd scene
His much-lov'd Pliny rests his honour'd head;
There, rapt in silence, wilt he gaze around,
And strew with sweetest flow'rs the hallow'd ground.

But see! the sage, to mortal view confess,
Thrice waves the hand, and says, or seems to say,
"The debt I owe thee how shall I repay?
"Welcome to Latium's shore, illustrious guest!
"Long may'st thou live to grace thy native isle,
"Humane in thought, and elegant in style!
"While on thy consort I with rapture gaze,
"My own Calphurnia rides to my view:
"That bliss unknown but to the virtuous few,
"Briton! is thine; charm'd with domestic praise,
"Thine are those heart-felt joys that sweeten life,
"The son, the friend, the daughter, and the wife."
Content with such approbation, when genial Spring
Bids the shrill blackbird whistle in the vale;
Home may he hasten with a prosperous gale,
And Health protect him with her fostering wing;
So shall Britannia to the wind and sea
Entrust no more her fav'rite Orrery.

To CHARLES PRATT, Esq; now LORD CAMDEN.

Written in 1743. By DR. DAVIES.

FROM friendship’s cradle up the verdant paths
Of youth, life’s jolly spring; and now sublim’d
To its full manhood and meridian strength,
Her latest stage, (for friendship ever hale
Knows not old age, diseases, and decay,
But burning keeps her sacred fire, ’till death’s
Cold hand extinguish) — At this spot, this point,
Here, PRATT, we social meet, and gaze about,
And look back to the scenes our pastime trod
In nature’s morning, when the gamesome hours
Had sliding feet, and laugh’d themselves away.

Luxurious
Luxurious season! vital prime! where Thames
Flows by Eton's walls, and cheerful seas
Her fons wide swarming; and where sedgy Cam
Bathes with slow pace his academic grove,
Pierian walks!—O never hope again,
(Impossible! untenable!) to grasp
Those joys again; to feel alike the pulse
Dancing, and fiery spirits boiling high:
Or see the pleasure that with careless wing
Swept on, and flow'ry garlands toss'd around
Disporting! Try to call her back—as well
Bid yesterday return, arrest the sight
Of Time; or, musing by a river's brink,
Say to the wave that huddles swiftly by
For ever, "from thy fountain roll anew."

The merriment, the tale, and heartfelt laugh
That echo'd round the table, idle guests,
Must rise, and serious inmates take their place;
Reflection's daughters sad, and world-born thoughts
Dislodging Fancy's empire—Yet who knows
Exact the balance of our los's and gain?
Who knows how far a rattle may outweigh
The mace or sceptre? But as boys resign
The play-thing, bauble of their infancy,
So fares it with maturer years: they, sage,
Imagination's airy regions quit,
And under Reason's banner take the field;
With Resolution face the cloud or storm,
While all the rest the vales are away,
Some to the palace with regardful step,
And courtly blandishment resort, and there
Advance obscureous; in the sunshine bare
Of princely grace, catch the creating eye,
Parent of honours;—in the senate some
Harangue the full-bench'd auditory, and wield
Their lift'ning passions (such the power; the swif
Of Reason's eloquence!)—or at the bar,
Where Cowper, Talbot, Somers, Yorke, before
Pleased their way to glory's chair supreme,
And worthy fill'd it. Let not these great names
Damp, but incite: nor Murray's praise obscure
The younger merit. Know, these lights, ere yet
To noon-day lustre kindled, had their dawn
Proceed familiar to the gate of Fame,
Nor think the task severe, the prize too high
Of toil and honour, for thy Father's son.

a Lord High Chancellor of England.
b Now Earl of Mansfield.
Epistle from Henry St. John Lord Viscount Bolingbroke to Miss Lucy Atkins.

Written when he was young.

Dear thoughtless Clara, to my verse attend,
Believe for once thy lover and thy friend;
Heaven to each sex has various gifts assign'd,
And shewn an equal care of human-kind;
Strength does to man's imperial race belong,
To yours that beauty which subdues the strong;
But as our strength, when misapply'd, is lost,
And what should save, urges our ruin most;
Just so, when beauty prostituted lies,
Of bawds the prey, of rakes th' abandon'd prize,
Women to more their empire can maintain,
Nor hope, vile slaves of lust, by love to reign.
Superior charms but make their case the worse,
And what should be their blessing, proves their curse.
O nymph! that might, reclin'd on Cupid's breast,
Like Psyche, sooth the God of love to rest;
Or, if ambition mov'd thee, Jove enthral,
Brandish his thunder, and direct its fall;

* An orange girl.
Survey thyself, contemplate every grace
Of that sweet form, of that angelic face;
Then, CLARA, say, were those delicious charms
Meant for lewd brothels, and rude Russian arms?
No, CLARA, no! that person, and that mind,
Were form'd by nature, and by heaven design'd
For nobler ends; to these return, though late,
Return to these, and so avert thy fate.
Think, CLARA, think, (nor will that thought be vain)
Thy slave, thy Harry, doom'd to drag his chain
Of love, ill-treat'd and abus'd, that he
From more inglorious chains might rescue thee.
Thy drooping health restor'd; by his fond care,
Once more thy beauty its full lustre wear;
Mov'd by his love, by his example taught,
Soon shall thy soul, once more with virtue fraught,
With kind and gen'rous truth thy bosom warm;
And thy fair mind, like thy fair person, charm:
To virtue thus, and to thyself restor'd,
By all admir'd, by one alone ador'd,
Be to thy Harry ever kind and true,
And live for him, who more than dies for you.
THE CHEAT'S APOLOGY.

BY MR. ELLIS.

'Tis my vocation, Hal! Shakspeare.

Look round the wide world, each profession, you'll find,
Hath something dishonest, which mystery they call;
Each knave points another, at home is stark-blind;
Except but his own, there's a cheat in them all:
When tax'd with imposture, the charge he'll evade,
And like Falstaff pretend he but lives by his trade.

The hero ambitious (like Philip's great son,
Who wept when he found no more mischief to do)
Ne'er scruples a neighbouring realm to o'er-run,
While slaughters and carnage his sabre imbrue.
Of rapine and murder the charge he'll evade,
For conquest is glorious, and fighting his trade.

The statesman, who steers by wife Machiavel's rules,
Is ne'er to be known by his tongue or his face;
They're traps by him us'd to catch credulous fools,
And breach of his promise he counts no disgrace;
But policy calls it, reproach to evade,
For flattery's his province, cajoling his trade.

T2
The priest will instruct you this world to despise,
With all its vain pomp, for a kingdom on high;
While earthly preferments are chiefly his prize,
And all his pursuits give his doctrine the lie;
He'll plead you the gospel, your charge to evade:
The lab'rer's entitled to live by his trade.

The lawyer, as oft on the wrong side as right,
Who tortures for see the true sense of the laws,
While black he by sophistry proves to be white;
And falsehood and perjury lift in his cause.
With steady assurance all crime will evade:
His client's care, and he follows his trade.

The sons of Machaon, who thirst for gold
The patient past cure visit thrice in a day.
Write largely the Pharmacop'leage to uphold,
While poverty's left to diseases a prey.
Are held in repute for their glitterring parade;
Their practice is great, and they shine in their trade.

Since then in all stations imposture is found,
No one of another can justly complain;
The coin he receives will pass current around,
And where he is cousin'd he cousins again;
But I, who for cheats this apology made,
Cheat myself by my rhyming, and starve by my trade.

SONG.
SONG.

BY THE SAME.

As Chloe ply'd her needle's art,
A purple drop the spear
Made from her needle's finger start,
And from her eyes a tear.

Ah! might but Chloe by her smart
Be taught for mine to feel;
Mine caus'd by Cupid's piercing dart,
More sharp than pointed steel!

Then I her needle would adore,
Love's arrow it should be,
Indu'd with such a subtle pow'r
To reach her heart for me.
SUE venal Belinda to grant you the blessing
As Jove courted Danae; vain'st your addressing;
For love, she affords, all that's generous inspires,
And therefore rich tokens of love she requires.

Such suitors as nothing but ardours are boasting
Will ne'er reach Elysium, but ever be castling.
Like penniless ghosts, 'denied passage by Chiron,
They'll find, without fee, unrelenting the fair-one.

But give me the nymph not ungrateful to wooing,
Who love pays with love, and cares less with cooing,
By whom a true heart is accepted as sterling,
And Cupid alone makes her lover her darling.

TO MR. GRENVILLE, ON HIS INTENDED RESIGNATION.

BY RICHARD BERENGER, ESQ.

A Wretch, tir'd out with Fortune's blows,
Resolv'd at once to end his woes;

And
And, like a thoughtless silly elf,
In the next pond to drown himself.
'Tis fit, quoth he, my life should end;
The cruel world is not my friend;
I have not meat, nor drink, nor cloaths,
But want each joy that wealth bestows;

_Besides, I hold my life my own._
And when I please may lay it down;
A wretched hopeless thing am I,
Forgetting, as forget, I'll die.

Not so, said one who stood behind,
And heard him thus disclose his mind;
Consider well, pray, what you do,
Think what numbers live in you:
If you go drown, your woes to eafe,
Pray, who will keep your lice and fleas?
On you alone their lives depend,
With you they live, with you must end.

On great folks thus the little live,
And in their sunshine bask and thrive;
But when those suns no longer shine,
The helpless insects droop and pine.

Oh, Grenville, then this tale apply,
Nor drown yourself lest I should die:
Compassionate your louse's ease,
And keep your own to save his place.
WHERE yonder trees the high in chearful air,
Where yonder banks eternal verdure wear,
And opening flow'rs diffusing sweets around,
Pains with their vivid hues the happy ground:
While Thames majestic rolls the meads between,
And with his silver current crowns the scene:
There GARRICK, flatter of well-earn'd applause,
From crowds and shouting theatres withdraws:
There courts the Muse, turns over th' instructive page,
And meditates new triumphs for the stage.
Thine, SHAKESPEARE, chief—for thou must ever shine:
His pride, his boast, unequall'd and divine.

* In his garden, by the Thames side, at Hampton.
There too, thy vot'ry, to thy merit just,
Erect thy monument, and plant thy honour1st,
Hailing the pile to future times proclaim
His veneration for thy mighty name.
A place more fit his zeal could never find
Than this fair spot, an emblem of the mind—
As hill and vale there charm the wonder'ing eye,
Such sweet variety thy scenes supply—
Like the tall trees sublime thy genius tow'rs,
Sprightly thy fancy, as the opening flow'rs;
While, copious as the tide Thames pours along,
Flow the sweet numbers of thy heav'nly song,
Serenely pure, and yet divinely strong—
Look down, great shade, with pride this tribute see,
That pays it makes it worthy thee—
As fam'd Apelles was allow'd alone
To paint the form august of Philip's son,
None but a Garrick can, O bard divine!
Lay a far offering on thy hallow'd shrine,
To speak thy worth is his peculiar boast,
He best can tell it, for he feels it most.
Blest bard! thy fame through every age shall grow,
Till Nature cease to charm, or Thames to flow.
Thou too, with him, whose fame thy talents raise,
Shalt share our wonder, and divide our praise;
Blended with this thy merits rise to view,
And half thy Shakespeare's fame to thee is due:

Unles
Unless the actor with the bard conspire,
How impotent his strength, how faint his fire!
One boasts the mine, one brings the gold to light,
And the Muse triumphs in the Actor's might;
Too weak to give her own conceptions birth,
Till all-expressive Action call them forth.
Thus the sweet pipe, mute in itself, no sound
Sends forth, nor breathes its pleasing notes around;
But if some swain, with happy skill endued,
Inspire with animating breath the wood,
Wak'd into voice, it pours its tuneful strains,
The harmony divine enchants the plains.

Quod spiró, et placó, si placet, tuum est. — Hor.

Taken from his Works.

By the same.

Natura ipsa valere, et mentis viribus excitari, et quas quodam divino spiritu afflari.

Peace to this meeting!
Joy and fair time, health and good wishes!
Now, worthy friends, the cause why we are met
Is in celebration of the day that gave Immortal Shakspeare to this favour'd isle,
The most replenished sweet work of nature,

Which
Which from the prime creation e'er the fram'd.
O thou kind Nature! how thyself thou blazon'd!
In this thy son! form'd in thy prodigality,
To hold thy mirror up, and give the time
Its very form and pressure! When he speaks
Each aged ear plays truant at his tales,
And younger hearings are quite ravished,
So voluble is his discourse—Gentle
As Zephyr blowing underneath the violet,
Not wagging its sweet head—yet as rough,
(His noble blood enchaft'd) as the rude wind,
That by the top doth take the mountain pine,
And make him stoop to th' vale.—'Tis wonderful
That an invisible instinct should frame him
To loyalty, unlearn'd: honour untaught;
Civility not seen in other; knowledge
That wildly grows in him, but yields a crop
As if it had been sown. What a piece of work!
How noble in faculty! infinite in reason!
A combination and a form indeed,
Where every God did seem to set his seal!
Heav'n has him now—yet let our idolatrous fancy
Still sanctify his relics; and this day
Stand aye distinguished in the kalender
To the last syllable of recorded time:
For, if we take him but for all in all,
We ne'er shall look upon his like again.

An
An ODE to SCULPTURE.

By JAMES SCOTT, D.D.

Led by the Mule, my step pervades
The sacred haunts, the peaceful shades
Where Art and Sculpture reign:
I see, I see, at their command,
The living stones in order stand,
And marble breathe through every vein!
Time breaks his hostile scythe; he sighs
To find his pow'r malignant fed;
"And what avails my dart, he cries,
Since these can animate the dead?"
"Since wak'd to mimic life again in stone
"The patriot seems to speak, the hero Wrong."
There Virtue, silent train are seen,
Fast fix'd their looks, erect their mien,
Lo! while with more, than stoic soul,
The Attic sage exhausts the bowl,
A pale suffusion shades his eyes,
"Till by degrees the marble dies!

a Socrates, who was condemned to die by poison.
Ah! see he droops his languid head!
What starting nerves, what dying pain,
What horror freezes every vein!
These are thy works, O Sculpture! thine to shew
In rugged rock a feeling sense of woe.
Yet not alone such themes demand
The Phidian stroke, the Daedal hand;
I view with melting eyes
A softer scene of grief display'd,
While from her breast the duteous maid
Her infant fare with food supplies.
In pitying stone she weeps, to see
His squalid hair, and galling chains:
And trembling, on her bended knee,
His hoary head her hand sustains;
While every look and sorrowing feature prove
How soft her breast, how great her filial love.
Lo! there the wild Assyrian queen,
With threat'ning brow, and frantic mien!

b Senea, born at Corduba, who, according to Pliny, was orator, poet, and philosopher. He bled to death in the bath.

c Semiramis, cum ei circa cultum capitis sui occupatae nunciatum esset Babylonem defecisse; altera parte crinium adhuc solutæ proptenus ad eam expugnandam cucurrat: nec prius decorem capillorum in ordinem quam tantam urbem in potestate suam redegit: quocircè flatua ejus Babylonem posita est, &c.

Val. Max. de Ira.

Revenge!
Revenge! revenge! the marble cries,
While fury sparkles in her eyes.
Thus was her awful form beheld,
When Babylon's proud sons rebell'd.
She left the woman's vainer care,
And flew with loose dishevell'd hair;
She stretch'd her hand, imbru'd in blood,
While pale Sedition trembling flied.

In sudden silence, the mad crowd obey'd
Her awful voice, and Stygian Discord fled.
With hope, or fear, or love, by turns,
The marble leaps, or shrinks, or burns,
As Sculpture waves her hand.
The varying passions of the mind.
Her faithful handmaids are assign'd,
And rise and fall by her command.

When now life's wasted lamps expire,
When sinks to dust this mortal frame,
She, like Prometheus, grasps the fire,
Her touch revives the lambent flame.

While, phoenix-like, the statesman, bard, or sage,
Spring fresh to life, and breathe through every age.
Hence, where the organ full and clear,
With loud hofannas charms the ear,
Behold (a prism within his hands)
Absorb'd in thought, great Newton stands;

A noble statue of Sir Isaac Newton, erected in Trinity-College chapel by Dr. Smith.
Such was his solemn wonted state,
His serious brow, and musling gait,
When, taught on eagle-wings to fly,
He trac’d the wonders of the sky;
The chambers of the sun explor’d,
Where tints of thousand hues are stor’d;
Whence every flower in painted robes is drest,
And varying Iris steals her gaudy vest.
Here, as Devotion, heavenly queen,
Conducts her best, her fav’rite train,
At Newton’s shrine they bow!
And, while with raptur’d eyes they gaze,
With Virtue’s purest vestal rays,
Behold their ardent bosoms glow!
Hail, mighty Mind! hail, awful name!
I feel inspir’d my lab’ring breast;
And lo! I pant, I burn for fame!

Come, Science, bright ethereal guest,
Oh come, and lead thy meanest, humblest son,
Through Wisdom’s arduous paths to fair renown.
Could I to one faint ray aspire,
One spark of that celestial fire,
The leading cynosure, that glow’d
While Smith explor’d the dark abode,
Where Wisdom sate on Nature’s shrine,
How great my boast! what praise were mine!
Illustrious sage! who first could it tell,
Wherein the powers of Music dwell;
And
And every magic chain untie,
That binds the soul of Harmony!
To her, when mould'ring in the dust,
To her shall swell the breathing bust:
Shall here (for this reward thy merits claim)
"Stand next to place in Newton, as in fame."

TRUE RESIGNATION.

Æquam memento rebus in arduis
Servare mentem.                HORAT.

By Mr. HYLTON.

WHEN Colin's good dame, who long held him a tug,
And defeated his hopes by the help of the jug,
Had taken too freely the cheerupping cup,
And repeated the dose 'till it laid her quite up;
Colin sent for the doctor; with sorrowful face
He gave him his fee, and he told him her case.
Quoth Galen, I'll do what I can for your wife;
But indeed she's so bad, that I fear for her life.
In counsel there's safety—e'n send for another;
For if she should die, folks will make a strange pother,
And say that I lost her for want of good skill—
Or of better advice—or, in short, what they will.

Says
Says Colin, your judgment there's none can dispute;
And if physic can cure her—I know yours will do't.
But if, after all, she should happen to die,
And they say that you kill'd her—I'll swear 'tis a lie:
'Tis the husband's chief business, whatever en fine;
And whoever finds fault—I'll be shot—if I do.

An Epistle from the King of Prussia to Monsieur Voltaire. 1757.

Croýez que si j'étois, Voltaire,
Particulier aujourd'hui,
Me contentant du nécessaire,
Je verrois envoler la Fortune légère,
Et m'en inocquerois comme lui.
Je connais l'ennui des grandeurs,
Le fardeau des devoirs, le jargon des flateurs,
Et tout l' amas des petitesfèes,
Et leurs genres et leurs espèces,
Dont il faut s'occuper dans le sein des honneurs.
Je meprisè la vaine glorie,
Quoique Poète et Souverain,
Quand du ciseau fatal tranchant mon destin
Atropos m'aura vu plonger dans la nuit noire,
Que m'importe l'honneur incertain

Vol. VI. U Da.
De vivre après ma mort au temple de Memoire:
Un instant de bonheur vant mille ans dans l'histoire.
Nos defins sont ils donc si beaux?
Le doux Plaisir et la Mollesse,
La vive et naive Allogresse
Ont toujours fui des grands, la pompe, et les saiçeaux,
Nes pour la liberté leurs troupes enchantresses
Preferent l'aimable pareffe
Aux austeres devoirs guides de nos travaux.
Aussi la Fortune volage
Ne a jamais caufe mes ennus,
Soit qu'elle m'agea, ou qu'elle m'outrage
Je dormirai toutes les nuits
En lui refusant mon hommage.
Mais notre etat nous fait loi,
Il nous oblige, il nous engage
A mefurer notre courage,
Sur ce qu'exige notre emploi.
Voltaire dans son hermitage,
Dans un pais dont l'heritage
Est son antique bonne foi.
Peut s'adonner en paix à la vertu du sage
Dont Platon nous marque la loi.
Pour moi menacé du naufrage,
Je dois, en affrontant l'orage,
Penser, vivre, et mourir en Roy.

Translated
Translated into English

By John Gilbert Cooper, Esq.

Voltaire, believe me, were I now
In private life's calm station plac'd,
Let Heaven for nature's wants allow,
With cold indifferency would I view
Changing Fortune's winged haste,
And laugh at her caprice like you.
Th' insipid farce of tedious state,
Imperial duty's real weight,
The faithless courtier's supple bow,
The fickle multitude's cares,
And the great Vulgar's littleness,
By long experience well I know:
And, though a Prince and Poet born,
Vain blandishments of glory scorn.
For when the ruthless shears of Fate
Have cut my life's precarious thread,
And rank'd me with th' unconscious dead,
What will't avail that I was great,
Or that th' uncertain tongue of Fame
In Mem'ry's temple chants my name?
One blissful moment whilst we live
Weighs more than ages of renown:
What then do Potentates receive
Of good, peculiarly their own?
Sweet Ease and unaffected Joy,
Domestic Peace, and sportive Pleasure,
The regal throne and palace fly,
And, born for liberty, prefer
Soft silent scenes of lovely leisure,
To, what we Monarchs buy so dear.
The thorny pomp of scepter'd care.
My pain or bliss shall ne'er depend
On fickle Fortune's casual flight,
For, whether 's my foe or friend,
In calm repose I'll pass the night.
And ne'er by watchful homage own
I court her smile, or fear her frown.
But from our stations we derive
Unerring precepts how to live,
And certain deeds each rank calls forth,
By which is measure'd human worth.
Voltaire, within his private cell,
In realms where ancient honesty
Is patrimonial property,
And sacred Freedom loves to dwell.
May give up all his peaceful mind,
Guided by Plato's deathless page,
In silent solitude resign'd
To the mild virtues of a Sage;
But I, 'gainst whom wild whirlwinds wage
Fierce war with wreck-denouncing wing,
Must be, to face the tempest's rage,
In thought, in life, in death a king.

On seeing a Arch Bishop William's Monument in Carnarvonshire.

By Dr. Davies.

In that remote and solitary place,
Which the seas wash, and circling hills embrace,
Where those lone walls amid the groves arise,
All that remains of thee, fam'd William, lies.

Thither, quester'd shade, creation's nook,
The wand'ring Mufe her pensive journey took,
Curious to trace the statesman to his home,
And moralize at leisure o'er his tomb:
She came not, with the pilgrim, tears to shed,
Mutter a vow, or trifle with a bead.

*John Williams was consecrated bishop of Lincoln, Nov. 11, 1621; was translated to York, Dec. 4, 1641; died March 25, 1649; and was buried at Landegay, near Bangor.
But such a sadness did her thoughts employ,
As lives within the neighbourhood of joy.
Reflecting much upon the mighty shade,
His glories, and his miseries, she said:

"How poor the lot of the once-honour'd dead!
Perhaps the dust is Williams, that we tread.
The learn'd, ambitious, politic, and great,
Statesman, and prelate, this, alas! thy fate.
Could not thy Lincoln yield her pastor room?
Could not thy York supply thee with a tomb?
Was it for this thy lofty genius soar'd,
Care'sd by monarchs and by crowds ador'd?
For this, thy hand o'er rivals could prevail,
Grasping by turns the crosier and the seal?
Who dare'd on Laud's meridian pow'r to frown,
And on aspiring Buckingham look down.
This thy gay morn— but ere the day decline
Clouds gather, and adversity is thine.
Doom'd to behold thy country's fierce alarms,
What had thy trembling age to do with arms?
Thy lands dragooned, thy palaces in dust,
Why was thy life protracted to be curst?
The king in chains,—thyself by lawless might
Strip't of all pow'r, and exil'd from thy right,
Awhile the venerable hero stood,
And stemm'd with quiv'ring limbs the bolst'rous flood;

b He was made lord keeper of the great seal July 20, 1642.
At length, q'ermatch'd by injuries and time,
Stole from the world, and fought his native clime.

Cambria for him with moans her region fills:
She wept his downfall from a thousand hills:
Tender embrac'd her prelate though undone,
Stretch'd out her mother-rocks to hide her son:
Search'd, while alive, each vale for his repast,
And, when he died, receiv'd him in her breast.
Envied Ambition! what are all thy schemes,
But waking misery, or pleasing dreams,
Sliding and tottering on the heights of state!
The subject of this verse declares thy fate.
Great as he was, you see how small the gain,
A burial so obscure, a Muse so mean.”
Extempore Verses upon a Trial of Skill between the two great Masters of Defence, Melleurs Figg and Sutton.

By Dr. Byron.

I.

Long was the great Figg, by the prize-fighting swains,
Sole monarch acknowledge'd of Marybone plains:
To the towns, far and near, did his valour extend,
And swam down the river from Thame to Gravelend;
Where liv'd Mr. Sutton, pipemaker by trade,
Who hearing that Figg was thought such a stout blade,
Resolv'd to put in for a share of his fame,
And so sent to challenge the champion of Thame.

Dr. John Byrom was a younger son of Mr. Edward Byrom, of Kersal, in the county of Lancaster, linen-dyer. He received his education at Merchant Taylor's School, from whence he went to Trinity College, Cambridge, where he became a pensioner, July 6, 1708. Having taken his degrees in arts, he was chosen fellow of his college in 1714; but not inclining to enter into holy orders, he was obliged to quit his place in 1716, and soon afterwards married his cousin Miss Elizabeth Byrom. This union involved him in more expense than he was able to support, and he was compelled to have recourse to teaching shorthand for the maintenance of his family. After some years his elder brother died, and the family estate devolved to him. This occasioned him first to relax his attention to business, and then to relinquish it wholly. He died at Manchester September 26, 1763.

II. With
With alternate advantage two trials had past,
When they fought out the rubbers on Wednesday last.
To see such a contest the house was so full,
There hardly was room left to thrust in your skull.
With a prelude of cudgels we first were saluted,
And two or three shoulders most handsomely fluted;
’Till weary at last with inferior disasters,
All the company cry’d, Come, the masters, the masters.

Whereupon the bold Sutton first mounted the stage,
Made his honours as usual, and yearn’d to engage;
Then Figg, with a visage so fierce, yet sedate,
Came and enter’d the lists with his fresh-shaven pate;
Their arms were encircled with armigers too,
With a red ribbon Sutton’s, and Figg’s with a blue.
Thus adorn’d the two heroes, ’twixt shoulder and elbow,
Shook hands, and went to’t, and the word it was Bilboe.

Sure such a concern in the eyes of spectators
Was never yet seen in our amphi-theatres,
Our commons and peers from their several places,
To half an inch distance all pointed their faces;
While the rays of old Phœbus that shot thro’ the sky-light,
Seem’d to make on the stage a new kind of twilight;
And the Gods, without doubt, if one could but have seen
'em,
Were peeping there through, to do justice between ’em.

V. Figg
V.

Figg struck the first stroke, and with such a vast fury,
That he broke his huge weapon in twain, I assure you;
And if his brave rival this blow had not warded,
His head from his shoulders had quite been discarded.
Figg arm'd him again, and they took t'other tilt,
And then Sutton's blade ran away from its hilt;
The weapons were frighted, but as for the men,
In truth they ne'er minded, but at it again.

VI.

Such a force in their blows, you'd have thought, it a wonder
Every stroke they receiv'd did not cleave 'em afunder.
Yet so great was their courage, so equal their skill,
That they both seem'd as safe as a thief in a mill;
While in doubtful attention dame Victory stood,
And which side to take could not tell for her blood,
But remain'd like the as's, 'twixt the bundles of hay,
Without ever stirring an inch either way.

VII.

'Till Jove to the Gods signified his intention
In a speech that he made 'em too tedious to mention;
But the upshot on't was, that at that very bout
From a wound in Figg's side the hot blood spouted out;
Her ladyship then seem'd to think the case plain,
But Figg stepping forth with a fullen disdain,
Shew'd the gash, and appeal'd to the company round,
If his own broken sword had not given him the wound.
VIII.
That bruises and wounds a man's spirit should touch,
With danger so little, with honour so much!
Well, they both took a dram, and return'd to the battle,
And with a fresh fury they made the swords rattle;
While Sutton's right arm was observed to bleed,
By a touch from his rival, so Jove had decreed;
Just enough for to shew that his blood was not ichor,
But made up, like Figg's, of the common red-liquor.

IX.
Again they both rush'd with as equal a fire on,
Till the company cry'd, Hold, enough of cold iron,
To the quarterstaff now, lads. So first having dram'd it,
They took to their wood, and 'tis faith never shamm'd it.
The first bout they had was so fair, and so handsome,
That to make a fair bargain, was worth a king's ransom;
And Sutton such bangs on his neighbour imparted,
Would have made any fibres but Figg's to have smarted.

X.
Then after that bout they went on to another—
But the matter must end on some fashion, or other;
So Jove told the Gods he had made a decree,
That Figg should hit Sutton a stroke on the knee.
Though Sutton disabled as soon as he hit him
Would still have fought on, but Jove would not permit him;
'Twas his fate, not his fault, that constrain'd him to yield,
And thus the great Figg became lord of the field.

A Letter
THOUGH plagu'd with algebraic lectures,
And astronomical conjectures,
Wean'd from the sweets of poetry
To scraps of dry philosophy,
You see, dear Hal, I've found a time
'To express my thoughts to you in rhyme.
For why, my friend, should distant parts,
Or time, disjoin united hearts;
Since, though by intervening space
Depriv'd of speaking face to face,
By faithful emisary letter
We may converse as well, or better?

* Dr. Edward Littleton was educated upon the Royal foundation at Eton School, from whence he was transplanted to King's College, Cambridge, in the year 1716. After four years residence at the University, he was recalled to Eton as an assistant in the school, where he so greatly acquired the respect of the present and fellows, that in 1727 they elected him into their society, and presented him to the living of Maple Denham, in Oxfordshire. On June the 9th, 1730, he was appointed chaplain in ordinary to their Majesties, and in the same year took his Doctor of Laws degree at Cambridge. He died of a fever in the year 1734, and was buried in his own parish church of Maple Denham.
And, not to stretch a narrow fancy,
To shew what pretty things I can say,
(As some will strain at simile,
First work it fine, and then apply;
Add Butler’s rhymes to Prior’s thoughts,
And choose to mimic all their faults,
By head and shoulders bring in a stick,
To shew their knack at Hudibrastic,) I’ll tell you, as a friend and erony,
How here I spend my time, and money;
For time and money go together
As sure as weathercock and weather;
And thrifty guardians all allow
This grave reflection to be true,
That whilst we pay so dear for learning
Those weighty truths we’ve no concern in,
The spark who squanders time away
In vain pursuits, and fruitless play,
Not only proves an arrant blockhead,
But, what’s much worse, is out of pocket.
Whether my conduct bad, or good is,
Judge from the nature of my studies.
No more majestic Virgil’s heights,
Nor tow’ring Milton’s loftier flights,
Nor courtly Horace’s rebukes,
Who banter vice with friendly jokes,
Nor Congreve’s life, nor Cowley’s fire,
Nor all the beauties that conspire

To
To place the greenest bays upon
Th' immortal brows of Addison;
Prior's inimitable ease,
Nor Pope's harmonious numbers please;
How can poetic flow'rs abound,
How spring in philosophic ground?
Homer indeed (if I would shew it)
Was both philosopher and poet,
But tedious philosophic chapters
Quite stifle my poetic raptures,
And I to Phoebus bade adieu
When first I took my leave of you.
Now algebra, geometry,
Arithmetic, astronomy,
Optics, chronology, and statics,
All tiresome points of mathematics;
With twenty harder names than these,
Disturb my brains, and break my peace.
All seeming inconsistencies
Are nicely solv'd by a's, and b's;
Our senses are disprov'd by prisms,
Our arguments by syllogisms.
If I should confideatly write
This ink is black, this paper white,
Or, to express myself yet fuller,
Should say that black, or white's a colour;
They'd contradict it, and perplex one
With motion, light, and its reflection.

And [1319:]

And solve th' apparent falsehood by
The curious texture of the eye.
Should I the poker want, and take it,
When't looks as hot as fire can make it,
And burn my finger, and my coat,
They'd flatly tell me, 'tis not hot;
The fire, say they, has in't, 'tis true,
The pow'r of cauling heat in you;
But no more heat's in fire that heats you,
Than there is pain in stick that beats you.

Thus too philosophers expound
The names of odour, taste, and sound;
The salts and juices in all meat
Affect the tongues of them that eat,
And by some secret poignant power
Give them the taste of sweet, and sour.
Carnations, violets, and roses
Cause a sensation in our noses;
But then there's none of us can tell
The things themselves have taste, or smell.
So when melodious Mason sings,
Or Gething tunes the trembling strings,
Or when the trumpet's brisk alarms
Call forth the cheerful youth to arms,
Convey'd through undulating air
The music's only in the ear.

We're told how planets roll on high,
How large their orbits, and how nigh;

I hope
I hope in little time to know
Whether the moon's a cheese; or no;
Whether the man in't, as some tell ye;
With beef and carrots fills his belly;
Why like a lunatic confin'd
He lives at distance from mankind;
When he at one good hearty shake
Might whirl his prison off his back;
Or like a maggot in a nut
Full bravely eat his passage out.
Who knows what vast discoveries
From such inquiries might arise?
But feuds, and tumults in the nation
Disturb such curious speculation.
Cambridge from furious broils of state,
Foresees her near-approaching fate;
Her surest patrons are remov'd,
And her triumphant foes approv'd.

No more! this due to friendship take,
Not idly writ for writing's sake;
No longer question my respect,
Nor call this short delay neglect;
At least excuse it, when you see
This pledge of my sincerity;
For one who rhymes to make you easy,
And his invention strains to please you,
To shew his friendship cracks his brains,
Sure is a mad-man if he feigns.

The
WHAT, self-sufficiency and false content
  Benumb the senses of the indolent!
Dead to all purposes of good, or ill,
Alive alone in an unwise will.
His only vice in no good action lies,
And his sole virtue is his want of vice.
Business he deems too hard, trifles too easy,
And doing nothing finds himself too busy.
Silence he cannot bear, noise is distraction,
Noise kills with toil, silence with reflection.
No want he feels,—what has he to pursue?
To him 'tis less to suffer, than to do.

The busy world's a fool, the learn'd a fop,
And his sole hope to be by all forgot:
Wealth is procur'd with toil, and kept with fear,
Knowledge by labour pur'chased costs too dear;
Friendship's a clog, and family a jest,
A wife but a bad bargain at the best;
Honour a bubble, subject to a breath,
And all engagements vain since null'd by death.
Thus all the wise esteem, he can despise,
And caring not, 'tis he alone is wise:
Yet, all his wish possessing, finds no rest,
And only lives to know, he never can be blest.
THE SONG OF SIMEON PARAPHRASED.

BY MR. MERRICK.

This enough—the hour is come.

Now within the silent tomb
Let this mortal frame decay,
Mingled with its kindred clay;
Since thy mercies, oft of old
By thy chosen seers foretold,
Faithful now and stedfast prove,
God of truth and God of love!

Since at length my aged eye
Sees the day-spring from on high,
Son of Righteousness, to thee
Lo! the nations bow the knee,
And the realms of distant kings
Own the healing of thy wings.
Those whom death had overspread
With his dark and dreary shade,
Lift their eyes, and from afar
Hail the light of Jacob's star;
Waiting till the promised ray
Turn their darkness into day.
See the beams intensely fixed
Shine o'er Sion's favor'd head.
Never may they hence remove,
God of truth and God of love!
ON THE INVENTION OF LETTERS.

TELL me what Genius did the art invent,
   The lively image of the voice to paint;
Who first the secret how to colour sound,
And to give shape to reason, wisely found;
With bodies how to cloath ideas, taught;
And how to draw the picture of a thought:
Who taught the hand to speak, the eye to hear
A silent language roving far and near;
Whose softest noise outstrips loud thunder's sound,
And spreadeth her accents through the world's vast round;
A voice heard by the deaf, spoke by the dumb,
Whose echo reaches long, long time to come;
Which dead men speak as well as those alive—
Tell me what Genius did this art contrive.

THE ANSWER.

THE noble art to Cadmus owes its rise
   Of painting words, and speaking to the eyes;
He first in wond'rous magic setters bound
The airy voice, and stopp'd the flying sound;
The various figures, by his pencil wrought,
Gave colour, form, and body to the thought.
ON WIT

True wit is like the brilliant stone
Dug from the Indian mine
Which boasts two various powers in one
To cut as well as shine.

Genius, like that, if polish'd right,
With the same gifts abounds;
Appears at once both keen and bright,
And sparkles while it wounds.

ON A SPIDER.

BY DR. LITTLETON.

Artist, who underneath my table
Thy curious texture hast display'd!
Who, if we may believe the fable,
Wert once a lovely blooming maid!

Infidious, relentless, watchful spider,
Fear no officious damsel's broom;
Extend thy artful fabric wider,
And spread thy banners round my room.

Swept
Swept from the rich man's costly ceiling,
Thou'rt welcome to my homely roof;
Mayst thou find a peaceful dwelling,
And undisturb'd attend thy woof.

Whilst I thy wond'rous fabric stare at,
And think on hapless poet's fate;
Like thee confin'd to lonely garret,
And rudely banish'd rooms of state.

And as from out thy tortur'd body
Thou draw'st thy slender string with pain;
So does he labour, like a noddy,
To spin materials from his brain.

He for some fluttering tawdry creature,
That spreads her charms before his eye;
And that's a conquest little better
Than thine o'er captive butterfly.

Thus far 'tis plain we both agree,
Perhaps our deaths may better shew it;
'Tis ten to one but penury
Ends both the spider and the poet.
The Play-thing Changed.

Kitty's charming voice and face, Syren-like, first caught my fancy; Wit and humour next take place, And now I doat on sprightly Nancy.

Kitty tunes her pipe in vain, With airs most languishing and dying; Calls me false ungrateful swain, And tries in vain to shoot me flying.

Nancy with restless art, Always humorous, gay, and witty, Has talk'd herself into my heart, And quite excluded tuneful Kitty.

'Ah, Kitty! Love, a wanton boy, Now pleas'd with song, and now with prattle, Still longing for the newest toy, Has chang'd his whistle for a rattle.
THE FABLE OF JOTHAM: TO THE BOROUGH-HUNTERS.

By Richard Owen Cambridge, Esq.

Jotham's fable of the toads is the oldest that is extant, and as beautiful as any which have been made since that time.

Addison.

JUDGES, Chap. ix. ver. 8.

Old Plum, who, though blest in his Kentish retreat,
Still thrives by his oil-shop in Leadenhall-street,
With a Portugal merchant, a knight by creation,
From a borough in Cornwall received invitation.
Well-assur'd of each vote, well equipt from the alley,
In quest of election-adventures they sally.
Though much they discours'd, the long way to beguile,
Of the earthquakes, the Jews, and the change of the style,
Of the Irish, the stocks, and the lott'ry committee,
They came silent and tir'd into Exeter city.

"Some books, prithee landlord, to pass a dull hour;
"No nonsense of parsons, or methodists four,
"No poetical stuff, a damn'd jingle of rhymes,
"But some pamphlet that's new, and a touch on the times."

"O Lord!"
"O Lord! says mine host, you may hunt the town round;
I question if any such thing can be found:
I never was asked for a book by a guest;
And I am sure I have all the great folk in the West.
None of these, to my knowledge, ever called for a book;
But see, Sir, the woman with fish, and the cook:
Here's the fattenest of carp; shall we dress you a brace?
Would you have any foals, or mullet, or place?"
"A place, quoth the knight, we must have to be sure,
But first let us see that our Borough's secure;
We'll talk of the place when we've settled the poll:
They may dress us for supper the mullet and foal.
But do you, my good landlord, look over your shelves,
For a book we must have, we're so tired of ourselves."
"In truth, Sir, I ne'er had a book in my life,
But the prayer-book and bible I bought for my wife."
"Well! the bible must do; but why don't you take in Some monthly collection, the new magazine?"
The bible was brought, and laid out on the table,
And open'd at Jotham's most apposite fable.
Sir Freepor began with this verse, though no rhyme—
"The trees of the forest went forth on a time,
(To what purpose our candidates scarce could expect,
For it was not, they found, to transplant—but elect)
"To the olive and fig-tree their deputies came,
But by both were refus'd, and their answer the same:
"Quoth
"Quoth the olive, Shall I leave my fatness and oil
For an unthankful office, a dignify'd toil?
Shall I leave, quoth the fig-tree, my sweetness and fruit,
To be envy'd or flav'd in so vain a pursuit?
Thus rebuff'd and surpriz'd they apply'd to the vine:
He answer'd, Shall I leave my grapes and my wine,
(Wine the sovereign cordial of God and of man)
To be made or the tool or head of a clan?
At last, as it always falls out in a scramble,
The mob gave the cry for a bramble! a bramble!
A bramble for ever! O! chance unexpected!
But bramble prevail'd, and was duly elected."
"O! ho! quoth the knight with a look most profound,
Now I see there's some good in good books to be found.
I wish I had read this same bible before;
Of long miles at the least 'twould have sav'd us fourscore.
You, Plumb, with your olives and oil might have staid,
And myself might have tarried my wines to unlade.
What have merchants to do from their business to ramble!
Your electioneer-errant should still be a bramble."

Thus ended at once the wise comment on Jotham,
And our citizens' jaunt to the borough of Gotham.
AN ELEGY WRITTEN IN AN EMPTY ASSEMBLY-ROOM.

BY THE SAME.

Semperque relinquis
Sola fide

ADVERTISEMET.

This poem being a parody on the most remarkable passages in the well-known epistle of Eloisa to Abelard, it was thought unnecessary to transcribe any lines from that poem, which is in the hands of all, and in the memory of most readers.

IN scenes where Hallet's genius has combin'd
With Bromwich to amuse and cheer the mind;
Amid this pomp of cost, this pride of art,
What mean these sorrows in a female heart?

* Hallet and Bromwich were two eminent upholsterers. The former purchased the celebrated seat of the duke of Chandos at Cannons, near Edgware, on the site of which he built himself a house on his retiring from business.
Ye crowded walls, whose well-enlighten'd round
With lovers' lights and protestations sound;
Ye glares, flattered by the learn'd and wise,
Ye glories, ogled by the brightest eyes;
Ye cards, which beauties by their touch have blest,
Ye chairs, which peers and ministers have prest;
How are ye chang'd! like you my fate I moan;
Like you, alas! neglected and alone—
For ah! to me alone no card is come,
I must not go abroad—and cannot be at home.

Blest be that social pow'r, the first who pair'd
The erring footman with th'unerring card!
'Twas Venus sure; for by their faithful aid
The whisp'reng lover meets the blushing maid;
From solitude they give the cheerful call
To the choice supper, or the sprightly ball:
Speed the soft summons of the gay and fair,
From distant Bloomsbury to Grosvenor's square;
And bring the colonel to the tender hour,
From the parade, the senate, or the Tower!

Ye records, patents of our worth and pride!
Our daily lesson, and our nightly guide!
Where'er ye stand, dispos'd in proud array,
The vapours vanish, and the heart is gay;
But when no cards the chimney-glass adorn,
The dismal void with heart-felt shame we mourn;
Conscious neglect inspires a fullen gloom,
And brooding sadness fills the lighted room.
If but some happier female’s card I’ve seen,
I swell with rage, or ficken with the spleen;
While artful pride conceals the bursting tear,
With some forc’d banter or affected sneer:
But now, grown desperate and beyond all hope,
I curse the ball, the dutchess, and the pope.
And, as the loads of borrow’d plate go by,
Tax it! ye greedy ministers, I cry.

How shall I feel, when Sol resigns his light
To this proud splendid goddess of the night!
Then when her awkward guests in measure beat
The crowded floors, which groan beneath their feet;
What thoughts in solitude shall then possess
My tortur’d mind, or soften my distress!
Not all that envious malice can suggest
Will soothe the tumults of my raging breast.
(For envy’s lost amid the numerous train,
And hisses with her hundred snakes in vain)
Though with contempt each despicable soul
Singly I view,—I must revere the whole.

The Methodist in her peculiar lot,
The world forgetting, by the world forgot,
Though single happy, though alone is proud,
She thinks of heav’n (she thinks not of a crowd);
And if she ever feels a vap’rid qualm,
Some drop of balsam, or some holy balm,

\[ b \] The title of a book of modern devotion.

The
The pious prophet of her sect delights,
And her pure soul seraphic rapture fills;
Grace shines around her with serenest beams,
And whispering Whitefield prompts her golden dreams.

Far other dreams my sensual soul employ,
While conscious nature tastes unholy joy;
I view the traces of experience'd charms,
And clasp the regimentals in my arms.

To dream last night I clos'd my blubber'd eyes;
Ye soft allusions, dear deceits, arise;
Alas! no more. Methinks I wand'ring go
To distant quarters 'midst the Highland snow;
To the dark ind where never wax-light burns,
Where in smoak'd tap'fry faded Dido mourns;

To some assembly in a country town,
And meet the colonel—in a parson's gown—
I start—I shriek—

O! could I on my waking brain impose,
Or but forget at least my present woes!

Forget 'em?—how?—each rattling coach suggests
The loath'd ideas of the crowding guests.
To visit—were to publish my disgrace;
To meet the spleen in every other place;
To join old maids and dowagers forlorn;
And be at once their comfort and their scorn!

For once, to read with this distemper'd brain,
Ev'n modern novels lend their aid in vain.
My Mandoline—what place can music find
Amid the discord of my restless mind?
How shall I waste this time which slowly flies!
How lull to slumber my reluctant eyes.
This night the happy and the unhappy keep Vigils alike,—Nor polk has murder'd sleep.

The F A K E R: A TALE.

By the same.

A Fakeer (a religious well known in the East,
Not much like a parson, still less like a priest).
With no canting, no fly jesuitical arts,
Field-preaching, hypocrisy, learning, or parts,
By a happy refinement in mortification,
Grew the oracle, saint, and the pope of his nation.
But what did he do this esteem to acquire?
Did he torture his head or his bosom with fire?
Was his neck in a portable pillory cas'd?
Did he fasten a chain to his leg or his waist?
No. His holiness rose to his sovereign pitch
By the merit of running long nails in his breech.
A wealthy young Indian, approaching the shrine,
Thus in banter accosts the prophetic divine:
This tribute accept for your interest with FO.
Whom with torture you serve, and whose will you must know:

To
To your suppliant disclose his immortal decree,
Tell me which of the heavens is allotted for men.

FAKKEER.
Let me first know your merits.

INDIAN.

I strive to be just:
To be true to my friend, to my wife, to my trust.
In religion I duly observe every form.
With a heart to my country devoted and warm:
I give to the poor, and I lend to the rich.

FAKKEER.
But how many nails do you run in your breech?

INDIAN.

With submission I speak to your reverence's tail;
But mine has no taste for a tenpenny nail.

FAKKEER.

Well! I'll pray to our prophet, and get you preferred;
Though no farther expect than to heaven the third.
With me in the thirtieth your seat to obtain,
You must qualify duly with hunger and pain.

INDIAN.

With you in the thirtieth! you impudent rogue!
Can such wretches as you give to madness a vogue!
Though the priesthood of PO on the vulgar impose,
By squinting whole years at the end of their nose,
Though with cruel devices of mortification
They adore a vain idol of modern creation,

Does
Does the God of the heavens such a service direct?
Can his mercy approve a self-punishing sect?
Will his wisdom be worship'd with chains and with nails?
Or e'er look for his rites in your noses and tails?
Come along to my house, and these penances leave,
Give your belly a feast, and your breech a reprieve.
This reasoning unhinging'd each fanatical notion;
And stagger'd our saint in his chair of promotion.
At length with reluctance he rose from his seat;
And resigning his nails and his fame for retreat,
Two weeks his new life he admir'd and enjoy'd:
The third he with plenty and quiet was cloy'd.
To live undistinguish'd to him was the pain,
An existence unnoticed he could not sustain.
In retirement he sigh'd for the fame-giving chair,
For the crowd to admire him, to reverence and glare:
No enticements of pleasure and ease could prevail;
He the saintly resum'd, and new larded his tail.

Our F a k e e r represents all the vot'ries of fame;
Their ideas, their means, and their end is the same:
The sportman, the buck; all the heroes of vice,
With their gallantry, lewdness, the bottle and dice;
The poets, the critics, the metaphysicians,
The courtier; the patriot, all politicians;
The statesman begirt with 'th' importunate ring,
(I had almost compleated my lift with the king);
All labour alike to illustrate my tale;
All tortur'd by choice with th' invisible nail.

To
To Mr. WHITEHEAD,

On his being made POET LAUREAT. 1757.

BY THE SAME.

'TIS so—though we're surpris'd to hear it:
The laurel is bestowed on merit.
How hush'd is every envious voice!
Confounded by so just a choice,
Though by prescriptive right prepar'd
To libel the selected bard.

But as you see the statesman's fate
In this our democratic state,
Whom virtue strives in vain to guard
From the rude pamphlet and the card;
You'll find the demagogues of Pindus
In envy not a jot behind us:
For each Aonian politician
(Whose element is opposition),
Will shew how greatly they surpass us
In gall and wormwood at Parnassus.

Thus as the famie detracting spirit
Attends on all distinguish'd merit,

Vol. VI. Y When
When 'tis your turn, observe, the quarrel
Is not with you, but with the laurel.

Suppose that laurel on your brow,
For cypress chang'd, funereal bough!
See all things take a different turn!
The very critics sweetly mourn,
And leave their satire's pois'nous sting
In plaintive elegies to sing:
With solemn threnody and dirge
Conduct you to Elysium's verge.
At Westminster the surplice'd dean
The sad but honourable scene
Prepares. The well-attended herc
Bears you amid the kings of verse.
Each rite observ'd, each duty paid,
Your fame on marble is display'd,
With symbols which your genius suit,
The mask, the buxom, and the flute;
The laurel crown aloft is hung;
And o'er the sculptur'd lyre unfurled
Sad allegoric figures leaning—
(How folks will gape to find their meaning!)
And a long epitaph is spread,
Which happy You will never read.
But hold—The change is so inviting
I own, I tremble while I'm writing.

Yes,
[ 339 ]

Yet, Whitehead, 'tis too soon to lose you:
Let critics flatter or abuse you,
O! teach us, ere you change the scene
To Stygian banks from Hippocrene,
How free-born bards should strike the strings,
And how a Briton write to kings.

*****

VERSSES on the Prospect of planting ARTS and LEARNING in AMERICA.

BY DR. BERKELEY, Bishop of CLOYNE.

THE Muse, disgusted at an age and clime,
   Barren of every glorious theme,
In distant lands now waits a better time,
   Producing subjects worthy fame:

In happy climates, where from the genial sun
   And virgin earth such scenes ensue,
The force of art by nature seems outdone,
   And fancied beauties by the true:

* Written about the year 1728, when the author had in view the scheme of founding a college at Bermuda, which failed of success in the attempt.
In happy climes, the seat of innocence,
Where nature guides and virtue rules,
Where men shall not impose for truth and sense
The pedantry of courts and schools:

There shall be sung another golden age,
The rise of empire and of arts,
The good and great inspiring epic rage,
The wisest heads, and noblest hearts.

Not such as Europe breeds in her decay;
Such as she bred when fresh and young,
When heav'nly flame did animate her clay,
By future poets shall be sung.

Westward the course of empire takes its way;
The four first acts already past,
A fifth shall close the drama with the day;
Time's noblest offspring is the last.
To Mr. Mason.

By William Whitehead, Esq.

I.

BELIEVE me, Mason, 'tis in vain
Thy fortitude the torrent-braves;
Thou too must bear th' inglorious chain;
The world, the world will have its slaves.
The chosen friend, for converse sweet,
The small, yet elegant retreat,
Are peaceful unambitious views
Which early fancy loves to form,
When, aided by the ingenuous Muse,
She turns the philosophic page,
And sees the wife of every age
With Nature's dictates warm.

II.

But ah! to few has Fortune given
The choice, to take or to refuse;
To fewer still indulgent Heaven
Allots the very will to chase.
And why are varying schemes preferr'd?
Man mixes with the common herd,
By custom guided to pursue
Or wealth, or honors, fame, or ease;
What others wish he wishes too,
Nor, from his own peculiar choice,
'Till strengthened by the public voice,
His very pleasures please.

III.
How oft, beneath some hoary shade
Where Cam glides indolently slow,
Haft thou, as indolently laid,
Preferr'd to Heav'n thy favorite vow;
"Here, here for ever let me stay,
"Here calmly loiter life away,
"Nor all those vain connections know
"Which fetter down the free-born mind
"The slave of interest, or of shew;
"Whilst yon gay tenant of the grove,
"The happier heir of Nature's love,
"Can warble unconfin'd."

IV.
Yet sure, my friend, th' eternal plan
By Truth unerring was design'd;
Inferior parts were made for man,
But man himself for all mankind.
Then by th' apparent judge th' unseen;
Behold how rolls this vast machine
To one great end, howe'er withstood,
Directing its impartial course,
All labour for the general good.
Some stem the wave, some till the soil,
By choice the bold, th' ambitious toil,
The indolent by force.

V.
That bird, thy fancy frees from care,
With many a fear unknown to thee,
Must love to glean his scanty fare
From field to field, from tree to tree:
His lot, united with his kind,
Has all his little joys confin'd;
The Lover's and the Parent's ties
Alarm by turns his anxious breast;
Yet, bound by fate, by instinct wise,
He hails with songs the rising morn,
And pleas'd at evening's cool return
He sings himself to rest.

VI.
And tell me, has not Nature made
Some stated void for thee to fill,
Some spring, some wheel, which asks thy aid
To move, regardless of thy will?
Go then, go feel with glad surprise
New bliss from new connections rise;

Y 4

'Till,
Till, happier in thy wider sphere,
Thou quit thy darling schemes of ease;
Nay, glowing in the full career
Ev'n with thy virtuous labours more;
Nor 'till the toilsome day is o'er
Expect the night of peace.

ODE. TO INDEPENDENCY.

By Mr. Mason.

I.
Here, on my native shore reclin'd,
While Silence rules the midnight hour,
I woo thee, Goddess. On my musing mind
Descend, propitious Power!

And bid these ruffling gales of grief subside:
Bid my calm'd soul with all thy influence shine;
As yon chaste Orb along this ample tide
Draws the long lustre of her silver line,
While the hush'd breeze its last weak whisper blows,
And fulls old Humber to his deep repose.

II.

Come to thy Vot'ry's ardent prayer,
In all thy graceful plainness drest;
No knot confines thy waving hair,
No zone thy floating vest.

Unfullied
Unsullied Honor decks thine open brow,
And Candor brightens in thy modest eye;
Thy blush is warm Content's ætherial glow,
Thy smile is Peace; thy step is Liberty.
Thou scatter'st blessings round with lavish hand,
As Spring with careless fragrance fills the land.

III.

As now o'er this lone beach I stray;
Thy fav'rite Swain oft stole along,
And artless wove his Doric lay,
Far from the busy throng.

Thou heard'st him, Goddess, strike the tender string,
And bad'st his soul with bolder passions move:
Strait these responsive shores forgot to ring
With Beauty's praise, or plaint of slighted Love:
To loftier flights his daring Genius rose,
And led the war 'gainst thine and Freedom's foes.

IV.

Pointed with Satire's keeneft steel,
The shafts of Wit he darts around:
Ev'n mitred Dulness learns to feel,
And shrinks beneath the wound.

In awful poverty his honest Muse
Walks forth vindictive through a venal land:
In vain Corruption sheds her golden dews,
In vain Oppression lifts her iron hand:

*a Andrew Marvell, born at Kingston upon Hull in the year 1620.
b Parker, bishop of Oxford.
He scorns them both, and, arm’d with truth alone,
Bids Lust and Folly tremble on the throne.

V.
Behold, like him, immortal Maid,
The Muses vestal fires I bring:
Here at thy feet the sparks I spread;
Propitious wave thy wing,
And fan them to that dazzling blaze of Song,
That glares tremendous on the Sons of Pride.
But, hark, methinks I hear her hallow’d tongue!
In distant trills it echoes o’er the tide;
Now meets mine ear with warbles wildly free,
As swells the lark’s meridian ecstasy.

VI.
Fond Youth! to Marvell’s patriot fame,
Thy humble breast must ne’er aspire.
Yet nourish still the lambent flame;
Still strike thy blameless lyre;
Led by the moral Mufe securely rove;
And all the vernal sweets thy vacant Youth
Can cull from busy Fancy’s fairy grove,
O hang their foliage round the fane of Truth:
To arts like these devote thy tuneful toil,
And meet its fair reward in D’Arcy’s smile.”
VII.

"'Tis he; my Son, alone shall cheer
"Thy sick'ning soul; at that sad hour,
"When o'er a much-lov'd Parent's bier
"Thy duteous Sorrows shower:

"At that sad hour, when all thy hopes decline;
"When pining Care leads on her pallid train,
"And sees thee, like the weak and widow'd Vine,
"Winding thy blasted tendrils o'er the plain.

"At that sad hour shall D'Arcy lend his aid,
"And raise with Friendship's arm thy drooping head.

VIII.

"This fragrant wreath, the Muses meed,
"That bloom'd those vocal shades among,
"Where never Flatt'ry dared to tread,
"Or Interest's servile throng;

"Receive, my favour'd Son, at my command,
"And keep, with sacred care, for D'Arcy's brow
"Tell him, twas wove by my immortal hand,
"I breath'd on every flower a purer glow;

"Say, for thy sake, I send the gift divine
"To him, who calls thee his, yet makes thee mine."

ODE.
ODE. On MELANCHOLY.
To a FRIEND.
BY THE SAME.

I.

A H! cease this kind persuasive strain,
Which, when it flows from friendship's tongue,
However weak, however vain,
O'erpowers beyond the Siren's song:
Leave me, my friend, indulgent go,
And let me muse upon my woe.
Why lure me from these pale retreats?
Why rob me of these pensive sweets?
Can Music's voice, can Beauty's eye,
Can Painting's glowing hand, supply
A charm so suited to my mind,
As blows this hollow gust of wind,
As drops this little weeping rill
Soft-tinkling down the moss-grown hill,
Whilst through the west, where sinks the crimson Day,
Meek Twilight slowly fails, and waves her banners grey?

II. Say,
II.
Say, from Affliction’s various source
Do none but turbid waters flow?
And cannot Fancy clear their course?
For Fancy is the friend of Woe.
Say, ’mid that grove, in love-lorn state,
When yon poor Ringdove mourns her mate,
Is all, that meets the shepherd’s ear,
Insip’rd by anguish, and despair?
Ah no, fair Fancy rules the song:
She swells her throat; she guides her tongue;
She bids the waving Aspin spray
Quiver in cadence to her lay;
She bids the fringed Oeffers bow,
And ruffle round the lake below,
To suit the tenor of her gurgling sighs,
And soothe her throbbing breast with solemn sympathies.

III.
To thee, whose young and polish’d brow
The wrinkling hand of Sorrow spares;
Whose cheeks, bestrew’d with roses, know
No channel for the tide of tears;
To thee yon Abbey, dank and lone,
Where Ivy chains each mould’ring stone
That nods o’er many a Martyr’s tomb,
May cast a formidable gloom.
Yet some there are, who, free from fear,
Could wander through the cloisters drear,
Could rove each desolated isle,
Though midnight thunders shake the pile;
And dauntless view, or seem to view,
(As faintly flash the lightnings blue)
Thin shivering Ghosts from yawning charnels throng,
And glance with silent sweep the flaggy vaults along.

IV.

But such terrific charms as these,
I ask not yet: My sober mind
The fainter forms of Sadness please;
My sorrows are of softer kind.
Through this still valley let me stray,
Wreapt in some strain of penfive Gray:
Whose lofty Genius bears along
The conscious dignity of Song;
And, scorning from the sacred fove
To waste a note on Pride, or Power,
Roves, when the glimmering twilight glooms,
And warbles 'mid the rustic tombs:
He too perchance (for well I know,
His heart would melt with friendly woe)
He too perchance, when these poor limbs are laid,
Will heave one tuneful sigh, and soothe my hov'ring shade.
ODE.

By Mr. GRAY.

ΦΩΝΑΝΤΑ ΣΥΝΕΤΟΙΣΙ—
PINDAR, Olymp. II.

I. i.

AWAKE, Æolian lyre, awake,
And give to rapture all thy trembling strings,
From Helicon's harmonious springs
A thousand rills their mazy progress take:

IMITATION.
Awake my glory: awake, lute and harp.

David's Psalms.

VARIATION.
In Mr. Gray's manuscript it originally stood,

Awake, my lyre: my glory wake.

b The subject and simile, as usual with Pindar, are united. The various sources of poetry, which gives life and lustre to all it touches, are here described; its quiet majestic progress enriching every subject (otherwise dry and barren) with a pomp of diction and luxuriant harmony of numbers; and its more rapid and irresistible course, when swollen and hurried away by the conflict of tumultuous passions.

G.

The
The laughing flowers, that round them blow,
Drink life and fragrance as they flow.
Now the rich stream of music winds along
Deep, majestic, smooth and strong,
Through verdant vales, and Ceres' golden reign:
Now rolling down the steep again,
Headlong, impetuous, see it pour:
The rocks and nodding groves rebellow to the roar.

I. 2.

Oh! Sovereign of the willing soul,
Parent of sweet and solemn-breathing airs,
Enchanting shell! the sullen Cares,
And frantic Passions hear thy soft control.
On Thracia's hills the Lord of War
Has curb'd the fury of his car,
And dropp'd his thirsty lance at thy command.
Perching on the scepter'd hand.

Of

- Power of harmony to calm the turbulent fallies of the soul. The thoughts are borrowed from the first Pythian of Pindar. G.

- This description of the Bird of Jupiter Mr. Gray, in his own edition, modestly calls "a weak imitation of some incomparable lines in the first Pythian of Pindar;" but, if they are compared with Mr. Gilbert West's translation of the above lines (though far from a bad one), their superior energy to his version will appear very conspicuous.

Perch'd on the sceptre of th' Olympian king,
The thrilling darts of harmony he feels;
And indolently hangs his rapid wing,
While gentle sleep his closing eyelid seals.
[ 353 ]

Of Jove, thy magic lulls the feather'd king
With ruffled plumes, and flapping wing:
Quench'd in dark clouds of slumber lie
The terror of his beak, and lightnings of his eye.

I. 3.

° Thee the voice, the dance, obey,
Temper'd to thy warbled lay.
O'er Idalia's velvet-green
The rosy-crowned Loves are seen
On Cytherea's day,
With antic Sports, and blue-eyed Pleasures,
Friking light in frolic measures;
Now pursuing, now retreating,
Now in circling troops they meet:
To brisk notes in cadence beating
Glance their many-twinkling feet.

And o'er his heaving limbs in loose array
To every balmy gale the ruffling feathers play.

Here, if we except the second line, we find no imagery or expression of the lyrical cast. The rest are loaded with unnecessary epithets, and would better suit the tamer tones of elegy.

°  Power of harmony to produce all the graces of motion in the body.

IMITATION.

Homer's Od. 9.  G.

Vol. VI.  Z  -  Slow
Slow melting strains their Queen's approach declare:
Where'er she turns the Graces homage pay.
With arms sublime, that float upon the air,
In gliding state she wins her easy way:
O'er her warm cheek, and rising bosom, move
The bloom of young Desire, and purple light of Love.

II. i.

Man's feeble race what ills await,
Labour, and Penury, the racks of Pain,
Disease, and Sorrow's weeping train,
And Death, sad refuge from the storms of Fate!

This and the five following lines which follow are sweetly introduced by the short and unequal measures that precede them: the whole stanza is indeed a masterpiece of rhythm, and charms the ear by its well-varied cadence, as much as the imagery which it contains ravishes the fancy. "There is (says our author in one of his manuscript papers) "a toute ensemble of sound, as well as of sense, in poetical composition, "always necessary to its perfection. What is gone before still dwells "upon the ear, and insensibly harmonizes with the present line, as in "that succession of fleeting notes which is called melody." Nothing "can better exemplify the truth of this fine observation than his own poetry. M.

IMITATION.

Δαμνης 6 ιν ψυχρωμηι
Παραβαλ φως ιελοκε.

Phryniebus apud Athenas.

To compensate the real and imaginary ills of life, the Muse was given to mankind by the same Providence that sends the day by its cheerful presence to dispel the gloom and terrors of the night. G.
The fond complaint, my Song, disprove,
And justify the laws of Jove.
Say, has he given in vain the heav'nly Mute?
Night, and all her fickly dews,
Her Spectres wan, and Birds of boding cry,
He gives to range the dreary sky:
'Till down the eastern cliffs afar
Hyperion's march they spy, and glitt'ring shafts of war.

II. 2.

1 In climes beyond the solar road,
Where shaggy forms o'er ice-built mountains roam,
The Muse has broke the twilight gloom
To cheer the shiv'ring Native's dull abode.
And oft, beneath the od'rous shade
Of Chili's boundless forests laid,

IMITATION.
Or seen the morning's well-appointed star,
Come marching up the eastern hills afar.

Cowley.

1 Extensive influence of poetic genius over the remotest and most uncivilized nations: its connection with liberty, and the virtues that naturally attend on it. (See the Erse, Norwegian, and Welch Fragments, the Lapland and American Songs.)

IMITATION.
Extra anni solisque vias——
Virgil.
Tutta lontana dal carmì del sole.

Petrarch Canon ii.

Z 2

She
She deigns to hear the savage Youth repeat,
In loose numbers wildly sweet,
Their feather-cinctured Chiefs, and dusky Loves.
Her track, where'er the Goddes roves,
Glory pursues, and generous Shame,
Th' unconquerable Mind, and Freedom's holy flame.

II. 3.

Woods, that wave o'er Delphi's steep,
Isles, that crown the Egæan deep,
Fields, that cool Illissus laves,
Or where Mæander's amber waves
In lingering Lab'rinths creep,
How do your tuneful Echo's languish,
Mute, but to the voice of Anguish!
Where each old poetic Mountain
Inspiration breath'd around;
Every shade and hallow'd Fountain
Murmur'd deep a solemn sound:
'Till the sad Nine in Greece's evil hour
Left their Parnassus for the Latian plains.
Alike they scorn the pomp of tyrant-Power,
And coward Vice, that revels in her chains.

Progress of poetry from Greece to Italy, and from Italy to England. Chaucer was not unacquainted with the writings of Dante or of Petrarch. The Earl of Surrey and Sir Thomas Wyatt had travelled in Italy, and formed their taste there; Spenser imitated the Italian writers; Milton improved on them: but this school expired soon after the Restoration, and a new one arose on the French model, which has subsisted ever since.

When
When Latium had her lofty spirit lost,
They sought, oh Albion! next thy sea-encircled coast.

III. 1.

Far from the sun and summer-gale,
In thy green lap was Nature's Darling laid,
What time, where lucid Avon stray'd,
To Him the mighty mother did unveil
Her awful face: The dauntless Child
Stretched forth his little arms, and smiled.
This pencil take (she said) whose colours clear
Richly paint the vernal year:

An ingenious person, who sent Mr. Gray his remarks anonymously on this and the following ode soon after they were published, gives this stanza and the following a very just and well-expressed eulogy: "A poet is perhaps never more conciliating than when he praises favou-rite predecessors in his art. Milton is not more the pride than Shakspeare the love of their country: it is therefore equally judicious to diffuse a tenderness and a grace through the praise of Shakspeare, as to exalt in a strain more elevated and sonorous the boundless soarings of Milton's epic imagination." The critic has here well noted the beauty of contrast which results from the two descriptions; yet it is further to be observed, to the honor of our poet's judgment, that the tenderness and grace in the former does not prevent it from strongly characterizing the three capital perfections of Shakspeare's genius; and when he describes his power of exciting terror (a species of the sublime) he ceases to be diffuse, and becomes, as he ought to be, concise and energetic.

Thine
Thine too these golden keys, immortal Boy!
This can unlock the gates of Joy;
Or Horror that, and thrilling Fears,
Or ope the sacred source of sympathetic Tears.

III. i.

Nor second He, that rode sublime
Upon the seraph-wings of Extasy,
The secrets of th’ Abyss to spy,
He pass’d the flaming bounds of Place and Time:
The living Throne, the sapphire-blaze,
Where Angels tremble while they gaze,
He saw; but, blasted with excess of light,
Closed his eyes in endless night.

Behold,

Milton.

IMITATION.

—Flammantia moenia mundi.

Lucan.

IMITATION.

For the spirit of the living creature was in the wheels, and above the armorment that was over their heads, was the likeness of a throne, as the appearance of a sapphire-stone—this was the appearance of the glory of the Lord.

Ezekiel i. 26. 28.

IMITATION.

Ὅθελαίη μὴ ἀμηρεθ' ἔδωκαν ο' ἀλέθεν ἀδικοί.

Homer Od. G.

This has been condemned as a false thought, and more worthy of an Italian poet than of Mr. Gray. Count Algarotti, we have found in his letter to Mr. How, praises it highly; but as he was an Italian critic, his
Behold, where Dryden's lofty presumptuous car
Wide o'er the fields of glory bear his judgment, in this point, will not, perhaps by many, be thought to overbalance the objection. The truth is, that this fiction of the cause of Milton's blindness is not beyond the bounds of poetical credibility, any more than the fiction which precedes it concerning the birth of Shakespeare; and therefore would be equally admissible, had it not the peculiar misfortune to encounter a fact too well known: on this account the judgment revolts against it. Milton himself has told us, in a strain of heart-felt exultation, (see his Sonnet to Cyriae Skynner) that he lost his eye-fight,

In Liberty's Defence, his nobletask;
Whereof all Europe rings from side to side;

And, when we know this to have been the true cause, we cannot admit a fictitious one, however sublimely conceived, or happily expressed. If therefore so lofty and unrivalled a description will not alone for this acknowledged defect, in relation to matter of fact, all that the impartial critic can do, is to point out the reason, and to apologize for the poet, who was necessitated by his subject to consider Milton only in his poetical capacity.

Since the above note was published, Mr. Brand, of East-Derham, in Norfolk, has favoured me with a letter, in which he informs me of a very similar hyperbole extant in a MS. commentary upon Plato's Phaedon, written by Hermias, a Christian philosopher, of the second century, and which is printed in Bayle's Dictionary (Art. Achilles.) It contains the following anecdote of Homer:—"That keeping some sheep near the tomb of Achilles, he obtained, by his offerings and supplications, a sight of that hero; who appeared to him surrounded with..."
Two couriers of ethereal race,

With necks in thunder cloth’d, and long-refounding pace.

"So much glory that Homer could not bear the splendor of it, and that if he was not only dazzled, but blinded by the sight." The ingenious gentleman makes no doubt but Mr. Gray took his thought from this passage, and applauds him for the manner in which he has improved upon it: he also thinks in general, that a deviation from historical truth, though it may cast a shade over the middling beauties of poetry, produces no bad effect where the magnificence and brilliancy of the images entirely fill the imagination; and with regard to this passage in particular, he intimates, that as the cause of Milton’s blindness is not so well known as the thing itself, the licence of poetical invention may allow him to assign a cause different from the real fact.” However this may be, the very exact resemblance, which the two thoughts bear to one another, will, I hope, vindicate Mr. Gray’s from being a modern concetto in the taste of the Italian school, as it has been deemed to be by some critics. But this resemblance will do more (and it is on this account chiefly that I produce, and thank the gentleman for communicating it); it will prove the extreme uncertainty of deciding upon poetical imitations; for I am fully persuaded that Mr. Gray had never seen, or at least attended to, this Greek fragment. How scrupulous he was in borrowing even an epithet from another poet, many of his notes on this very ode fully prove. And as to the passage in question, he would certainly have cited it, for the sake of vindicating his own taste by classical authority, especially when the thought had been so much controverted.

Imitation.

Hast thou cloathed his neck with thunder?

This verse and the foregoing are meant to express the stately march and sounding energy of Dryden’s rhymes.

G.

III. 3. Hark,
III. 3.

Hark! his hands the lyre explore!
Bright-eyed Fancy hovering o'er
Scatters from her pictur'd urn
Thoughts, that breathe, and words, that burn.

But ah! 'tis heard no more—
Oh! Lyre divine, what daring Spirit
Wakes thee now? though he inherit
Nor the pride, nor ample pinion,
That the Theban Eagle bear
Sailing with supreme dominion
Through the azure deep of air:

Imitation.

Words that weep, and tears that speak.

We have had in our language no other odes of the sublime kind than that of Dryden on St. Cecilia's day: for Cowley (who had his merit) yet wanted judgment, style, and harmony for such a task. That of Pope is not worthy of so great a man. Mr. Mason indeed of late days has touched the true chords, and with a masterly hand, in some of his choruses—above all in the last of Caractacus.

Hark! heard ye not your footsteps dread!

Pindar compares himself to that bird, and his enemies to ravens, that croak and clamour in vain, while it pursues its flight, regardless of their noise.

Yet
Yet oft before his infant eyes would run
Such forms, as glitter in the Muse's ray
With orient hues, unborrow'd of the Sun:
Yet shall he mount, and keep his distant way
Beyond the limits of a vulgar fate,
Beneath the Good how far,—but far above the Great.
The following Ode is founded on a tradition current in Wales, that Edward the First, when he compleated the conquest of that country, ordered all the Bards, that fell into his hands, to be put to death.

I. 1.

"Ruin seize thee, ruthless King! Confusion on thy banners wait, Though fann'd by Conquest's crimson wing They mock the air with idle state.

On this noble exordium the anonymous critic, before-mentioned, thus eloquently expresses his admiration: "This abrupt execution plunges the reader into that sudden fearful perplexity which is designed to predominate through the whole. The irresistible violence of the prophet's passions bears him away, who, as he is unprepared by a formal ushering in of the speaker, is unfortified against the impressions of his poetical phrenzy, and overpowered by them, as sudden thunders strike the deepest." All readers of taste, I fancy, have felt this effect from the passage; they will be well pleased however to see their own feelings so well expressed as they are in this note.

b IMITATION.
Mocking the air with colours idly spread.

Shakespeare's King John.
Helm, 2
Helm, nor Hauberk'se
twisted mail,
Nor even thy virtues, Tyrant, shall avail
To save thy secret soul from nightly fears,
From Cambria's curse, from Cambria's tears!

Such were the sounds, that o'er the crested pride
Of the first Edward scatter'd wild dismay,
As down the steep of Snowdon's shaggy side
He wound with toilsome march his long array.
Stout Gloster stumbled aghast in speechless trance:
To arms! cried Mortimer, and couch'd his quiv'ring lance.

The hauberk was a texture of steel ringlets or rings interwoven, forming a coat of mail that fitted close to the body, and adapted itself to every motion. G.

IMITATION.
The crested adder's pride.

Dryden's Indian Queen.

Snowdon was a name given to that mountainous tract, which the Welsh themselves call Craigian-eryr: it included all the highlands of Caernarvonshire and Merionethshire as far east as the river Conway.
R. Hydend, speaking of the Castle of Conway, built by king Edward the first, says, "Ad ortum annis Conway ad clivum montis Erery;"
and Matthew of Westminster (ad ann. 1283) "Apud Aberconway ad
"pedes montis Snowdonie fecit erigi castrum forte." G.

f Gilbert de Clare, surnamed the Red, Earl of Gloucester and Hertford, son-in-law to King Edward. G.

g Edmond de Mortimer, Lord of Wigmore.

They both were Lords Marchers, whose lands lay on the borders of Wales, and probably accompanied the king in this expedition. G.

I. 2. On
I. 2.

On a rock, whose haughty brow
Frowns o'er old Conway's foaming flood,
Robed in the sable garb of woe,
With haggard eyes the Poet stood;

b (Loose his beard, and hoary hair
Stream'd, like a meteor, to the troubled air)
And with a Master's hand, and Prophet's fire,
Struck the deep forrows of his lyre.

• Hark, how each giant-oak, and desart cave,
• Sighs to the torrent's aweful voice beneath!
• O'er thee, oh King! their hundred arms they wave,
• Revenge on thee in hoarser numbers breathe;
• Vocal no more, since Cambria's fatal day,
• To high-born Hoel's harp, or soft Llewellyn's lay.

b The image was taken from a well-known picture of Raphael, representing the Supreme Being in the vision of Ezekiel: there are two of these paintings, both believed to be originals, one at Florence, the other in the Duke of Orleans's collection at Paris. G.

Mr. Gray never saw the large Cartoon, done by the same divine hand, in the possession of the Duke of Montague, at his seat at Broughton in Northamptonshire, else I am persuaded he would have mentioned it in his note. The two finished pictures abroad (which I believe are closet-pieces) can hardly have so much spirit in them as this wonderful drawing; it gave me the sublimest idea I ever received from painting. Moses breaking the tables of the law, by Parmegiano, was a figure which Mr. Gray used to say came still nearer to his meaning than the picture of Raphael. M.

I. 3. 'Cold
Cold is Cadwallo’s tongue,
That hush’d the stormy main:
Brave Urien sleeps upon his craggy bed:
Mountains, ye mourn in vain
Modred, whose magic song
Made huge Plinlimmon bow his cloud-topp’d head.
On dreary Arvon’s coast they lie,
Smear’d with gore, and ghastly pale:
Far, far aloof th’ affrighted ravens sail;
The famish’d Eagle screams, and passes by.
Dear lost companions of my tuneful art,
Dear, as the light, that visits these sad eyes,
Dear, as the ruddy drops that warm my heart,
Ye died amidst your dying country’s cries—

The shores of Caernarvonshire, opposite to the Isle of Anglesey.  G.

Camden and others observe, that eagles used annually to build their nests among the rocks of Snowdon, which have from thence (as some think) been named by the Welsh Craigian-eryri, or the crags of the eagles. At this day (I am told) the highest point of Snowdon is called the eagle’s nest. That bird is certainly no stranger to this island, as the Scots, and the people of Cumberland, Westmoreland, &c. can testify: it even has built its nest in the Peak of Derbyshire. (See Willoughby’s Ornithol. published by Ray).  G.

IMITATION.
As dear to me as the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart.

Shaksp. Julius Caesar.  G.

No
"= No more I weep. They do not sleep.
= On yonder cliffs, a grievously band,
= I see them fit, they linger yet,
= Avengers of their native land:
= With me in dreadful harmony they join,
= And weave with bloody hands the tisse of thy line.

II. 1.

"= Weave the warp, and weave the woof,
= The winding-sheet of Edward's race,
= Give ample room, and verge enough,
= The characters of hell to trace.

m Here, says the anonymous Critic, a vision of triumphant revenge is judiciously made to ensue, after the pathetic lamentation which precedes it. Breake—double rhymes—an appropriated cadence—and an exalted ferocity of language, forcibly picture to us the unconvrollable tumultuous workings of the prophet's stimulated bosom. M.

* Can there be an image more just, ample, and nobly imagined than this tremendous tragical winding-sheet? In the rest of this stanza the vividness of thought, expression, and cadence, are admirably adapted to the character and situation of the speaker, and of the bloody spectres his assistants. It is not indeed peculiar to it alone, but a beauty that runs throughout the whole composition, that the historical events are briefly sketched out by a few striking circumstances, in which the poet's office of rather exciting and directing, than satisfying the reader's imagination, is perfectly observed. Such abrupt hints, resembling the several fragments of a vast ruin, suffer not the mind to be raised to the utmost pitch, by one image of horror, but that instantaneously a second and a third are presented to it, and the affection is still uniformly supported. Anon. Critic. M.

" Mark
“Mark the year, and mark the night,
• When Severn shall re-echo with affright
• The shrieks of death, through Berkley’s roofs that ring,
• Shrieks of an agonizing King!
• She-Wolf of France, with unrelenting fangs,
• That tear’d the bowels of thy mangled Mec,
• From thee be born, who o’er thy country hangs
• The scourge of Heav’n. What Terrors round him wait!
• Amazement in his van, with Flight combin’d,
• And Sorrow’s faded form, and Solitude behind.

II. 2.

“Mighty Victor, mighty Lord,
• Low on his funeral couch he lies!
• No pitying heart, no eye afford
• A tear to grace his obsequies.
• Is the sable Warriour fled?
• Thy son is gone. He rests among the Dead.
• The swarm, that in thy noon-tide beam were born,
• Gone to salute the rising Morn.

Edward the Second, cruelly butchered in Berkley-Castle. G.
• Isabel of France, Edward the Second’s adulterous Queen. G.
• Triumphs of Edward the Third in France. G.
• Death of that king, abandoned by his children, and even robbed in his last moments by his courtiers and his mistress. G.
• Edward, the Black Prince, dead some time before his father. G.

“Fair
Fair laughs the Morn, and soft the Zephyr blows,
While proudly riding o'er the azure realm
In gallant trim the gilded Vessel goes;
Youth on the prow, and Pleasure at the helm;
Regardles of the sweeping Whirlwind's sway,
That, hush'd in grim repose, expects his evening prey.

Magnificence of Richard the Second's reign. See Froissart and other contemporary writers. It is always entertaining, and sometimes useful, to be informed how a writer frequently improves on his original thoughts; on this account I have occasionally set down the few variations which Mr. Gray made in his lyrical compositions. The six lines before us convey, perhaps, the most beautiful piece of imagery in the whole Ode, and were a wonderful improvement on those which he first wrote; which, though they would appear fine in an inferior poet, are infinitely below those which supplant them. I find them in one of his corrected manuscripts as follow:

Variation:

Mirrors of Saxon truth and loyalty,
Your helpless old expiring Master view!
They hear not: scarce Religion dares supply
Her mutter'd Requiem, and her holy dew.
Yet thou, proud boy, from Pomfret's walls shall send
A sigh, and envy oft thy happy grandfere's end. M.

Vol. VI. A a II. 3.
II. 3.

"Fill high the sparkling bowl,
The rich repast prepare,
Reft of a crown, he yet may share the feast:
Close by the regal chair
Fell Thirst and Famine scowl
A baleful smile upon their baffled Guest.

Richard the Second (as we are told by Archbishop Scoop, Thomas of Walsingham, and all the older Writers) was starved to death. The story of his assassination, by Sir Piers of Exon, is of much later date. G.

This stanza (as an ingenious friend remarks) has exceeding merit. It breathes in a keener compass, what the Ode breathes at large, the high spirit of lyric Enthusiasm. The Transitions are sudden, and impetuous; the language full of fire and force; and the Imagery carried, without impropriety, to the most daring height. The manner of Richard's death by famine exhibits such beauties of Personification, as only the richest and most vivid imagination could supply. From thence we are hurried, with the wildest rapidity, into the midst of battle; and the epithet kindred places at once before our eyes all the peculiar horrors of civil war. Immediately, by a transition most striking and unexpected, the Poet falls into a tender and pathetic address, which, from the sentiments and also from the numbers, has all the melancholy flow, and breathes all the plaintive softness, of Elegy. Again the Scene changes; again the Bard rises into an allegorical description of Carnage, to which the metre is admirably adapted: and the concluding sentence of personal punishment on Edward is denounced with a solemnity, that chills and terrifies. M.

"Hear
"Hear ye the din of battle Bray,
Lance to lance, and horse to horse?
Long years of havoc urge their destin'd course,
And through the kindred squadrons mow their way.
Ye Towers of Julius, London's lasting shame,
With many a soul and midnight mur~her fed,
Revere his Comfort's faith, his Father's fame,
And spare the meek Usurper's holy head.
Above, below, the rose of snow,
Twined with her blushing foe, we spread:
The bristled Boar in infant-gore
Wallowed beneath the thorny shade.
Now Brothers, bending o'er th' accursed loom,
Stamp we our vengeance deep, and ratify his doom.

Ruinous civil wars of York and Lancaster. G.

Henry the VI. George Duke of Clarence, Edward the Fifth, Richard Duke of York, &c. believed to be murdered secretly in the Tower of London. The oldest part of that structure is vulgarly attributed to Julius Caesar. G.

Margaret of Anjou, a woman of heroic spirit, who struggled hard to save her husband and her crown. G.

Henry the Fifth. G.

Henry the Sixth very near being canonized. The line of Lancaster had no right of inheritance to the crown. G.

The white and red roses, devices of York and Lancaster. G.

The silver boar was the badge of Richard the Third; whence he was usually known in his own time by the name of the Boar. G.
"Edward, lo! to sudden fate
"(Weave we the woof. The thread is spun)
"Half of thy heart we consecrate.
"(The web is wove. The work is done.)"
"Stay, oh stay! nor thus forlorn
"Leave me unblest, unpitied, here to mourn:
"In yon bright track, that pierces the western skies,
"They melt, they vanish from my eyes.
"But oh! what solemn scenes on Snowdon's height
"Descending flow their glittering skirts unroll?
"Visions of glory, spare my aching sight,
"Ye unborn ages, crowd not on my soul:
"No more our long-lost Arthur we bewail,
"All-hail & ye genuine Kings, Britannia's Issue, hail!

---

Eleanor of Castile died a few years after the conquest of Wales. The heroic proof she gave of her affection to her Lord is well known. The monuments of his regret, and sorrow for the loss of her, are still to be seen in several parts of England. G.

Variation.

From Cambria's thousand hills a thousand strains
Triumphant tell aloud, another Arthur reigns.

It was the common belief of the Welsh nation, that King Arthur was still alive in Fairy land, and should return again to reign over Britain. G.

Both Merlin and Taliesin had prophesied that the Welsh should regain their sovereignty over this island; which seemed to be accomplished in the House of Tudor. G.
III. 2.

"A Girt with many a Baron bold,
Sublime their starry fronts they rear;
And gorgeous Dames, and Statesmen old
In bearded majesty, appear.
In the midst a form divine!
Her eye-proclaims her of the Briton-line;
Her lyon-port, her awe-commanding face;
Attemp'red sweet to virgin-grace.
What strings symphomious tremble in the air?
What strains of vocal transport round her play!
Hear from the grave, great Talieffin, hear;
They breathe a soul to animate thy clay.
Bright Rapture calls, and soaring, as the rings,
Waves in the eye of Heav'n her many-coloured wings.

Variation.

Youthful Knights and Barons bold,
With dazling helm and horrent spear.

9 Speed relating an audience given by Queen Elizabeth to Paul Dzialin斯基, ambassador of Poland, says, "And thus the lion-like rising daunted the malapert orator no less with her stately port and majestic deporture, than with the tartness of her princelie checkes."

Talieffin, Chief of the Bards, flourished in the V1th Century. His works are still preserved, and his memory held in high veneration among his countrymen. G.
III. 3.

* The verse adorn again
* Fierce War, and faithful Love,
* And Truth severe, by fairy Fiction drest.
* In bulkin'd measures move
* Pale Grief, and pleasing Pain,
* With Horror, Tyrant of the throbbing breast.
* A Voice, as of the Cherub-Choir,
* Gales from blooming Eden bear;
* And distant warblings lessen on my ear,
* That left in long feturity expire.
* Fond impious Man, think'st thou, your sanguine cloud,
* Rais'd by thy breath, has quench'd the Orb of day?
* Tow'ring he repairs the golden flood,
* And warms the nations with redoubled ray.
* Enough for me: With joy I see
* The different doom our Fates assign.

Imitation.

Fierce wars and faithful loves shall moralize my song.

Spenser's P. to the Fairy Queen.

Shakespeare. G.

Milton. G.

* The succession of poets after Milton's time. G.
* The same turn of thought occurs in an old play called Faïsme 1633.

— Think ye the seaside
Of sun-boil'd seas can stop the eagle's eye?

Be
'Be thine Despair, and scepter'd Care;
'To triumph, and to die, are mine.'
He spoke, and headlong from the mountain's height,
Deep in the roaring tide he plung'd to endless night.
HAVING now, by the advice and assistance of my friends, brought this Collection of Poems to a competent size, it has been thought proper that the further progress of its growth should here be stopp'd. From the loose and fugitive pieces, some printed, others in manuscript, which for forty or fifty years past have been thrown into the world, and carelessly left to perish; I have here, according to the most judicious opinions I could obtain in distinguishing their merits, endeavour'd to select and preserve the best. The favourable reception which the former volumes have met with, demands my warmest acknowledgments, and calls for all my care in compleating the Collection; and in this respect, if it appear that I have not been altogether negligent, I shall hope to be allowed the merit, which is all I claim, of having furnished to the Public an elegant and polite Amusement. Little more need be added, than to return my thanks to several ingenious friends, who have obligingly contributed to this Entertainment. If the reader should happen to find, what I hope he seldom will, any pieces which he may think not worthy of having been insert'd; as it would ill become me to attribute his dislike of them to his own want of Taste, so I am too conscious of my own deficiencies not to allow him to impute the intention of them to mine.

R. DODSLEY.
Index to the Sixth Volume

Hymn to the Naiads, 1746 — Page 1

Ode to the Right Hon. Francis Earl of Huntingdon, 1747 — 25

Ode to the Right Rev. Benjamin Lord Bishop of Winchester — 38

Inscriptions, — 43

1. For a Grotto — ib.

2. For a Statue of Chaucer at Woodstock — 44

3. — — — — — — — ib.

4. — — — — — — — — — 46

5. — — — — — — — — — 47

6. For a Column at Runnymede — — — ib.

Ode — 48

Ode to the Tiber — — — 50

Elegies, — — — 54

1. Written at the Covent of Haut Villers in Champagne, 1754 — ib.

2. On the Mausoleum of Augustus. To the Right Hon. George Bussy Villiers, Viscount Villiers, written at Rome, 1756 — 57

3. To the Right Hon. George Simon Harcourt, Viscount Newnham, written at Rome 1756 — 60

4. To an Officer, written at Rome, 1756 — 63

5. To a Friend sick, written at Rome, 1756 — 67

6. To another Friend, written at Rome, 1756 — 69

Vol. VI. Bb The
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>378</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>The Lyric Muse to Mr. Mason</td>
<td>71</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>On the Immortality of the Soul, in two Books</td>
<td>60. 74</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Arkwright: An Ode to Contentment</td>
<td>105</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Grotto: An Ode to Silence</td>
<td>111</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Picture of Human Life</td>
<td>114</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Dropical Man</td>
<td>139</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Paradise regained</td>
<td>140</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To the Right Hon. Sir Robert Walpole</td>
<td>143</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To a Lady on a Landscape of her Drawing</td>
<td>149</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ode to Cupid on Valentine's Day</td>
<td>151</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To the Hon. and Rev. Frederick Cornwallis</td>
<td>153</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To the Rev. Thomas Taylor, D.D.</td>
<td>157</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Vacation</td>
<td>163</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To a Lady very handsome, but too fond of Dress</td>
<td>170</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Anacreon. Ode III.</td>
<td>172</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>An Imitation of Horace, Book III. Ode 2.</td>
<td>173</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A Reply to a Copy of Verses made in Imitation of Book III.</td>
<td>175</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Inscriptio on a Grotto of Shells at Crux-Easton, the Work of Nine young Ladies</td>
<td>177</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Verses occasioned by seeing a Grotto built by Nine Sisters</td>
<td>ib.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>An Excuse for Inconstancy, 1737</td>
<td>178</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To Venus. A Rant, 1732</td>
<td>179</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Power of Music. A Song. Imitated from the Spanish</td>
<td>181</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Letter from Smyrna to his Sisters at Crux-Easton 1733</td>
<td>182</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Part of a Letter to my Sisters at Crux-Easton, written from Cairo in Egypt, August, 1734</td>
<td>188</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Letter from Marielles to my Sisters at Crux-Easton, May, 1735</td>
<td>190</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The History of Porfenna, King of Russia, in two Books</td>
<td>194</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Ever-Green</td>
<td>227</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ansiver</td>
<td>228</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Candour</td>
<td>229</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lyfander to Chloe</td>
<td>230</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chloe to Lyfander</td>
<td>231</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tq</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
To the Memory of an agreeable Lady buried in Marriage to a Person undeserving her

An Elegy, written on Valentine Morning

The Dowager

Ode to the Hon. ****

To Miss ****

Lady Mary Wortley Montague, to Sir William Yonge

Sir William Yonge’s Answer

Miss Soper’s Answer to a Lady, who invited her to retire into a monastic Life at St. Cross, near Winchester

Repentance

A Song

Cynthia, an Elegiac Poem

Dialogue to Chlorinda

To Chlorinda

The Fable of Ixion. To Chlorinda

A Tale. To Chlorinda

Ode on Lyric Poetry

Arion, an Ode

Horace, Book II. Ode 2.

A Panegyric on Ale

Ode to the Genius of Italy, occasioned by the Earl of Cork’s going Abroad

To Charles Pratt, Esq.

Epistle from the late Lord Viscount Bolingbroke to Miss Lucy Atkins

The Cheat’s Apology

Song

Another

To Mr. Grenville on his intended Resignation

To Mr. Garrick, on his erecting a Temple and Statue to Shakspere

On the Birth-Day of Shakspere. A Cento: Taken from his Works

An Ode to Sculpture

True Resignation

Epistle
[380]

Epistle from the King of Prussia to M. Voltaire — 305
Translated into English — 307
On seeing Archbishop Williams's Monument in Carnarvonshire — 309
Extrepore Verses upon a Trial of Skill between the two great Masters of Defence, Messieurs Figg and Sutton — 312
A Letter from Cambridge to a Young Gentleman at Eaton — 316
The Indolent — 321
The Song of Simeon paraphrased — 322
On the Invention of Letters — 323
The Answer — ib.
On Wit — 324
On a Spider — ib.
The Play-thing chang'd — 326
The Fable of Jotham: To the Borough-Hunters — 327
An Elegy written in an empty Assembly-Room — 330
The Faker: A Tale — 334
To Mr. Whitehead, on his being made Poet Laureat — 337
Verses on the Prospect of planting Arts and Learning in America — 339
To Mr. Maffen — 341
Ode. To Independency — 344
Ode. On Melancholy. To a Friend — 348
Ode — 351
Ode — 363
Preludes — 370

THE END.